Mr. Chope: The lane reductions on the westbound carriageway of the M40 near junction 5 between 18 and 22 June were to enable the Department's agents—Buckinghamshire county council—to carry out safety fence maintenance.

The restrictions were during the off-peak period only, and setting up advance signing would not have been practicable. It is not the Department's policy to divert or encourage motorway traffic on to unsuitable local roads.

The M40 is presently being widened between junctions 4 and 5. This work will continue until autumn 1991. Extensive publicity has been given to this contract. The motorway may be restricted to single-lane running in each direction from 10.00 to 16.00 and 20.00 to 06.00 Monday to Thursday and 10.00 to 15.00 on Fridays. Two-lane running is maintained between 10.00 and 15.00 on Saturdays and Sundays.

I am sending my hon. Friend a copy of the publicity leaflet.

Aviation

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will formalise the agreement with the United States Government giving additional flights between the United Kingdom and the United States of Amercia; when he expects to announce the two new routes between United Kingdom regional airports and United States airports arising from this agreement; and how many routes now exist between the United States and United Kingdom airports, broken down by United Kingdom airports.

Mr. McLoughlin: Administrative arrangements are expected to be completed within the next few days to bring the new agreement into immediate effect. Formal processes will be concluded at a convenient time thereafter. One of the new route opportunities created for the United States will be used to provide cover for the existing service by American Airlines between Chicago and Manchester, which at present operates informally. The two other new route opportunities available to the United States and the two new opportunities for the United Kingdom will be allocated by the authorities of the two countries following applications by interested carriers. This process depends upon decisions initially to be made by carriers according to their commercial judgment. No timetable therefore applies.

Existing routes between the United Kingdom and the continental United States are as follows. Services are not operated on all routes.

Between London and Prestwick/Glasgow and Anchorage, Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Dallas/Fort Worth, Denver, Detroit, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, Minneapolis/St. Paul, Newark, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, San Francisco, Seattle, Cincinnati, Washington/Baltimore, Charlotte, Tampa, San Diego and Orlando.

Between Manchester and Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas/Fort Worth, Detroit, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, Pittsburgh, New York, Philadelphia, Denver, San Francisco, Seattle, Washington/Baltimore, Tampa, San Diego, Newark and Orlando.

The new agreement will allow two services by the United States, in addition to the existing Chicago—Manchester service, and two by the United Kingdom using any regional airport, including Manchester.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reports he has received from the embassy in Washington concerning the anti-competitive nature of hub and spoke operations by airlines in the United States of America.

Mr. McLoughlin: My Department regularly receives from the British embassy in Washington material concerning airline operations in the United States.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contacts his officials have had with United States Department of Justice officials investigating hub and spoke operations by airlines in the United States of America.

Mr. McLoughlin: None.

Road Closures

Mr. Andrew Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department will publish a list of all major motorway and trunk road lane closures in England, Scotland and Wales expected over the coming seven-week holiday period; and what measures his Department is taking to publish these closures and to ensure that holiday traffic is suitably directed towards other routes.

Mr. Chope: The Department issues a fortnightly bulletin listing lane closures on motorways which also includes certain all-purpose trunk roads. This information is disseminated by national and local media, including Ceefax and Oracle, and the motoring associations. It is also displayed on TV monitors at some motorway service areas. I am sending my hon. Friend a copy of the latest bulletin.

Every effort is made to avoid maintenance work on routes used by holiday traffic in peak periods. Where this is unavoidable, suitable diversions are signed when available. Where practicable, closures are lifted during bank holidays.

I understand that similar procedures are operated in Scotland and Wales.

Radioactive Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the volume of radioactive waste of (a) high, (b) intermediate and (c) low level transported by sea transport to and from the United Kingdom in each year since 1983.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Department does not collect data of the kind requested.

Road Construction

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has any plans to undertake an environmental impact assessment of all current and planned road construction programmes.

Mr. Chope: Protecting and enhancing the environment is a major consideration in planning roads. My Department carries out a full environmental assessment for all schemes in the national trunk road programme costing over £1 million.

British Rail (Fire Incident)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set up a full public inquiry into the response by British Rail to an incident involving an alleged fire in a carriage attached to the 13.44 Haywards Heath to Manchester train, No. IC 5845 on 15 July; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: There is no through train between Haywards Heath and Manchester on Sundays. On 15 July, coach No. IC 5845 was used on two services, the 18.00 Manchester to Birmingham New Street and the 21.37 Birmingham New Street to Manchester Piccadilly. There is no trace of a fire occurring on that coach. I understand that BR London midland and southern regions have no record of any fires occurring on InterCity trains on Sunday 15 July. If the hon. Member can provide any further details, I will make further inquiries.

Bypasses

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will announce the appointment of consultants for the Scarisbrick, Penfold, Ormskirk and Rufford bypasses.

Mr. Chope: I expect to announce the appointment in the autumn and I shall write to my hon. Friend with the information.

Merchant Shipping

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the decrease in United Kingdom merchant shipping for 1989; and what were the comparable figures for West Germany, Sweden and Norway.

Mr. McLoughlin: The figures requested are shown in the table:

Gross tonnage of trading vessels over 100 gross registered tonnes million

	1 January 1989	1 January 1990	[3]Difference
United Kingdom	4·7	4·3	−0·4
British fleet[1]	20·7	19·3	−1·4
West Germany	3·6	3·7	+0·1
Sweden	2·0	2·3	+0·3
Norway[2]	12·8	16·5	+3·7

[1] Includes the Crown Dependencies and Dependent Territories.
[2] Includes Norway's international register.
[3] Change in definition of "trading" means the figures are not strictly comparable between years.

Oil Tankers

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will consider introducing restrictions on oil tanker movements in the Minch in order to reduce damage caused to the marine environment by oil spillages.

Mr. McLoughlin: Tankers cannot be banned from the Minch: their captains must always have the option of using the Minch route in adverse weather conditions, rather than the rougher deep water route (DWR) to the west of the Outer Hebrides.

We have considered the possibility of mandatory restrictions very carefully. The only restriction that could be imposed under international law is a traffic separation scheme. There is no evidence that this is needed, as tankers appear to use the existing recommended routes. All vessels would be obliged to use it in accordance with the collision regulations, and this would seriously inhibit the activities of fishing vessels. A scheme might also encourage tankers to use the Minch route. We have therefore concluded that restrictions are impracticable. My Department already urges shipowners and masters to use the outer routes when practicable, and will raise the use of the DWR at the International Maritime Organisation.

British Rail (Finance)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list for the last 10 years the total figure provided in public service obligation grant to British Rail by the Government, the amount and proportion of that figure spent in Wales each year, and the amount and proportion of that figure spent in South Glamorgan and Mid Glamorgan each year;

(2) how much money is to be made available to British Rail in respect of (a) Wales and (b) South Glamorgan and Mid Glamorgan during 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93; what percentage of the United Kingdom total each figure represents; and what assessment he has made of the expected economic, social and environmental impact of this expenditure.

Mr. Freeman: The public service obligation grant (PSO) is paid in order to ensure the provision of essential local British Rail passenger services. It currently covers the gap between costs and revenues for BR's provincial and network SouthEast sectors. InterCity has not received grants since 1987-88. PSO grant is paid as a global sum and is not allocated to particular areas. Figures for PSO grant in respect of each of the years are given in the table.

Year	Cash £ million	1990-91 Prices £ million
1981	749	1,230
1982	817	1,258
1983	854	1,250
1984-85[1]	853	1,190
1985-86	820	1,085
1986-87	690	883
1987-88	775	942
1988-89[2]	456	517
1989-90[2]	488	520
1990-91[3]	474	474
1991-92[4]	401	383
1992-93[4]	382	352

Notes:
[1] 1984-85 was a 15-month year. The figure given is the 12-month equivalent.
[2] The 1988-89 nd 1989-90 figures have yet to be finalised.
[3] Estimate, subject to review.
[4] Estimates.

Mr. Bevan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about British Rail's external financing limit for 1990-91.

Mr. Parkinson: I am pleased to announce a revised external financing limit (EFL) of £700 million for British Rail for 1990-91. This represents an increase of just over £100 million, after adjustments for the 1989-90 outturn and for other external receipts. The revised EFL includes full provision for the expenditure that BR plans to incur in the current year on safety measures, particularly those arising from the Hidden report on the Clapham Junction accident, and will also help BR to maintain its large investment programme. The net increase of £54 million above the original EFL published in the 1989 autumn statement will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

CCAB Limited

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, further to the reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby, of 24 April, Official Report, column 115, he will make a statement on the details and conclusions of his Department's review of the accounts of CCAB Ltd.

Mr. Redwood: Having reviewed the accounts of CCAB Ltd. for the year ended 31 December 1988 in the light of the hon. Member's query in his letter of 16 November 1989, we saw no grounds for challenging the directors' judgment that the accounts gave a true and fair view.

Cassettes (Imports)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list, by country of manufacture, the amount of video and audio cassettes imported into the United Kingdom for each year since 1979; and if he will list the amount of video and audio cassettes manufactured in the United Kingdom for the same period.

Mr. Sainsbury: Information is not available in the form requested.

Import Restrictions

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 6 July, if he will list the 11 complaints made by Her Majesty's Government during 1989, indicating in each case the nature of the complaint and the country against which it was made.

Mr. Redwood: It is not the Government's practice to give details of particular complaints referred to the Commission. It could be damaging to the interests of the United Kingdom if allegations against other member states that were as yet unproven were made public. United Kingdom companies might be discouraged from pursuing complaints if they know that they were not to be treated in confidence. Should a complaint lead to the initiation of formal proceedings by the Commission, these are made public.

Of the 11 complaints made in 1989, one has resulted in such formal proceedings; in relation to Denmark's revision of social security contributions discriminating against imports the Commission has issued a "reasoned opinion".

Two further cases have been the subject of letters requesting the member state's observations under article 169. Four cases have resulted in positive action by member states, without formal procedures being required. Four cases are still being considered by the Commission.

Political Donations

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ask the Official Receiver to investigate allegations of political donations by British and Commonwealth prior to its declaring that it had within the provisions of the Insolvency Acts.

Mr. Redwood: The Official Receiver can investigate only companies that are in compulsory liquidation. The affairs of British and Commonwealth are a matter for its administrators appointed under the Insolvency Act 1986.

Telephone Chat Lines

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 27 November 1989, Official Report, column 109, to the hon. Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Michael), whether he has any plans to take action to reduce the use of telephone chat lines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This is a matter for the Director General of Telecommunications. He has taken firm action to control telephone chat lines and other premium-rate telephone services. In December 1989, he introduced separate codes of practice governing the operation of multiline chatline services and one-to-one services. He has also recently announced that from 1 August he is to withdraw recognition of the code of practice that governs one-to-one services. Such services will not be able to operate from that date unless the director general recognises a new code of practice.

Regulations

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Billericay on 3 July, Official Report, column 360, what was (a) the estimated cost to business, for each year, of complying with the regulations and (b) the number of entirely new regulations introduced in 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Redwood: In line with published arrangements, not all regulations made over the three years in question were the subject of compliance cost assessments. I am therefore unable to provide the comprehensive estimates requested.

The numbers of entirely new regulations—excluding amending, revoking and consolidating instruments and commencement orders for Acts—introduced in each of the years 1987-89 were as follows:

	Number

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many regulations have been abolished in the last three years (a) in the normal course of events and (b) in response to his Department's deregulation units recommendations.

Mr. Redwood: In 1987, 682 statutory instruments, including regulations, rules and orders, were abolished. Information for 1988 and 1989 is not yet available. During the three-year period, the deregulation unit played a part in the abolition of a number of regulations, but where its recommendation was the determining factor cannot readily be established.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet his federal German counterpart; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Lilley: I plan to meet my federal German counterpart in September in Berlin to discuss a number of matters including the possibility of co-operation between British and West German firms in the GDR and other eastern European markets.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the President of the European Commission; and what matters he intends to discuss.

Mr. Lilley: I intend to make early contact with those European Commissioners whose portfolios are relevant to my Department.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet his Japanese counterpart; and what matters he expects to discuss.

Mr. Lilley: I expect to meet Mr. Muto, the Japanese Minister of International Trade and Industry, in London on 3 September and to discuss with him a range of current bilateral and multilateral trade issues.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the European Commissioner for trade matters; and what he expects to discuss.

Mr. Lilley: I plan to make early contact with Commissioner Adriessen to discuss a range of issues.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet his counterpart from the German Democratic Republic; and what matters he intends to discuss.

Mr. Lilley: I have no immediate plans to meet my East German counterpart. The Under-Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs, my hon. Friend the Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood), visited the German Democratic Republic last month with a group of British business men. He had extensive discussions with GDR Ministers, including those for Economy and Trade, about the effects of unification and the opportunities for British companies.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet his French counterpart; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Lilley: I hope to meet my French opposite number at an early opportunity to discuss a broad range of issues.

US Competition Policy

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements exist to keep his Department informed of regulatory and competition policy developments in the United States of America.

Mr. Redwood: My Department maintains frequent formal and informal bilateral contacts with United States regulators. In the financial services area these contacts, together with participation in the International Organisation of Securities Commissions—of which both the United Kingdom and the United States are members—provide regular access to information on regulatory developments in the United States. My Department is informed of developments in the competition policy regimes of the United States through participation in the OECD committee on competition law and policy and through regular diplomatic contact with the United States Administration.

Post Office (External Financing Limit)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he intends to make any change in the Post Office's external financing limit for 1990-91.

Mr. Lilley: The Post Office's external financing limit for 1990-91 currently stands at £38 million, as set out in the public expenditure White Paper. I am now setting a revised limit of zero to reflect the final outcome of the Girobank sale.

ECGD Insurance Services

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, further to the replies of 18 December 1989, Official Report, columns 23-24, and 19 July, Official Report, column 677, what progress has been made on privatising the Export Credits Guarantee Department's insurance services.

Mr. Lilley: I have decided that the short-term business of ECGD should be sold by means of a competition among prospective trade purchasers and consortia.

Subject to securing the necessary legislative authority, the Government's intention remains to vest the business of insurance services in a Government-owned company in April 1991 and to complete the sale as soon as possible thereafter.

Samuel Montagu and Co. Limited are issuing by the end of this month, on my behalf, a preliminary information memorandum and prequalification questionnaire to bona fide investors who have indicated an interest in purchasing the company. Copies of the information memorandum and questionnaire will be sent to other interested bona fide investors on application to Samuel Montagu. Responses to the questionnaire must be submitted to Samuel Montagu by midday on 28 September 1990. In the light of responses received, the next stage in the process will be to dispatch an invitation to tender to shortlisted bidders in due course. Normal competition legislation and procedures will apply to the sale process.

Insurance Companies

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many representations he has received concerning commissions paid by insurance companies to other consultants;

(2) what plans the Government have to review laws governing the payment of commissions to consultants by insurance companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have received 31 letters commenting on the report by the Director General of Fair Trading on disclosure of information about life insurance products and commissions paid to independent financial advisers. This report was published on 11 April this year and concluded that certain of the existing rules regarding disclosure of commission payments by insurance intermediaries were anti-competitive. The Department circulated a letter on 21 June seeking views of all interested parties by the end of September. The Secretary of State will take account of the responses to this letter, and of the other representations which have been made to him, before reaching a decision.

Trade Balance

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest estimate of the United Kingdom trade balance with South Africa, the Philippines and South Korea, respectively.

Mr. Sainsbury: Information on the value of United Kingdom visible imports from and exports to individual countries is summarised in table Ib of Business Monitor MM20, "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom", a copy of which is kept in the Library.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. Lilley: The terms of appointment of my predecessor's special advisers came to an end automatically on his resignation. No new appointments have yet been made. No public relations advisers are employed in this Department.

Shareholders' Rights

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will bring forward an amendment to the Companies Acts to allow shareholders to speak against a resolution at an annual general meeting or extraordinary general meeting asked to approve a rights issue.

Mr. Redwood: No. Such an amendment is unnecessary, as a shareholder appearing on the register of members already has the right to speak at a general meeting against a resolution proposing a rights issue, subject to the provisions of the normal rules governing the conduct of meetings.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the percentage increase to date in (a) the volume of United Kingdom imports of (i) semi-manufactures less erratics and (ii) finished intermediates and (b) in the volume of United Kingdom manufacturing less food, drink and tobacco since 1970 and 1979.

Mr. Sainsbury: The information on manufacturing output cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost. The other information can be found on the CSO database, which is accessible through the House of Commons Library.

Film Industry

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what decisions he has come to on (a) the size, (b) the composition, (c) the terms of reference and (d) date of completion of the film production working parties established after the Prime Minister's film seminar.

Mr. Redwood: We are consulting with the industry on these matters and we hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Consumer Goods

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current estimate of direct and indirect European Community content of manufactured consumer goods sold through the retail trade in England and Wales.

Mr. Sainsbury: Information on which to base an estimate is not available.

British Telecom

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many shares Her Majesty's Government hold in British Telecom; what was the last departmental valuation of that holding; and what plans he has to sell all or part of the holding.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 25 July 1990]: Her Majesty's Government currently hold one special rights redeemable preference share and 2,941 million ordinary shares in British Telecommunications plc. The ordinary shareholding has a value of some £8,600 million at current market prices.

It is Her Majesty's Government's policy to sell residual shareholdings in privatised companies as the circumstances of the companies and market conditions permit.

British Telecom Agreement (Vietnam)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what part his Department played in the cancellation of the recent £42 million British Telecom agreement with Vietnam;

(2) what representations were received from the American Government regarding British Telecom's £42 million agreement with Vietnam which was recently cancelled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 23 July 1990]: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment on individual licensing matters.

Environment Exhibition, Czechoslovakia

Ms. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he intends to meet representatives of British industry to discuss participation in the international environmental exhibition and conference to be held at Brno, Czechoslovakia in October.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 24 July 1990]: I have no plans for such a meeting.

The existence of the exhibition has been widely publicised and it is up to the companies in the industry to decide on participation in the light of their own commercial judgment.

Textiles and Clothing

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the level of production in the textiles and clothing industries in the most recent three months for which figures are available, and for the same three months one year previously.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 24 July 1990]: The latest available figure, in terms of United Kingdom manufacturers' sales by value, is £3,334 million in the second quarter of 1989, compared with £3,171 million in the same period of 1988.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent contacts he has had with the textiles and clothing industries.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 24 July 1990]: My right hon. Friend's predecessor met representatives of the textiles and clothing industries on 12 June and my right hon. and noble Friend Lord Trefgarne then Minister for Trade visited Edinburgh on 29 June to meet hon. Members and representatives of the Scottish knitwear and woollen industry. He also visited textile and clothing businesses in Yorkshire on 27 April and Lancashire on 4 May. Progress in the Uruguay round of the GATT multilateral trade negotiations was discussed on all these occasions.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the achievements of (a) his policies and (b) his Department in helping small businesses over the last 12 months as against the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 24 July 1990]: My Department continues to contribute to the Government's policy of creating a climate in which smaller businesses flourish.

The enterprise initiative was launched in January 1988 to encourage the process of wealth creation through individual initiative and enterprise. It brings together a range of services provided by DTI for industry and commerce, many of which are concerned with improving the competitiveness of smaller firms. The six consultancy initiatives, for example, offer financial support to small and medium-sized firms for between five and 15 days of consultancy in the following key management areas: design; marketing; manufacturing systems; quality; business planning; and financial and information systems. By 30 June 1990, 54,700 applications had been received, 49,000 initial business reviews undertaken and 23,700 assisted consultancy projects completed or under way.

Regional enterprise grants are aimed specifically at small businesses in the development areas and South Yorkshire employing fewer than 25 people and are designed to support their investment and innovation projects. In 1989-90, 2,123 applications were received and 1,540 offers were made with a total value of £12·0 million.

The small firms merit award for research and technology is an annual competition which provides cash awards to firms with fewer than 50 employees in order to bring forward innovative technological projects of particular promise. In 1989, 150 awards came from 828 applications.

Refinements over the last year of the services offered to exporters will assist smaller companies realise their export potential. The active exporting scheme operated by chambers of commerce with DTI pump-priming funding is aimed at companies with a turnover of £1 million to £10 million per annum. In their first full-year, the 32 export development advisers gave advice to more than 2,600 small and medium-sized companies, of which about 1,000 are now exporting, or seriously considering exporting.

In addition, help with smaller firms is a high priority of my Department's single market campaign. The range of single market material includes an action guide specifically designed for smaller firms, to whom over 286,000 copies of the action guide have been dispatched direct, in addition to the more than 400,000 copies originally mailed or included in publications covering the small firms sector. The current phase of the campaign draws attention to the many sources of expertise, such as trade associations and chambers of commerce, that can provide relevant information and advice to help smaller firms prepare for the single market.

It is also worth noting that, in 1989-90, the inner cities initiative task forces supported projects that are expected to give support to 3,584 new and existing businesses, the majority of which are small ones.

The Government's deregulation initiative, co-ordinated by the DTI, takes particular account of the problems with regulation faced by small firms.

It would be prohibitively expensive to set out all the performance measures that are collected as part of the Department's wide-ranging and professional evaluation programme, which is designed to ensure that the Department's programmes secure good value for money.

Rainham Marshes

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the composition and terms of reference of the Hogg committee on Rainham Marshes.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 25 July 1990]: There is no formal ministerial "committee" chaired by me in relation to this project. Officials in a number of Departments have been in consultation with MCA Inc. These discussions have been co-ordinated by DTI officials, reporting to me.

Monopolies and Mergers Commission

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a list of all Monopolies and Mergers Commission reports into nationalised and privatised enterprises, indicating also subsequent Government decisions.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Sports Footwear

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list, by country of manufacture, the amount of sports footwear, imported into the United Kingdom for each year since 1979; and if he will list the amount of sports footwear manufactured in the United Kingdom over the same period.

Mr. Sainsbury: Figures for total United Kingdom imports and manufacturers' sales are contained in the table. United Kingdom imports by country are available only at disproportionate cost.

Total sports footwear

Year	Manufacturers' sales		Imports
	Million pairs	Million £	Million pairs	Million £
1979	6·9	29·3	22·2	47·7
1980	5·9	28·1	20·7	46·7
1981	6·2	29·1	30·1	71·3
1982	6·2	28·8	30·9	82·2
1983	5·9	28·7	30·8	100·0
1984	4·5	26·0	36·5	126·8
1985	5·1	31·4	38·3	156·3
1986	4·8	31·7	37·6	151·5
1987	5·2	32·2	47·0	185·8
1988	9·1	50·2	38·4	153·8
1989	8·6	48·9	33·9	159·0

Note:
Manufacturers' sales relate to establishments with a minimum employment of 25, for 1979-83 data; and a minimum employment of 50, for 1984 onwards.

Military Equipment (Exports)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment is made by his Department of the legislation of European and north American Governments that regulates the export of lethal and non-lethal military equipment.

Mr. Sainsbury: This is a matter for the Governments of the countries concerned. Our assessment indicates that NATO allies have comparable legislation to control exports for strategic reasons.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what legislation regulates the provision of military training by British companies to foreign military forces.

Mr. Sainsbury: This is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made by his Department of alleged breaches of legislation that regulates the export of lethal and non-lethal military equipment by European and north American companies.

Mr. Sainsbury: This is a matter for the Governments of the countries concerned.

Crops (Alternative Uses)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will consider introducing incentives for industries who will seek to develop processes for using home-grown crops for industrial purposes as substitutes for imported wood pulp and similar materials;

(2) what steps have been taken to encourage industry to make use of crops for purposes other than food.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Within the Link initiative a new programme entitled "Crops for Industrial Use" has recently been announced. It involves five sponsors—the agricultural and food research council, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland, the science and engineering research council and the Department of Trade and Industry—with the agricultural and food research council taking the lead. It is timely to encourage industry to examine the potential for the such use of crops and the programme is an opportunity to participate in the underpinning research necessary, to inform commercial judgments on exploitation.

Recycling

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met representatives of retail and distributive industries to discuss recycling of materials through the establishment of bottle, can and paper banks.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not yet had the opportunity to meet those concerned with the recycling of material collected through bank schemes. My Department maintains regular contact with those involved. I met representatives of the recycling industries in the House of Commons on 11 July.

Competition Policy

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on competition policy.

Mr. Lilley: In deciding whether to refer merger situations to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, I shall in future pay particularly close attention to the degree of state control, if any, of the acquiring company.

One of the Government's fundamental policy objectives has been to allow market forces to determine the most efficient allocation of resources in the interests of industry, commerce and the consumer. We have taken many important steps towards this objective over the last decade including an extensive programme of privatisation, deregulation, and the vigorous application of competition policy. This objective could be undermined by nationalisation by the back door. State-controlled companies are not subject to the same disciplines as those in the private sector. They tend to have the assurance of Government backing for their business activities and consequently do not compete on even terms with private sector companies which operate under the threat of financial failure. Their managements may be motivated to make non-commercial decisions. They may not deploy resources efficiently; and an increase in the resources they manage may well reduce competitive forces. It is important that the MMC should have the chance to consider in detail mergers involving state-controlled companies.

All bids by state-controlled companies, whether United Kingdom or foreign, will be treated evenhandedly. I shall of course continue to exercise my discretion in deciding whether to refer any particular case to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, after receiving advice from the Director General of Fair Trading. But among the factors to which I shall give particularly close attention will be the degree of state control, if any, of the acquiring company.

The Monopolies and Mergers Commission will, of course, continue to weigh up each case on its merits. Referring a merger to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission does not prejudge whether it may be expected to operate against the public interest.

Microwave Television

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what conclusions he has reached on the allocation of frequencies for single-point to multipoint microwave television services; and whether his announcement of 18 June of a review of spectrum usage calls into question the allocation of frequencies above 40 GHz to the multipoint video distribution system.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

British Companies (Overseas Regulation)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to what extent the activities abroad of British companies are regulated by his Department.

Mr. Salisbury: I will write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Exports to Iraq

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes in the procedure of his Department were instituted as a consequence of the Iraq supergun incident at Easter.

Mr. Salisbury: The administration of export licensing by my Department was thoroughly reviewed in 1988 and the need to ensure that the controls remain effective, and are efficiently administered, is kept under continuous study.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what information he received from the United States authorities regarding the nature of exports to Iraq from Consarc Engineering of Bellshill, Lanarkshire; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if Consarc Engineering of Bellshill, Lanarkshire had fully complied with the procedure of his Department in regard to the export of vacuum furnaces to Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Salisbury: It is not the practice to disclose information concerning individual export licensing matters.

Import Penetration

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry further to his answer of 18 July, Official Report, column 645, concerning import penetration from the European Economic Community, if he will provide a breakdown of the figures given into the categories used to provide the information given in his answer of 29 July 1988, Official Report, column 646.

Mr. Salisbury: Estimates for 1979 and 1988 are given in the table. Figures for 1970 are not readily available.

Association of British Chambers of Commerce

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to arrange the meeting with Mr. Miles Middleton of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce planned by his predecessor.

Mr. Salisbury: My right hon. Friend intends to rearrange the meeting planned by his predecessor, but a convenient date has not yet been found.

Postal Orders

Sir John Stradling Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will issue a directive to the Post Office to reduce the charges made for postal orders.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The level of charges levied for postal orders is an operational matter for the Post Office. I have no plans to take powers to reduce such charges.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) in assessing the public sector costs of maintaining the Export Credits Guarantee Department's project group operations, what account is taken of spin-off benefits derived from overseas projects, employment and contributions to tax revenues;

(2) what provision will be made in Export Credits Guarantee Department credit cover in the future for high-risk markets; and at what rates of premium.

Mr. Salisbury [holding answer 20 July 1990]: The cost and availability of ECGD cover for project exports will be determined under the new portfolio management system. The PMS is intended to inform decisions on project exports so that the national interest reasons for giving support including spin-off benefits are properly weighed against the financial risks to ECGD and the taxpayer. The Government still have a number of decisions to take before PMS is operational.

Leather Industry

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he will take in order to protect the United Kingdom leather industry from unfair trading practices in the form of (a) export embargoes of raw hides and skins and (b) cash compensation schemes to promote exports.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 24 July 1990]: Export embargoes and export subsidies affecting the United Kingdom leather industry were among the non-tariff trade measures that the Government notified to the EC Commission as priority United Kingdom targets for elimination or reduction in the GATT Uruguay round negotiations on non-tariff measures. The Commission, which negotiates on behalf of the Community, recently informed the GATT secretariat and the countries concerned of the Community's desire to see these measures removed. In the autumn the EC will be holding a series of bilateral negotiations on market access problems.

EC Regulations

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his reply of 16 July, Official Report, column 385, to the hon. Member for Hastings and Rye (Mr. Warren), if he will publish a table indicating the date on which the various Council regulations that cover the circumstances in which EEC inspectors are permitted to enter the premises of United Kingdom companies, referred to in that answer, were considered by the House.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 19 July 1990]: Regulations 17(1962) and (EEC) 1017/68 were both adopted before we joined the Community. Following the recommendation of the Select Committee on European Legislation, the other regulations were debated in the House as follows:

Regulation (EEC) 4056/86 on 11 March 1986
Regulation (EEC) 3975/87 on 9 December 1986
Regulation (EEC) 4253/88 on 21 December 1988
Regulation (EEC) 4064/89 on 17 May 1989

Inward Investment

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total amount of all inward investment into Britain in the years 1987-88 and 1988-89; and if he will provide a breakdown of these figures, region by region.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 25 July 1990]: These figures are not readily available on a financial year basis. However, the table gives details of the number of inward investments decisions known to the Invest in Britain Bureau for the calendar years 1987 to 1989 and the associated jobs for the United Kingdom by region. Comparable information on the total level of financial investment by inward investors is not available.

The decision recorded include the establishment of a new business, expansion or acquisition of an existing business and involvement in joint venture. The figures are based on information provided by the companies themselves at the time of the investment and do not take into account subsequent developments.

HEALTH

Nurses' Pay (London)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average pay of a newly qualified nurse in London at the present time.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The gross pay of a newly qualified nurse appointed to a position on the minimum of salary scale grade D and working in the centre of London, is £11,173 in respect of basic salary and London allowance. On average, a nurse on grade D will receive in addition approximately 18 per cent. in respect of leads and allowances.

NHS Costs

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each regional and district health authority for the most recent year for which information is available (i) the average cost per patient per day and (ii) the average cost per consultant/general practitioner episode for women using (a) consultant obstetric beds and (b) general practitioner maternity beds.

Mr. Dorrell: Tables, showing preliminary 1988-89 district health authority data for the specialties requested, have been placed in the Library. Regional health authorities as such do not directly provide these services.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will monitor the health of the children of service men who were involved in the nuclear weapons testing at Christmas Island.

Mr. Dorrell: Following recommendations from the independent expert Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE), the Government are currently considering a number of proposals for further studies of the children of individuals who have received radiation doses from occupational exposure. In particular, urgent consideration is being given to a proposal to link the data held on the national registry of radiation workers at the National Radiological Protection Board with those on the national registry of childhood tumours. A study involving test veterans' children would be considered only if it proves possible to proceed with the main worker-study proposal. In addition, any such research proposal would need to be considered first by the research co-ordinating committee established following a recent recommendation from COMARE.

Medway Health District

242. Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the figures for expenditure by the South East Thames regional health authority for 1989-90 and 1979-80, indicating what this represents after allowing for inflation; and if he will publish similar figures for the Medway health district.

Mr. Dorrell: The annual accounts of the South East Thames regional health authority together with those of the district (formerly area) health authorities comprising the South East Thames health region record total revenue expenditure of £471·2 million (cash) for 1979-80 and £1,039·3 million (cash) for 1988-89 (the latest year available). These figures represent an increase in real terms of 17·2 per cent. measured at 1988-89 prices.

Prior to 1 April 1982 the Medway district formed part of a larger area health authority and in such cases district-based figures were not collected centrally. However, the separate annual accounts of the Medway health authority show total revenue expenditure of £36·4 million (cash) for 1982-83 and £61·1 million (cash) for 1988-89 representing an increase in real terms of 24 per cent. (measured at 1988-89 prices) compared with 9·8 per cent. for the region as a whole over the same period.

Nursing Staff

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the Royal College of Nursing to discuss recruitment and levels of nursing staff.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We attach great importance to the need to recruit and retain sufficient numbers of nursing staff. A wide range of issues relating to this objective are discussed in the various meetings which Ministers and officials regularly hold with representatives of the Royal College of Nursing.

Among the many initiatives currently under way in this area are the national nurse recruitment advertising campaign, which has so far resulted in over 175,000 requests for information on nursing careers, and the Open college "Return to Nursing" initiative to be launched next month, for which the Department has provided funding of £100,000.

District Health Services

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which authorities will be responsible for the recruitment, administration and payment of the district nurse, health visitor and community midwifery services when the National Health Service and Community Care Act is fully implemented; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A working party is being set up under Catherine McLoughlin, the director of nursing on the national health service management executive, to produce guidance on the principles for future management arrangements for community nursing.

The working party will look at examples where effective and efficient services are being provided. It will be looking to find the best way of sharing examples of good practice more widely as managers and staff seek to meet the needs of their local populations.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the need for balloting to occur before hospitals become national health service self-governing trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received a number of letters from representative bodies and individuals on this subject. We have consistently made clear our view that ballots are not sensible. Applications for NHS trust status include complex and detailed proposals on service, management and personnel matters which cannot be reduced to a form which could be used as the basis for ballot when a unit applies for trust status. Regional health authorities will seek the views of all those with an interest as part of the statutory public consultation process.

Perioperative Deaths

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish a list of those hospitals that have not yet met in full the requirements of his circular containing the recommendations of the confidential report on perioperative deaths;

(2) if he is satisfied that all general hospitals have now met the standard required by his Department's recommendations contained in "Achieving A Balance" and the confidential report on perioperative deaths;

(3) if he will publish a list of those hospitals that have not yet met in full the requirements of his circular "Achieving A Balance."

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: "Achieving A Balance" is a 10-year plan for action which is monitored annually by a technical sub-group consisting of members of the profession, NHS management and the Department.

The most recent reports for the year 1988-89 show that regional health authorities are making steady progress in the implementation of the plan. Individual hospitals are not required to report directly to the Department on their progress.

Information is not held centrally on which hospitals have not yet met the recommendations made in the independent professional report "National Confidential Enquiry into Perioperative Deaths 1989," published June 1990.

Accident and Emergency Units

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of accident and emergency units in England and Wales; how many accident and emergency units have closed in the last three years; and how many accident and emergency units are scheduled for closure by the end of 1990.

Mr. Dorrell: On 31 March 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 511 national health service hospitals with accident and emergency departments in England. Information on the number of closures and proposed closures is not collected centrally.

Figures for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Condoms

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) airports and (b) seaports in the United Kingdom which are issuing free condoms and leaflets on holiday health hazards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: On 1 July 1990 the Health Education Authority began a campaign to alert young holidaymakers to the risks from casual sex while away from home and advocating the use of condoms as a means of reducing the risk of HIV infection. The campaign, which will run until 30 September 1990, consists of radio advertising, posters and supporting promotional material. Posters have been sited at all main airports in the United Kingdom—Heathrow, Gatwick, Stansted, Manchester, Glasgow, Luton, Belfast International, Edinburgh, Prestwick, Birmingham, Cardiff, East Midlands and Newcastle)—ferryports—(Dover and Folkestone)—holiday resorts in England and Wales and mainline stations serving the south coast. Tube advertising cards have also been placed on the Piccadilly Line, which serves Heathrow airport. The poster has been offered to regional and district health authorities and local health education units for use in local campaigns in support of the national initiative.

The booklet "The Travellers Guide to Health" a copy of which has been placed in the Library is also widely available.

Empty Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what are the annual management and maintenance costs of the empty residential properties owned by the national health service in (i) inner London and (ii) outer London for the latest period for which figures are available;

(2) what percentage of properties suitable for residential use and owned by the national health service in inner London is (i) currently empty awaiting sale, (ii) empty for more than six months and (iii) empty for more than one year;

(3) what percentage of empty properties owned by the national health service and suitable for residential use in outer London is (i) currently empty awaiting sale, (ii) empty for more than six months and (iii) empty for more than one year.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally.

School Health Service

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish (a) the study carried out by his Department into the school health service and (b) a manual of good practice guidance on the role of the school health service.

Mr. Dorrell: The work carried out by the Department was designed to identify current issues in the school health service in England as a first step in deciding whether national health service authorities needed any guidance on good practice and the role of the service. We are now discussing the findings with national health service general managers in England to determine the need for, and nature of, such a good practice guide, which would draw on the work done so far and take account of the changes introduced by the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990. We aim to complete these discussions during the autumn and will consult on any draft guidance.

Islington Health Authority

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the basis of his calculation that between 1982 and 1989 real-term spending by Islington health authority rose by 9·5 per cent. and that the initial cash allocation year is up by 9 per cent. on last year—Official Report, 6 July, column 1319.

Mr. Dorrell: The estimate of a 9·5 per cent. increase in real-term spending between 1982 and 1989 by Islington health authority is based on the increase in gross revenue expenditure between 1982-83 and 1988-89, as reported in the health authority's annual accounts, adjusted for the increase in gross domestic product for the same period.

The 9 per cent. initial cash increase represents the difference between initial cash allocations in 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Pollution, London

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has about the number of admissions in Greater London arising from respiratory problems caused by the recent hot weather.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally.

Maternity Services

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he intends developing an integrated information system for maternity care data; and if he will meet the Royal College of Midwives to discuss the subject;

(2) if he will make a statement about the collecting of information about the maternity services with regard to working paper 11, "Framework For Information Systems: The Next Steps".

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Working paper 11, and "Framework For Information Systems: The Next Steps", a copy of which is available in the Library, dealt with the process of preparing information systems within the national health service, to support the changes described in the White Paper "Working for Patients". This involved wide consultation with health authorities and professional and other organisations, including the royal colleges, about information systems for services, including maternity, which will be the subject of contracts after April 1991.

"The Next Steps" identified the need to develop patient-based information systems to allow the linkage of community, in-patient and out-patient episodes. This is particularly relevant for maternity services. The service is now addressing the need for integrated systems, with the support of the Department. The views of the Royal College of Midwives will be considered with others.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department of Health employs one special adviser, Mrs. Tessa Keswick. We do not employ any outside public relations advisers. Mrs. Keswick's salary is paid from departmental running costs and she is entitled to claim expenses at normal civil service rates. It is not our practice to publicise the salaries of individual advisers as they are individually negotiated and are therefore confidential.

Elderly People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on which statutory authorities, including the national health service, and to what extent, the responsibility for institutional care of elderly people who are heavily dependent on nursing care now lies.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Until the relevant sections of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 are brought into force, responsibility for continuing nursing care either in hospital or nursing homes rests with district health authorities. Income support is also available to help with the cost of care for people who have made their own arrangements with private and voluntary homes.

Prescribing Costs

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy in relation to the transfer of prescribing costs from hospitals to general practitioners in those circumstances where patients attend out-patient clinics (a) on a continuing basis and (b) following treatment.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Prescribing responsibility for an aspect of an out-patient's care lies with the doctor who has clinical responsibility for that aspect. If the hospital clinician is responsible for the particular element of a patient's care, it is his responsibility to prescribe; similarly if a GP has the clinical responsibility, he has the prescribing responsibility. The decision as to which doctor has clinical responsibility for any particular aspect of a patient's treatment at any given time is for the doctors concerned to take.

The question of costs for any particular drug should not be a factor in deciding where clinical and hence prescribing responsibility lies. There are no plans to change this policy.

Dangerous Drugs (Labelling)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he is planning any new initiative to improve the labelling of dangerous drugs.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 12 December 1989, at column 601.

The EC Commission submitted its proposal for a directive on the labelling of drugs and on package leaflets to the Council of Ministers in January. Negotiations at official level are now in progress.

Conceptions

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many conceptions in 1988 (a) led to maternities and (b) were terminated under the terms of the Abortion Act 1967, among residents of England and Wales aged under 16 years, 16 to 19 years, under 20 years, 20 to 24 years, 25 to 29 years, 30 to 34 years, 35 to 39 years, and 40 years and over; and in each case, what was the rate per 1,000 population in each age group.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is given in the table. All pregnancies of women usually resident in England and Wales which led to a maternity or terminated by abortion under the 1967 Act are included and those that led to a spontaneous abortion are excluded.

Births

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many live births and stillbirths in 1989, were (a) born within marriage, (b) jointly registered births outside marriage and (c) solely registered births outside marriage.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is as follows:

England and Wales

Outcome	Total	Within marriage	Outside marriage
			Jointly registered	Solely registered
Live births	687,725	501,921	132,267	53,537
Stillbirths	3,236	2,169	623	444
Live and stillbirths	690,961	504,090	132,890	53,981

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many live births and stillbirths in England and Wales in 1989 were jointly registered by parents who were not married to each other but lived at the same address.

Mr. Dorrell: The number of live births in England and Wales in 1989 jointly registered by parents who were not married to each other but lived at the same address was 95,858. These data are not yet available for stillbirths but I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Community Care

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how joint finance arrangements will be affected by the delay in implementing the community care proposals.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Not at all. Current joint finance arrangements remain in force. We welcome and encourage collaborative work between health and social care providers. Health authorities and local authorities should continue to make plans to make the best possible use of joint finance for community care services.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of (a) people discharged from long mental illness hospital, (b) mentally handicapped people discharged from hospital, (c) day care places for the mentally ill available, (d) places for the mentally ill in community care homes and hostels, (e) day care places for the mentally handicapped and (f) places in community homes and hostels for the mentally handicapped, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Dorrell: The table shows the number of patients discharged to the community from national health service mental illness and mental handicap hospitals and units after a stay of one year or more, for the period 1979 to 1986.

In 1987-88 there were 3,900 finished district spells, excluding deaths, after treatment of more than a year, under a consultant for a mental illness specialty. Similarly for mental handicap there were 2,500 finished district spells. Finished district spells include transfers to other hospitals outside the district of treatment.

Comprehensive information on the number of day care places provided by national health service mental illness or mental handicap hospitals in England is not collected centrally.

Information on local authority day care places and places in homes and hostels for mentally ill and mentally handicapped people in England is published in two annual statistical series: "Adult Training Centres for Mentally Handicapped People and Day Centres for Mentally Ill, Mentally Handicapped, Elderly and Younger Physically Handicapped People" (References A/F 11A/87 to A/F 11A/88) and "Homes and Hostels for Mentally Ill and Mentally Handicapped People" (References A/F 11/79 to A/F 11/86 and A/F 11A/87 to A/F 11A/88. Figures for 1989 are not yet available. Copies of all publications are in the Library.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of expenditure already incurred by local authorities in preparation for the introduction of the Government's community care proposals, in terms of (a) staffing, (b) training, (c) planning and (d) in other ways.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Immunisation

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received from Action Research for the Crippled Child concerning immunisation uptake; and what response he has given.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department received in July 1989, a copy of the Peckham report "Factors Influencing Immunisation Uptake in Childhood" prepared on behalf of Action Research for the Crippled Child, from the group's director general, Colonel A. N. Brierley-Smith. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has replied to Colonel Brierley-Smith and I have arranged for copies of this correspondence to be placed in the Library.

My hon. Friend has also recently written to the Department about the report, to which I shall reply shortly.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations and discussions he is having concerning the introduction of parent-held child immunisation record cards, following completion of the pilot study; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Officials are to meet members of the British Paediatric Association today.

Maternal Deaths

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will list the number of maternal deaths in 1989 from (a) all causes, (b) abortion, illegal, legal and spontaneous and (c) unknown methods of abortion; and what percentage of maternal deaths were due to abortions of all types.

Mr. Dorrell: The information is as follows:

Number of maternal deaths in England and Wales 1989

Cause	Number of deaths
(a) Spontaneous, legally induced, and illegally induced abortions[1]	—
(b) Unknown method of abortion[2]	—
(c) Ectopic pregnancy and other abortive outcome[3]	6
(d) Total maternal deaths[4]	56

Note:
8·9 per cent. of maternal deaths were due to abortions of ally types.

Abortion

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many legal abortions were carried out in England and Wales in 1970, 1975, 1980 and each year from 1985 onwards on women resident in (a) the Isle of Man, (b) Jersey and (c) the Bailiwick of Guernsey.

Mr. Dorrell: The information is as follows:

Number of abortions performed in England and Wales under the Abortion Act 1967 to residents of (a) Channel Islands and Isle of Man for 1970, 1975, 1980 and 1985 and (b) the Isle of Man, Jersey, Guernsey for 1986-89[1]

Disability

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has visited any local authorities who participated in the pilot implementation of sections 1 to 3 of the 1986 Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I intend to do so. Officials are in contact with representatives of the consortium "Act Now" about the appropriate time and choice of authority for a visit.

Hampstead Health Authority

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the spending per resident by Hampstead health authority was for each of the years 1978 to 1989 inclusive; and what was the comparable national average spending over the same period.

Mr. Dorrell: Information for the Hampstead health authority and figures in aggregate for all district health authorities (DHAs) in England for the years since their establishment on 1 April 1982 are shown in the table. These figures relate expenditure on services managed by Hampstead health authority to numbers of residents. They do not show expenditure on services for Hampstead residents, since they do not take account of services provided by other districts for Hampstead residents, or services provided by Hampstead health authority for residents of other districts.

(b) Mid-year estimates of resident population—1982 to 1988 (Office of Population Censuses and Surveys).

Notes:
1. Hospital and Community health services (HCHS) covers the total expenditure by district health authorities including that on hospital, community health and where relevant patient transport (that is, ambulance), blood transfusion and other services.
2. District capital expenditure, all expenditure incurred by regional health authorities on behalf of their regions as a whole and by special health authorities, and so on, is excluded. Expenditure on family practitioner services, which is accounted for by family practitioner committees and cannot strictly be attributed to particular districts, is also excluded.
3. The figures for Hampstead and certain other districts within the North East Thames region were influenced by a change in the pattern of sub-regional resource allocations for long-stay patients in the period 1984-85/1985-86. Hampstead, in common with other districts within London, incurs the cost of London weighting allowances payable to staff. In addition, Hampstead incurs additional costs through the provision of service support for medical education and research.
4. Prior to 1 April 1982 the Hampstead health authority's predecessor health district formed part of a larger area health authority and in those cases district-based figures were not collected centrally.

Family Planning

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each district health authority in Greater London (a) the total number of family planning clinic sessions held in 1982 and 1988-89 and (b) the total number of family planning clinic premises in 1982 and 1988-89.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested for 1982 is shown in the tables. From 1988-89 the data are no longer collected centrally, following a recommendation of the steering group on health services information.

Beverley Lewis

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department has completed its consideration of the reports from the health and social services authorities and the coroner's report on the death of Beverley Lewis; and what further action he intends to take.

Mr. Dorrell: Following the death of Beverley Lewis on 17 February 1989 the Gloucester health and social services authorities both launched internal inquiries into the circumstances surrounding Beverley's death. The two inquiries made joint recommendations which were submitted to the coroner at the inquest. The coroner delivered a verdict of death by natural causes. The health and social services authorities' reports identified three areas where improvement in procedure are necessary and they are acting upon them:

(a) An "at risk" procedure is being introduced for adults with a physical or mental handicap or who are suffering from mental illness.
(b) Management of the community mental health teams is being strengthened.
(c) Individual programme plans are being implemented for each individual with a mental handicap.

I have reviewed the reports of both the health and social services authorities as well as the coroner's findings. The social services inspectorate will work with the local health and social services and education authorities to learn, apply and disseminate the lessons of this tragic case and I have asked the Law Commission to consider and advise on the coroner's view that the relevant legislation needs to be clarified. In view of the extensive local inquiries, the coroner's verdict, the continuing involvement of the SSI, and the need for local management to concentrate on implementing the changes that have now been agreed, I have decided not to establish a further inquiry into the circumstances of Beverley Lewis's death.

Children Act 1989

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to take into account the deliberations of the committee set up in 1989 relating to services for the under-fives, in relationship to quality in preparing guidelines for part III of the Children Act 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes. The conclusions of the report of the Department of Education and Science, "Committee of Inquiry into the Quality of Educational Experience of Under Fives", will be taken into account in the Children Act guidelines on day care services for pre-school children.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations his Department has held in relationship to quality in the guidance relating to part III of the Children Act 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Guidance under part III of the Children Act 1989 will be the subject of a wide-ranging consultation exercise. This process has commenced and comments will be welcome on any aspects of the draft guidance within the next three months.

Social Services

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the last year in which his Department produced local authority profiles containing indicators of key social services.

Mr. Dorrell: Key indicators of local authority social services 1987-88 were published on 19 July 1990. Local authority profiles covering 1981-82 to 1985-86 were published in April 1989; copies are available in the Library. The 1983-84 to 1987-88 versions are due to be released in autumn 1990.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has for each social services authority in England of the number of (a) telephones installed, (b) people assisted with telephone rentals, (c) aids provided (d) housing adaptations provided and (e) holidays provided; and if he will express this both as a total figure and at a rate per 1,000 of the population for the years 1981-82 to 1988-89.

Mr. Dorrell: The information available is published in the statistical services' "Domiciliary Services, Meals, Aids and Adaptations" (reference A/F 18), copies of which are in the Library. Those data have not been collected centrally since the year ended 31 March 1987.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the percentage increase in expenditure on the personal social services since 1980, adjusted by the gross domestic product deflator, for each social services authority in England;

(2) if he will rank all social services authorities by their expenditure per 1,000 of the population on the personal social services for (a) 1978-79 at current prices and (b) the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dorrell: I will write to the hon. Member.

Capital Funding

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will outline the process following the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act whereby a service procurer or purchasing body would apply to the regional health authority for capital funding,; what conditions will determine eligibility for capital funding; and what continuing conditions will attach to such funding should an allocation be made;

(2) if he will outline the process, following implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act, whereby a service provider within a district health authority would make application to the regional health authority for capital funding; what conditions will determine eligibility for capital funding; and what continuing conditions will attach to such funding should an allocation be made.

Mr. Dorrell: Implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act will not in itself change the means by which capital is allocated to units that remain under the management of district health authorities. Capital will be allocated by regional health authorities to the authority with management responsibility for the service or facility requiring capital investment. In assessing priorities for capital schemes, regions will take account of a range of factors including the needs and priorities of purchasing authorities, and the efficiency and effectiveness of alternative ways of meeting those needs. It will be a requirement of receiving funds that proposed schemes provide evidence that they will attract sufficient purchaser income to cover their revenue costs, including capital charges.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the sources of capital funding that will be available to any hospital trust or any other self-governing trusts; what process of approval such trusts would have to go through following implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act in respect of such capital projects; what conditions will determine eligibility for any public contributions towards such projects; and what continuing conditions will attach to such funding should an allocation be made.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Capital spending by national health service trusts will be funded from internally generated resources or by borrowing from the Government or private sector. Spending will need to be contained within external financing limits which will be set annually for each trust. Trusts will set out their proposals for capital spending in their annual business plans which will be discussed with the Department. In the case of major projects, they will be required to submit plans to the Department for approval in principle.

Private Residential Homes

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the entitlement of residents in private residential homes to paramedical services from the national health service.

Mr. Dorrell: Residents in private residential care homes have the same entitlement to paramedical services from the national health service as people living in their own homes.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, in the light of the delay in the implementation of the community care proposals, local authorities will be expected to begin to arrange contractual agreements with voluntary organisations as from April 1991.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Many local authorities already have contractual agreements or service arrangements with voluntary organisations. There is nothing to prevent them from continuing or developing such arrangements. Contractual agreements will not be a requirement from April 1991, but encouragement to local authorities to move towards their enabler role will continue as part of taking forward our community care proposals.

Mental Hospitals

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those mental handicap and mental illness hospitals that have firm dates for closure with the dates by which each is to be closed; and what was the number of in-patients at 31 December in each.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Hospital Buildings

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will update his Department's answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East of 15 May 1987, Official Report, column 428, concerning the average age of hospital buildings, showing appropriate percentage changes.

Mr. Dorrell: The information previously provided was taken from an exercise which has not been repeated.

General Practice

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will instruct family practitioner authorities to exclude from their consideration, when determining the indicative budget or prescribing amount for a particular practice or general practitioner, any sum likely to arise from the transfer of prescribing costs from hospital consultants to general practitioners in those circumstances where patients attend hospital out-patient clinics on a continuing basis and to make separate provision for such amounts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is not necessary to introduce such a procedure.

It has been the policy of successive Governments that where a hospital doctor has clinical responsibility for a particular aspect of an out-patient's treatment, he should prescribe, where a GP has that responsibility, he should prescribe, and where the two doctors share care they should decide between them who should prescribe, bearing in mind the patient's convenience.

As announced in working paper 4 of the national health service review series, regional health authorities will be expected to examine out-patient prescribing policies within their region, to take a view of what is properly hospital or GP prescribing, and to establish budgets for their district health authorities and family health services authorities on the basis of conformity with the Government's policy. The amount set for each practice under the indicative prescribing scheme will cover the needs of all its patients including prescriptions initiated by a hospital doctor where the GP has taken over or agreed to share care.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will update his Department's answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South East of 18 January 1988, Official Report, columns 569-72, concerning the breakdown, by specialty, of the waiting lists for operations at each of the Coventry hospitals.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information by individual hospitals is no longer collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Coventry health authority for the relevant information.

District Health Authorities

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of annual revenue was spent on management, administrative and secretarial costs in each of the English district health authorities in 1985-86, 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 2 July 1990]: No accurate information on national health service NHS management costs is available. Tables recording expenditure on district health authority headquarters administration and expressing that figure as a percentage of total revenue expenditure for the years 1985-86 and 1988-89 have been placed in the Library. Equivalent information for 1989-90 will be available in the autumn.

Food Poisoning

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the number of cases notified to him for 1989 and 1990 until the latest date for which figures are available, of cases of (a) food poisoning in general, (b) salmonella, (c) salmonella enteriditis, (d) salmonella enteriditis P4, (e) salmonella typhimurium, (f) campylobacter and (g) listeriosis;

(2) if he will list the number of cases notified to him for each year since 1980 until the latest date for which figures are available by region for (a) food poisoning in general, (b) salmonella, (c) salmonella enteriditis, (d) salmonella enteriditis P4, (e) salmonella typhimurium, (f) campylobacter and (g) listeriosis.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 19 July 1990]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

In-patients (West Midlands)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the extra money allocated specifically to reduce in-patient waiting lists, by specialty, to each of the Birmingham health districts and the West Midlands health region in each year in which allocations have been made; and what assessment he has made of its impact upon in-patient waiting lists by each Birmingham health district and the West Midlands health region.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 23 July 1990]: Information on the allocations is given in the tables. The West Midlands regional health authority has assessed the impact of waiting list funds on targeted specialties in 1989-90. During that year the region achieved an overall 10·9 per cent. reduction in its long wait in-patient lists, largely due to the successful targeting of waiting list funds. An assessment for each of the Birmingham districts and for Birmingham as a whole is given in the tables.

Intensive Care Baby Units

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was, for the most recent year, the number of babies born alive in England with birthweights of (a) under 1,000 grammes, (b) 1,000 to 1,499 grammes, (c) 1,500 to 1,999 grammes, (d) 2,000 to 2,499 grammes, (e) 2,500 grammes and over and (f) with unstated birthweights; and what are the numbers of babies in each group who were admitted to special or intensive care baby units, the numbers discharged alive and their average lengths of stay;

(2) for the most recent year, the number of babies born alive in England at gestational ages of (a) under 28 weeks, (b) 28 to 31 weeks, (c) 32 to 36 weeks, (d) 37 to 41 weeks, (e) 42 or more weeks and (f) with unknown gestational ages; and what are the numbers of babies in each group who were admitted to special or intensive care baby units, the numbers discharged alive and their average length of stay.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 25 July 1990]: The information requested on live births by birthweight is as follows:

England 1989

	Birthweight
Under 1,000 grammes	2,325
1,000-1,499 grammes	3,891
1,500-1,999 grammes	8,283
2,000-2,499 grammes	28,127
2,500 grammes and over	586,749
unstated birthweight	19,982

Source: OPCS

Information on gestation, type of care received and outcome are not included in birth registration data, but are being collected from 1988-89 in the maternity hospital episode system. Complete data for 1988-89, the first year of the system, are not available and the extent to which the incomplete data can be used to make reliable estimates is currently under consideration. Preliminary indications are that the percentage of live births by gestation are as follows:

Babies born alive by gestation 1988-89 England

Number of weeks gestation	Per cent.
All	100
Under 28	1
28-32	1
33-36	5
37-40	70
41-42	19
Over 42	1
Unknown	4

More detailed analyses are available only at disproportionate cost.

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the new (a) membership and (b) chairpersons of the regional health authorities will be announced.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [pursuant to her reply, 20 July 1990, c. 766]: All the appointments of non-executive members of regional health authorities have now been confirmed and I have today placed a full list in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Official Meetings

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to meet the Federal German Chancellor Dr. Kohl; and what matters she expects to discuss.

The Prime Minister: I meet Chancellor Kohl several times during the year. We last met at the Houston economic summit on 9 to 11 July. I expect that there will be further contacts soon. Subjects for discussion include EC and NATO issues, east-west relations and German unification.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to meet her counterpart from the German Democratic Republic; and what matters she expects to discuss.

The Prime Minister: I had interesting and valuable talks with Herr de Maiziere during his visit to London on 26 and 27 June. I hope that we shall meet again before long and continue our discussions about German unification, east-west relations and EC and NATO subjects.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Prime Minister (1) when she last met Lord Hanson in an official capacity;

(2) when she last met Michael Richardson of NM Rothschild in an official capacity.

The Prime Minister: My normal practice is neither to confirm nor deny meetings with private individuals even when no such meeting has taken place.

Dairy Products

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister if the European Commission's decision on 19 July to raise export restitutions on dairy products is consistent with the agreement reached on 11 July at the economic summit in Houston; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Commission maintains that the action it has taken does not contravene agreements reached in the GATT international dairy arrangement on minimum export prices. The increase in export refunds is nevertheless likely to be unhelpful in the context of the current Uruguay round negotiations. The Commission took its decision without consulting member states. We had, however, made clear on earlier occasions that we were opposed to any increase in export refunds in the dairy sector at this time. We also opposed the 1 per cent. increase in milk quota agreed towards the end of last year, because, although it was helpful to many producers in the short term, it was bound to worsen the Community's existing problem of overproduction.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed in her Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

The Prime Minister: There are no public relations advisers. The special advisers currently employed in my office are:

Professor B. Griffiths
Mr. A. Dunlop
Mr. G. Guise
Mr. R. Harris
Mr. H. M. Harris-Hughes
Mr. I. K. Whitehead

All are paid from public funds. It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential. Expenses may be paid within the normal civil service rules.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister if she discussed the prospects for the forthcoming nuclear non-proliferation treaty review conference with President Bush during her recent visit to Houston.

The Prime Minister: No, but the matter was part of the final conclusions of the economic summit in Houston.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Prime Minister when the Cabinet Office will publish an up-to-date issue of the list of ministerial responsibilities.

The Prime Minister: Copies of the list of ministerial responsibilities are expected to be available in approximately three weeks.

Correspondence

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will take steps to remind all Ministers of the duty to ensure that—while their regular private office staff are away on holiday—all letters from Ministers to hon. Members have a copy thereof attached, as usual.

The Prime Minister: I have asked my right hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury to do so.

Film Industry

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Prime Minister what is her policy on (a) the timing and (b) the mechanism of disbursement of the £5 million support she announced for British film production, following her seminar on film policy.

The Prime Minister: The fund will be provided over three financial years: £1 million in 1991-92 and £2 million in each of the two following years. The mechanism for disbursement has not yet been decided.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Crown Immunity

Ms. Walley: To ask the Lord President of the Council what developments there have been in identifying the scope for removing Crown immunity from the Palace of Westminster.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: There are no developments to report. Consideration of the issues raised has disclosed no reason why the Palace of Westminster should not be subject to the same rules as Crown property generally.

Library Services

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Lord President of the Council whether he has any plans to change the use of the Textline facility in the branch Library by hon. Members and staff; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The providers of Textline have recently given notice of substantial price increases and of a new charging structure, the consequence of which would be a very heavy increase in the costs of this service to the House within three years. The Library Sub-Committee of the Services Committee therefore decided that the Textline service should be withdrawn from the Branch Library with effect from early August 1990. Notices were posted in the Branch Library on 23 July informing users of the withdrawal of the service.

Dining Rooms

Ms. Walley: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will indicate the latest date for which a booking in the private dining rooms has been accepted.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The latest date for which a private dining room has been booked is 18 December 1991.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will undertake a review of the current use of private dining facilities in the House with a view to making provision in advance of the development of phase 2 for constituents and visitors to the line of route.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: It is understood that the Catering Sub-Committee will include the provision of refreshments for visitors as part of its review this autumn of observations received in response to the Services Committee's first report of this Session on the future development of refreshment facilities in the House (HC 234). No doubt all possible options will be considered at that time.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Bilateral Aid

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the percentage of United Kingdom bilateral aid spent on procurement of United Kingdom goods and services for each year since 1979, using the same criteria as were used for the figure on page 13 of the "Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93", chapter 2.

Mrs. Chalker: Procurement of United Kingdom goods and services under bilateral aid programmes, including both technical cooperation and financial assistance, using the criteria requested, has been as follows:

Year	Per cent.
1980	67
1981	67
1982	70
1983	66
1984	61
1985	63
1986	71
1987	70
1988	69
1989	Not yet available

Aid

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a table showing the amount of British aid in each of the last five years to Malawi, Namibia, Zimbabwe, Papua New Guinea, India, St. Lucia, Grenada and the Philippines.

Mrs. Chalker: The amount of gross bilateral aid, including new investments by Commonwealth Development Corporation, given by the United Kingdom in each of the last five years to Malawi, Namibia, Zimbabwe, Papua New Guinea, India, St. Lucia, Grenada and the Philippines is as follows:

	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989
Malawi	22,356	15,346	24,865	46,494	42,114
Namibia	605	733	969	2,033	1,543
Zimbabwe	23,636	12,503	12,498	24,127	21,385
Papua New Guinea	2,329	4,873	6,646	14,643	11,466
India	106,466	143,481	78,464	101,045	99,498
St. Lucia	530	1,018	3,174	2,848	8,872
Grenada	1,450	776	739	1,225	1,352
Philippines	1,840	205	262	1,042	11,913

Note: The 1989 figures are provisional.

Third World Debt

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the total interest payments on the external debts of the least developed countries as a percentage of all official development assistance to this category of countries.

Mrs. Chalker: According to recent OECD figures, total interest payments made in 1988 by countries classified by the United Nations as least developed were US$2·2 billion. Official development assistance to this group of countries on a net basis—that is, after subtracting principal payments on concessional loans was US$13·9 billion. Figures for previous years, and provisional figures for 1989, are similar.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries within the least developed country category that Britain has been able to assist to date through implementation of the Paris club Toronto terms; and if he will make a statement on the debt relief gained by these countries.

Mrs. Chalker: The countries within the United Nations least developed category which have so far rescheduled debt in the Paris club on concessional "Toronto Terms" are Benin, Central African Republic, Chad, Equatorial Guinea, Guinea Republic, Guinea-Bissau, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Niger, Tanzania, Togo and Uganda. No debts to the United Kingdom were covered by the reschedulings for Equatorial Guinea, Guinea-Bissau and Chad. The deferral of all due payments, together with the reduction in interest payable on the deferred amounts, will substantially ease the financing constraints on these countries as they pursue programmes of economic reform designed to lay the basis for sustained growth.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the debt service ratios for each of the least-developed countries between 1980 and the latest available figures.

Mrs. Chalker: Figures for the ratio of debt service paid to export receipts are available for all the least-developed countries except Afghanistan, Djibouti, Kiribati and Tuvalu in the "World Debt Tables 1989-90", published by the World Bank, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Figures are available in all cases for 1988; in some cases, figures to not extend as far back as 1980.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make it his policy to support an early review of measures by multilateral institutions to ease the debt burden on the least developed countries.

Mrs. Chalker: The multilateral institutions have played their part in tackling the balance of payments problems faced by heavily indebted countries in the 1980s by providing financial support for programmes of economic reform. We have played a major part in ensuring that such support to the poorest countries is provided on highly concessional terms—especially through the IMF's enhanced structural adjustment facility and the World bank's International Development Association. It is important for the future functioning of the multilateral institutions that their preferred creditor status is maintained.

Power Stations

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all coal-fired power stations funded from the aid-trade provisions and from the regular aid programme, since 1979, indicating the size of the power stations; which power stations use flue-gas desulphurisation technology; which power stations use other technology to limit sulphur dioxide emissions; and the sulphur content of the coal used; and for which stations an environmental impact assessment was carried out before aid was approved.

Mrs. Chalker [holding answer 24 July 1990]: The following list gives information on all coal-fired power stations funded from the aid-trade provision and from the regular aid programme since 1979.

Date on which financing agreed	Country	Site	Size	Sulphur content in coal percentage
1982	Botswana	Morupule	3 x 30MW	1·5 (1·06+2·0 blend)
1982	Brazil	Jacui	350MW	0·54—1·06
1988	China	Yaouang	2 x 350MW	0·28—0·31
1984	India	Balco	4 x 67MW	0·3—0·5
1982	India	Rihand	2 x 500MW	0·3
1980	India	Titigarh	4 x 60MW	Not available

None of the power stations is fitted with flue gas desulphurisation equipment or uses other technology specifically to limit sulphur dioxide emissions, other than by generally maximising the overall efficiency of the plant. Sulphur contents are significantly lower than coal currently burned in United Kingdom power stations which has typically up to 3 per cent. sulphur content.

The ODA did not carry out formal environmental impact assessment on these projects but it examined, in the course of appraisal, environmental factors, including the results of environmental assessments carried out by the recipient Governments, in order to establish the likely impacts of the projects.

Since 1988 all projects have been subject to ODA's new environmental appraisal system.

EMPLOYMENT

Disabled People

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has as to how many public sector organisations in Germany meet a (a) 6 per cent. quota, (b) 5 per cent. quota, (c) 4 per cent. quota and (d) 3 per cent. quota, for the employment of disabled people.

Mr. Jackson: I regret that information about the public sector organisations in Germany that meet their quota obligations is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has as to how many organisations and companies in France meet a (a) 6 per cent. quota, (b) 5 per cent. quota, (c) 4 per cent. quota and (d) 3 per cent. quota, for the employment of disabled people.

Mr. Jackson: The current quota system in France has only recently been introduced and compliance figures are not yet available.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department has carried out any studies into the operation and effectiveness of the German quota/levy system for disabled people.

Mr. Jackson: No formal studies of the German system have been carried out by this Department. However, my officials are in regular contact with their European counterparts about all aspects of provision for people with disabilities, including the operation of quota/levy systems.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consultations he plans to hold with disability organisations on his Department's proposals for employment services for disabled people.

Mr. Jackson: All disability organisations known to the Department have been written to seeking their views on the proposals contained in "Employment and Training for People with Disabilities". We are looking forward to receiving their comments.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which organisations are being formally consulted on his Department's review of employment services for disabled people.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 25 July 1990]: The results of the review were published on 29 June in a consultative document "Employment and Training for People with Disabilities". Copies have been sent to a wide range of organisations and individuals; including the all-party disablement group, the Select Committee on Employment, the National Advisory Council on Employment of Disabled People, committees for the employment of disabled people, organisations of and for people with disabilities, providers of employment and training opportunities for people with disabilities, the CBI, the TUC, local authorities and professional bodies with an interest in the employment and training of people with disabilities. Copies of the document are available to anyone who wishes to comment.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department has carried out any studies of the operation and effectiveness of the new 6 per cent. French quota system for disabled people.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 25 July 1990]: No formal studies of the French system have been carried out by this Department. However, my officials are in regular contact with their European counterparts about all aspects of provision for people with disabilities, including the operation of quota/levy systems.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department has evaluated and costed the feasibility of establishing a disablement commission to investigate cases of unjustifiable discrimination against disabled people.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 25 July 1990]: No formal evaluation or costing studies have been conducted. Were such a commision to be established, the cost would undoubtedly be substantial.

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action his Department is taking to ensure adequate health and safety standards in bed-and-breakfast hotels; what is being done to ensure that all hotels used for the accommodation of homeless families are upgraded to higher standards; and how often bed-and-breakfast hotels are visited and inspected by environmental health officers to ensure that they are upgraded to desirable standards.

Mr. Forth: Under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 (HSWA) it is the employer's responsibility to do everything that is reasonably practicable to protect the health and safety of workers and others who may be affected by his work activity.

Local authorities are responsible for enforcing the HSWA in bed-and-breakfast hotels. The frequency of visits and inspections is at the enforcing authority's discretion. No information is available centrally on the frequency of such visits.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. Howard: Two special advisers are currently appointed to advise Ministers in the Department of Employment: Ms. C. Stratton and Mr. T. Collins. It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential. The normal civil service rules apply with regard to expenses for special advisers. There are no public relations advisers paid by other organisations and seconded to the Department.

Tourism

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans his Department has to aid the funding of the English tourist network automation system.

Mr. Forth: In the 1989-90 financial year, the English tourist board gave support amounting to £50,000 towards the development of the English tourist network automation system. In the 1990-91 financial year, a further £120,000 has been allocated to support the system.

Chipboard Manufacture

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department has made any assessment of the health and safety implications involved in the process of the manufacture of softwood chipboard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The Health and Safety Executive has not conducted any specific comprehensive assessment of health and safety aspects of softwood chipboard manufacture. However, standards applicable to chipboard manufacturing processes are contained in existing safety legislation enforced by HSE. It has no evidence to suggest that standards involving this manufacturing process are unsatisfactory.

National Council for Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will set out in 1990 prices, the 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92 budgets for the National Council for Vocational Qualifications.

Mr. Jackson: A total of £5·4 million was provided for the National Council for Vocational Qualifications in 1989-90, and provision is currently estimated at some £5·2 million for this year. The plans for 1991-92 currently provide for a total of £5·7 million.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has held any meetings with the National Council for Vocational Qualifications about its budget for 1990-91 and 1991-92; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Officials from my Department meet regularly with officers of the national council to discuss all aspects of the council's work. In addition, my hon. Friend the former Minister of State, Department of Employment met the council twice this year.

The House was informed on 17 May 1990 of a review of the council's progress, currently being undertaken by my Department, with the agreement of the Secretaries of State for Education and Science, for Wales and for Northern Ireland—Official Report, 17 May, column 540. We shall be finalising the council's budget following completion of the review.

Work Permits

Mr. Macleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many work permits were issued to foreign nationals in June 1990 and each of the preceding 11 months.

Mr. Jackson: The information requested is as follows:

	Number
June 1990	3,376
May 1990	3,317
April 1990	2,460
March 1990	2,882
February 1990	2,452
January 1990	2,541
December 1989	1,399
November 1989	2,856
October 1989	2,923
September 1989	2,575
August 1989	3,181
July 1989	2,743

Bio-electro Magnetism

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department has assessed the health and safety aspects of bio-electro magnetism; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The Health and Safety Executive regularly assesses the health and safety aspects of electromagnetic radiation and has published guidance, for example on the use of sun-tanning equipment and radio frequency dielectric heating equipment.

PSV Training, Coventry

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will now consider instructing the Training Agency to arrange for the provision in the Coventry area of public service vehicle training through the dual certificate to those individuals holding only a provisional driving licence; in what other regions these training courses are already provided; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: No. The training provision in each locality is determined by local officials of the Training Agency, and training and enterprise councils in the light of the needs of trainees and local labour market requirements. The information on the training provision in other regions is not available.

Training Agencies

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total number of (a) employment training training agents and (b) employment training training managers who have received approved training organisation status for the most recent date for which information is available.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 23 July 1990]: As at 31 May 1990, 153 training agents and 881 training managers had received approval for stage one and one training agent and six training managers had received approval for stage two.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the employment training agency managers and directors involved in community programmes, YTS and employment training who have been investigated by the fraud squad, prosecuted and convicted in the period since June 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 23 July 1990]: No central record is kept by my Department on this type of information. Any information in respect of specific fraud allegations or investigations is held within the records of the Training Agency's 57 area offices and any such information must clearly be treated as confidential.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what investigations were carried out by the Training Agency or Manpower Services Commission into the training experience of directors of the Mutual Aid Centre Managing Agency and the High Wycombe Brass Tacks Agency.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 23 July 1990]: The Training Agency investigates the ability of all potential training providers to deliver Government programmes and initiatives by carrying out on-site investigations to ensure that adequate facilities and arrangements are in place. A system of risk analysis is applied to the company's financial viability and where appropriate by examining whether previous initiatives have been successfully delivered.

Written evidence of previous relevant experience is required for members of staff directly involved in the delivery of the training or assessment.

The local approval process was followed in this case including consideration and approval by the relevant local tripartite area manpower board.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the implications for the provision of employment training of the conviction of two directors of Mutual Aid Centre Managing Agency.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 23 July 1990]: There are no implications. The Mutual Aid Centre Managing Agency is not a provider of employment training. My Department continues to operate a system of financial appraisal and monitoring designed to protect public funds and to reduce the risk of fraud.

Technical and Vocational Education Initiative

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received following his decision to reduce available funds for technical and vocational education initiative start-up in St. Helens.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 25 July 1990]: My right hon. and learned Friend has received letters from the TVEI project director for St. Helens and from the headmaster of a special school.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Class Sizes

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the numbers and proportions of primary pupils in classes (a) over 30 and (b) over 34.

Mr. MacGregor: The numbers and proportions of primary pupils in classes (a) over 30 and (b) over 34 in England at January 1989 are:

	Number of pupils	Proportion of all pupils
In Classes over 30	803,882	23·2
In Classes over 34	137,885	4·0

The analyses relate to classes taught by one teacher during a selected period on the day of the school census.

School Holidays

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consideration he has given to adjusting the school terms and school holidays; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend has no plans to alter existing arrangements for school terms and holidays which allow for their determination by LEAs and school governors. He is aware of current interest in some schools in the possibility of introducing a four term year. He recognises that this would have major implications for many beyond the schools which would require very careful consideration.

Women Teachers

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the proportions of (a) head teachers posts in primary schools, (b) deputy head teacher posts in primary schools, (c) head teacher posts in secondary schools and deputy head teachers posts in secondary schools which are held by women.

Mr. MacGregor: On 31 March 1987, the latest date for which information is available, the proportions of head and deputy head teacher posts in primary schools in England which were held by women were 47 and 61 per cent. respectively and in secondary schools in England were 17 and 31 per cent. respectively.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the proportions of female teachers in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools.

Mr. MacGregor: On 31 March 1987, the latest date for which information is available, the percentages of full-time qualified teachers in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in England who were female were 80 and 47 per cent. respectively.

16 to 18-year-olds

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the proportions of (a) 16-year-olds, (b) 17-year-olds, (c) 18-year-olds and (d) 16 to 18-year-olds in full-time education for each year since 1979-80, as a percentage of the same age group.

Mr. MacGregor: The information requested is as follows:

Participation rates in full-time education for 16 to 18-year-olds in England 1979-80 to 1989-90

	1979-80 per cent.	1980-81 per cent.	1981-82 per cent.	1982-83 per cent.	1983-84 per cent.	1984-85 per cent.	1985-86 per cent.	1986-87 per cent.	1987-88 per cent.	1988-89 per cent.	[1]1989-90 per cent.
Aged 16	42	43	48	50	48	47	47	47	48	52	56
Aged 17	27	28	30	32	32	32	32	32	33	35	39
Aged 18	14	14	16	16	17	17	17	17	18	19	20
Aged 16-18	28	29	31	33	32	32	32	32	33	35	39

Note: Ages are at 31 August.
[1] Provisional.

Capitation Expenditure

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the amounts of capitation spent by all local education authorities on schools in each year since 1979-80 at (a) 1979-80 prices and (b) current prices.

Mr. MacGregor: The items of expenditure covered by the term "capitation" can vary from LEA to LEA. Accordingly, the Department does not collect data on the size of the capitation allowances made by LEAs to the schools they maintain.

Literacy

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what guidance he gives to local education authorities on methods of teaching primary school pupils to read; and what representations he has received on this subject.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend has published attainment targets and programmes of study for English which cover the teaching of reading to primary schoolchildren. I do not, however, give guidance on the teaching methods to be used in this or any other subject. That is a matter for the schools, and the professional expertise of teachers.

Reading is naturally a subject of special interest and concern to parents and others, and one on which my right hon. Friend and I frequently receive representations.

Higher Education

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the Government's recent achievements in higher education.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Government have continued to implement policies to improve aspects of higher education in England and Wales and have made important progress in carrying out the provisions of the Education Reform Act 1988.

There are now over 1 million students in higher education, 36 per cent. more than in 1979. By the end of the 1990s, the number is expected to increase to nearly 1·2 million.

Since the introduction of the Education Reform Act, polytechnics and colleges of higher education have been established as independent corporate bodies, funded by the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council. With the recent announcement of the new Bournemouth and Humberside polytechnics there are now 31 polytechnics and 54 other major providers of higher education in the new PCFC sector.

The shift in the balance of public funding between the block grant and the fee means that higher education institutions now have a financial incentive to admit additional students. In consequence, institutions are becoming increasingly responsive to the needs of students, employers and other interested "customers" of higher education.

Higher education is well placed to meet the challenges of the 1990s.

Science (International Co-operation)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to promote international co-operation in science.

Mr. Alan Howarth: A main objective for DES expenditure research is to increase international collaboration in science where this gives good value for money—for instance, where necessary concentration cannot be achieved at the national level—and having particular regard to possibilities for co-operation within the EC. To this end, the Department pays grant in aid annually to the five research councils, the Royal Society and the Fellowship of Engineering. In addition, resources are made available to the universities and polytechnics through the Universities Funding Council. It is for the scientific judgment of bodies in receipt of grant-in-aid and those they support, in discussion where appropriate with the Advisory Board for the Research Councils and the Department, to determine the particular scientific areas in which international co-operation should be promoted.

Assessment Tests

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the provisions he is making to esure that children are regularly tested at the ages of seven and 11 years.

Mr. Eggar: Under the Education Reform Act 1988, my right hon. Friend is required to establish arrangements for assessing all pupils at ages seven, 11, 14 and 16 in the core and other foundation subjects of the national curriculum. the first national assessments of seven-year-olds in English, mathematics and science will take place in 1991. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave on 25 July to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) about the arrangements for those assessments. National assessments of seven-year-olds in the other foundation subjects will be phased in over the years 1992-94. The first national assessment of 11-year-olds—in the core subjects and technology—will be in 1994, with assessments in the other foundation subjects phased in over the years 1995-96.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teachers attended the seminars to evaluate the standard assessment tests pilot studies.

Mr. Eggar: The detailed breakdown of those attending the recent seminars was as follows:

	Number
Teachers	82
Head teachers and deputy head teachers	32
Advisory teachers and co-ordinators	20
Local education authority inspectors and advisers	30

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has had discussions with the National Council for Vocational Qualifications about the under-sevens project and training for early years workers.

Mr. Eggar: I have not discussed the project with the council; the Department is represented on the project steering group.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment his Department made of the resource implications of standard assessment tests at seven years.

Mr. Eggar: The pilot assessments of seven-year-olds in English, mathematics and science, which took place in a sample of primary schools in May, will yield evidence about the resource implications of the prototype standard assessment tasks (SATs) used in the pilot. Responsibility for evaluating the pilot assessments rests with the School Examinations and Assessment Council (SEAC) which will report to my right hon. Friend in October on the performance of the prototype SATs, including their resource implications. The specification for the SATs to be used in the first national assessment of seven-year-olds in 1991 will be settled by my right hon. Friend in the light of that report.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science on what date he expects to report his decisions regarding standard assessment tests for seven-year-olds.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend expects to settle the specification for the standard assessment tasks (SATs) to be used in the first national assessments of seven-year-olds in 1991 by October of this year, in the light of the School Examinations and Assessment Council's evaluation of the recent pilot assessments of seven-year-olds.

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made under the new system of local management of schools.

Mr. Fallon: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) on 10 July 1990, at column 175.

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of total education expenditure each shire county, under local management of schools, has held back from the schools themselves to cover the cost of administration and other facilities.

Mr. Fallon: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I have given today to my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Mr. Norris). The costs of central administration are included in the figures for unlimited discretionary exceptions.

Shire Counties

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the number of teachers employed in schools in shire counties in 1990; and what was the number of teachers employed in schools in shire counties in 1985.

Mr. Fallon: The number of teachers—full-time equivalents—in nursery primary and secondary schools maintained by local education authorities in English shire counties were, in thousands:

	Number
January 1985	240·0
January 1989	237·8
January 1990	239·4

A further 340 teachers were employed in grant maintained schools in these counties in January 1990.

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total estimated expenditure on tertiary education in all shire counties for 1990; and what was the total actual expenditure on education in all shire counties in 1985.

Mr. Eggar: Local authority returns of expenditure to the Department of the Environment do not separately identify spending on tertiary education.

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the number of (a) primary and (b) schoolchildren in shire counties in (a) 1990 and (b) 1985.

Mr. Fallon: The number of pupils in maintained primary schools and the number of pupils in all schools in non-metropolitan counties at January 1989 and January 1985 are given. Data for January 1990 are not yet available.

Primary	2,366,986	2,275,847
All pupils[1]	4,259,134	4,493,522

[1] The number of all pupils relates to pupils in maintained nursery, primary, middle and secondary schools. Special and independent school pupils are not included.

School Budgets

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what factors underlie the proportion of the general schools budget allocated to schools under Cumbria's proposals for local management of schools budget; whether there are any elements in the calculation which are unique to Cumbria relative to other shire counties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: The Cumbria scheme for local management of schools adheres to the statutory and policy requirements in all respects. Cumbria local education authority is allocating 62·5 per cent. of the general schools budget in 1990-91 to schools through its approved formula. This compares with an average figure of 68·6 per cent. for those shire counties which have submitted budget information for 1990-91. A detailed breakdown of the factors which underlie this figure is given in the answer that I have given today to my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Mr. Norris).

Teachers

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) when he last reviewed circular 1/88, "Physical and Mental Fitness to Teach of Teachers and of Entrants to Teacher Training";

(2) what consideration he has given to amending the guidelines in circular 1/88 to include clear guidance on (a) the entry of disabled people to teacher training courses and (b) the methods for retaining newly disabled teachers and thoe with severe disabilities such as diabetes or epilepsy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. Friend is satisfied that circular 1/88, which was the subject of extensive consultation before it was issued, contains clear guidance on these matters. Appendix 2 of the circular explains that a candidate's disability or illness is not of itself a bar to entry to initial teacher training. A training institution's decision on whether a candidate with a disability is medically fit should take into account the nature and extent of the individual's condition and the age range and subject or subjects he or she intends to teach.

Section 3 of the circular, in conjunction with regulation 9 of the Education (Teachers) Regulations 1989, gives clear guidance to teachers' employers on the action to be taken if a teacher becomes medically unfit while in service. Specific advice is offered on the circumstances in which the employment of teachers with epilepsy should be suspended or terminated.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the political advisers, and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. Eggar: Mrs. E. Laing is employed as special adviser to the Secretary of State. It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers, as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings, and are therefore confidential. Expenses are paid in line with the normal civil service conditions, and may include secretarial support. All such costs are met from departmental running costs resources in the usual way. No public relations advisers are employed by Ministers.

School Buildings

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the average age of school buildings.

Mr. Fallon: The Department does not maintain a regular record of the age of school buildings.

Ministerial Speeches

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the cost of printing and circulating the booklets containing his speeches on the national curriculum and testing.

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer of 23 July, what the cost was of printing and distributing to schools the copies of the summary from his recent speeches to teacher associations.

Mr. Eggar: The cost of printing and circulating copies of the summary of recent speeches by the Secretary of State on national curriculum and assessment delivered to teacher associations was £26,250.

Grant-maintained Schools

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many copies of the booklet "Grant-Maintained Schools: Questions Parents Ask", setting out the case for grant-maintained schools, have been issued.

Mr. Eggar: In an initial distribution about 80,000 copies of the Department's booklet "Grant-Maintained Schools: Questions Parents Ask" were issued to schools that are eligible to apply for grant-maintained status and major organisations with an interest in the subject. To date, a further 75,000 copies have been sent on request to schools and others interested in the policy.

Pre-school Education

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has received the report from the committee looking at education for the under-fives; and when he expects to publish the report.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend expects to receive the report of the committee shortly and will then settle details of publication.

Open University

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what resources his Department has made available in each year since 1983 to the Open university; whether he has reviewed the cost effectiveness of this contribution relative to contributions made to universities not widely employing distance learning methods; and if he will make a statement on the role of the Open university in United Kingdom higher education.

Mr. Eggar: The recurrent and capital grants made available to the Open university in each year since 1983 are given in the table. The Department is undertaking a review, together with the university, to enable the Government to determine the place of the university's provision within the total provision of higher education for part-time students, and to ensure that the public money devoted to funding the university is used to best effect.

The Open University: Recurrent and Capital Grants in the financial years 1982-83 to 1990-91.

Financial Year	Recurrent £ million	Capital £ million	Total £ million
1982-83	55·21	2·03	57·24
1983-84	56·42	0·70	57·12
1984-85	59·05	1·40	60·45
1985-86	60·93	0·87	61·80
1986-87	60·39	2·08	62·47
1987-88	64·25	1·43	65·68
1988-89	66·39	2·37	68·76
1989-90	72·77	2·41	75·18
1990-91	80·94	2·13	83·07

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last visited the Open university headquarters at Milton Keynes; and what issues were discussed.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend visited the Open university on 14 February 1990 and discussed with the then vice-chancellor, Dr. J. A. Horlock, and his colleagues a wide range of issues relating to the university's strategy and provision, including the continuing education programme, the programme of teacher education, and the development of computer education courses.

Adult Education

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has for the future of Replan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that was given by my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on 12 July 1990, at column 313.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received concerning the effect on the work of Replan of the delay in responding to the proposals made by NIACE for a successor programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: A number of letters have been received on the future of the Replan programme. The present programme comes to an end in October 1991. Two separate proposals for a successor programme to Replan from the National Institute of Adult Continuing Education and the Further Education Unit were received at the end of April. My right hon. Friend hopes to announce a decision in the autumn.

Lancashire County Council

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of Lancashire county council's education budget was spent on the running of the education department's central and area offices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Lancashire's return of expenditure for 1988-89 to the Department of the Environment shows that the authority spent about 2 per cent. of its gross education budget for the year on central education administration.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether it is his policy to introduce a new system of special educational needs management allowances from April 1991.

Mr. Eggar: The school teachers' pay and conditions document gives LEAs and governing bodies a considerable amount of flexibility to reward teachers, including teachers in special schools, who undertake management responsibilities. This flexibility will be increased still further on 1 January 1991 when the recommendations of the interim advisory committee on school teachers' pay and conditions are fully implemented.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will amend the Education (Special Educational Needs) Regulations 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend has today laid before the House the Education (Special Educational Needs) (Amendment) Regulations 1990. These regulations amend the Education (Special Educational Needs) Regulations 1983 to take account of the relevant provisions of the Education Reform Act 1988, the Education (Teachers) Regulations 1989 and the Children Act 1989. These regulations will come into force on 1 September 1990.

Design Dimension

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what financial support his Department has given to the Design Dimension in 1989-90.

Mr. Eggar: In the financial year 1989-90 the Department provided a total of £30,000 in financial support for the Design Dimension Educational Trust.

Teacher Shortages

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state the criteria used in his statement at the CLEA conference at Bradford on 18 July, concerning percentages of teacher shortage in local education authorities; if he will now publish similar tables showing the upper and lower-ranking 10 local education authorities respectively using the criteria (a) percentage of children being sent home over a given period, (b) percentage of classes of children who were not being given lessons by appropriate teachers over a given period and (c) any other criteria agreed with local education authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: The measure of shortage to which my right hon. Friend referred in his speech to the conference of the Council for Local Education Authorities was the level of vacancies reported by local education authorities in response to the Department's regular January survey. The results of the survey for 1990 were published by my right hon. Friend on 17 July in DES News 247/90, a copy of which is in the Library. The percentages quoted were vacancies expressed as a proportion of teachers in post in the authority. The Department does not collect systematically from LEAs any other data relating to teacher shortages.

The Government have acknowledged that there are shortages of teachers in some subjects and in some parts of the country. In both DES News 247/90 and in his speech to the CLEA, my right hon. Friend drew attention to the range of measures that the Government have implemented to combat teacher shortages.

Students

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the number of Northern Ireland domiciled student entrants to polytechnics in England and Wales and regional colleges in Scotland in each year since 1968.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The readily available information covers all Northern Ireland domiciled enrolments in higher education in Great Britain and is as follows:

Year	Thousands
1981-82	4·6
1984-85	5·2
1987-88	7·5

Source:
Education Statistics for the United Kingdom (HMSO).

It is estimated that some 60 per cent. of the 7,500 enrolments in higher education in 1987-88 were enrolled in polytechnics and their equivalents in Scotland.

History

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to make proposals for history in the national curriculum.

Mr. MacGregor: I am publishing my proposals for attainment targets and programmes of study for history today. They are substantially based on, but differ in some respects from, the recommendations of the history working group. I have taken account of the many comments I have received on the final report of the history working group, and also of the advice of the School Examinations and Assessment Council on the feasibility of the working group's proposals for the purposes of assessment. I am publishing that advice with my proposals. I am also republishing the working group's report so that it will be clear what changes I am making. I am also writing today to the chairman of the National Curriculum Council to ask that council to undertake the formal statutory consultation on my proposals and to report to me by 17 December.

Section 42 Notices

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the section 42 results, under the Education Reform Act 1988, for Nottinghamshire and all other education authorities in England.

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Epping Forest on 10 July, Official Report, column 185, he will list the dates on which section 42 notices were published by local education authorities in England, and indicate for each London education authority the controlling political party.

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list, for each English education authority in ascending order, the percentage of their general schools budget taken up by their aggregated schools budget.

Mr. Fallon [holding answer 23 July 1990]: Local education authorities with approved schemes for local management of schools were required to publish 1990-91 budget statements under section 42 of the Education Reform Act by 30 April 1990.

The following information has been extracted from the copies of those statements sent to the Department by local education authorities between 11 April and 21 July 1990.

The following local education authorities with approved schemes have not yet sent copies of their budget statements to the Department;

Avon, Barnsley, Bedfordshire, Bradford, Calderdale, Cornwall, Durham, East Sussex, Hampshire, Kent, Liverpool, North Yorkshire, Northumberland, Nottinghamshire, Oxfordshire, Richmond (L/D), Rochdale, Rotherham, Salford, Sheffield, Somerset, St. Helens, Waltham Forest (L), Wigan and Wiltshire.

As requested by my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest, the controlling political party for each London education authority is indicated (C = Conservative, L = Labour, L/D = Liberal Democrate, NOC = No overall control).

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total amount of private donations to city technology colleges, including planned and proposed colleges, (a) pledged, (b) confirmed (c) committed, and (d) actually paid over, showing in each case the nature of donations in kind rather than cash.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 25 July 1990]: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

War Crimes

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what record his Department has of representations since 1960 regretting the absence of legal powers requiring the United Kingdom authorities to prosecute persons resident in British-controlled territories for offences now to be covered by the War Crimes Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Home Office received occasional correspondence on this subject prior to 1986. But the report of the war crimes inquiry makes clear that until 1986, when the Simon Wiesenthal Centre submitted a list of alleged war criminals said to be living in Britain, the prevalent view was that no war criminals were resident here. Since then, the Home Office has received a large volume of correspondence on this issue, arguing both for and against the proposition that courts in the United Kingdom should be given jurisdiction over war crimes.

Police Phone Calls (Tape Recording)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each police force in the United Kingdom, where tape recordings of telephone calls are carried out in their premises for (a) administrative, (b) operational or (c) investigative purposes.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for the procurement and use of police equipment rests with individual police authorities and their chief officers. The information requested is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Rape

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what personal details of victims in rape cases are given to defendants as part of prosecution evidence; and whether they are able to retain this information.

Mr. John Patten: Under section 102 of the Magistrates Courts Act 1980 a party proposing to tender a written statement in evidence in committal proceedings must give a copy to each of the other parties in the proceedings. Such statements may be edited by the Crown prosecutor to remove inadmissible, prejudicial or irrelevant material; and under guidelines issued by the Attorney-General, "sensitive" unedited material need not be disclosed if it is "of private delicacy to the maker".

The decision to withhold details included in a statement is for counsel to consider, striking a balance between the degree of sensitivity and the extent to which the information might assist the defence. Following the amendment earlier this year of the Magistrates Courts (Rules and Forms) Rules 1981, a witness address need not as a matter of course appear on statements circulated to other parties.

Prisons (Minimum Care Standards)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) the chief inspector of prisons and (b) the Prison Officers Association concerning the introduction of minimum care standards in prisons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I have received no representations from Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons about the introduction of a code of minimum standards in prisons. The Prison Officers Association has made such representations from time to time, most recently at a meeting on 11 April 1990.

Terence Rivett

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action has been taken to establish the whereabouts of Terence Rivett, a prisoner who absconded from Ford prison in 1989, since his answer to the right hon. Member for Woking of 26 October 1989, Official Report, column 618; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I will write to my right hon. Friend.

Public Order

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what representations he has received concerning the adequacy of existing public order laws relating to the publication of material and the incitement of hatred or violence; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will invite the Law Commission to examine and make recommendations relating to public order laws prohibiting the publication of material likely to incite hatred or violence against any religion, race or person; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The existing provisions in the Public Order Act 1986 are, in our view, sufficient to deal with situations that threaten public order. Representations are received from time to time about the scope and effectiveness of these provisions and should a strong case be made for amendment, it would be given most careful consideration. In the meantime, we have no plans to ask the Law Commission to review the legislation.

Quashed Convictions (Compensation)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines exist for compensating prisoners whose convictions have been quashed after long periods in gaol.

Mr. John Patten: Statutory provision for compensation for miscarriages of justice is contained in section 133 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988, and in addition a residual ex-gratia scheme exists on the basis of the statement made to the House by my right hon. Friend the then Home

Secretary, on 29 November 1985 at columns 689-90. Where the payment of compensation is considered to be justified, a note explaining the procedure for an independent assessor to determine the amount is supplied to the applicant. The applicant or his legal representative will be asked to provide any information they wish the assessor to take into account.

Race Relations

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the amount of grant aid paid under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966, in respect of the total budget for 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Waddington: A total of £89 million in 1988-89; £115 million in 1989-90. These figures are for the Home Office grant which accounts for 75 per cent. of total expenditure, the remainder being borne by the recipient local authorities; the latter figure also includes some back payments in respect of belated claims for grant.

Mr. John Harker

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why John Harker, prisoner S11R69121, in Her Majesty's prison Kirkham, was not interviewed as part of his Department's inquiry into his allegations of unjust imprisonment.

Mr. John Patten: The detailed material set out in John Harker's representations was carefully considered and an interview was not considered necessary.

Blasphemy

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will invite the Law Commission to examine and make recommendations relating to the blasphemy laws; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The Law Commission considered the laws relating to blasphemy and blasphemous libel as recently as 1985, in its report on "Offences Against Religion and Public Worship" (Law Commission No. 145, HC442). It would not be appropriate to ask the Law Commission to consider this subject again after such a comparatively short interval.

Football Matches (Policing)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department will be issuing the circular to police authorities with regard to the assessment of charging for the policing of football matches; and what criteria will be used in determining the full cost of providing police officers inside football grounds.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We shall issue the circular as soon as we have considered the comments of the organisations that we are consulting on the draft. Charging criteria are a matter for police authorities.

Broadcasting

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the effect the ultra high frequency wavelengths allotted to Channel 5 will have on reception by domestic television sets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Channel 5 transmission at UHF wavelengths will have no direct adverse effect on reception by domestic television sets. There is, however, the possibility of interference between the Channel 5 transmission and the output of a video cassette recorder or similar device which is used in association with a TV set. We estimate that something over 750,000 video cassette recorders will need to be returned or modified in order to prevent this interference. The Broadcasting Bill provides that the cost of the work should be met by the Channel 5 licensee.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to change the regulations governing television licence fees in sheltered accommodation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: No. Our views on this subject are already well known.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he intends to take to determine the total amounts paid by each independent television company for the acquisition of musical copyrights in each of the past three years.

Mr. Waddington: I have no plans to intervene in these commercial arrangements. But as the hon. Gentleman will be aware, the Director General of Fair Trading is currently inquiring into the relationship between the ITV companies and music publishers to see whether this would justify investigation under competition legislation.

Police (Videos)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to why uniformed police officers were photographing and video-taping the general public attending a festival in Finsbury Park on Sunday 3 June.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that photographs and film were taken at the festival as background material to help learn from policing on this occasion and brief officers for future events. The police have a responsibility at such events for public safety and the prevention of crime, and the filming at the festival will help ensure that future large-scale public events also pass off successfully. The filming took place for no more than 15 minutes of an event which lasted some 12 hours.

Immigration

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has about the number of visitors coming through immigration control from countries in the Caribbean over the last five years for which information is available; and how many visitors from Caribbean countries have been denied entry by immigration for each year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available information is published in table 1 of the annual Home Office Command Papers "Control of Immigration Statistics, United Kingdom" (Cmnd. 9863, 166, 415, 726 and 1124 for each year from 1985 to 1989 respectively), copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his best estimate as to how many applications for (a) adult registration with entitlement, (b) naturalisation and (c) registration of minors his Department (i) will receive and (ii) expects to grant in 1990-91.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 16 July 1990]: Information is not available in the exact form requested. We currently estimate that in the financial year 1990-91 we will receive the following applications:

	Numbers
Registration of adults	4,000
Registration of minors	8,500
Naturalisation	23,000

As explained in my reply on 20 June to a question from the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) at column 574, earlier forecasts of performance are having to be revised in the light of new information about intake, the disruption caused by the process to transfer of work to Liverpool and lower levels of output on the more difficult naturalisation casework than on registration. Until a stable pattern of output emerges following the completion of the process of work transfer, no reliable estimates of grants may be attempted.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for entry clearance from (a) wives, (b) husbands, (c) fiancés, (d) fiancées made at British posts in (1) New Delhi, (2) Bombay, (3) Calcutta, (4) Madras, (5) Dhaka, (6) Islamabad, (7) Karachi and (8) Colombo, for each quarter since January 1989, were (a) received, (b) granted and (c) refused; how many refusals at each post were (i) wholly and (ii) partly because the visa officer was not satisfied that the primary purpose of the marriage was not immigration; how many refusals at each post were (x) wholly and (y) partly because the visa officer was not satisfied that the couple could support and accommodate themselves without recourse to public funds; what was the refusal rate at each post; and what percentage of those refusals were (a) wholly and (b) partly on primary purpose grounds.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 16 July 1990]: The information requested on the Indian sub-continent is given in the tables. Where the numbers are small, the figures for individual posts have been combined. Information on refusals which takes account of successful appeals is not compiled for periods shorter than 12 months. Corresponding information for Colombo is not available centrally.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he authorised visas to enable Mr. Hassan Ahmed and Mr. Mustofa Mohammed Osman to join their relations in the United Kingdom as set out in his Department's letter dated 9 February to the hon. Member for Woolwich; what steps he has taken to ensure that the British embassy at Mogadishu implements this decision; and why these visas have not yet been issued.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have been unable to trace this particular case. If the hon. Member would care to let me have more details and the Home Office reference number, I will look into the matter and write to him.

Prisoners

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the governors of Brixton, Wormwood Scrubs, Holloway and Pentonville prisons as to how many of their inmates are on remand and are (a) untried or (b) unsentenced following the 31 March events in Trafalgar square.

Mr. Waddington: The numbers of unconvicted and convicted unsentenced prisoners held in those establishments on 24 July were:

Prison	Unconvicted	Convicted unsentenced
Brixton	755	83
Wormwood Scrubs	497	32
Holloway	199	45
Pentonville	254	28

It would involve disproportionate cost to establish how many of those prisoners faced charges arising from the Trafalgar square disturbance on 31 March.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will indicate the number of prisoners in police cells in Greater Manchester for the last date for which figures are available; and if he will place in the Library figures for 26 August and 26 September as soon as they are avaiable.

Mr. Waddington: On Wednesday 25 July, the latest date for which information is available, 313 prisoners were held in police cells in the Greater Manchester police force. I will write to the hon. Member providing figures for 26 August and 26 September as soon as they are available, and will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library.

Begging

Mr. Dickens: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to control the spread of illegal begging on the streets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Decisions about measures to control illegal begging on the streets are an operational matter for the police. The police have adequate powers to tackle begging and I understand they normally arrest where there is some element of threatening or intimidating behaviour.

Sex Offences

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints of rape and sexual assault against (a) serving policemen and (b) ex-policemen have been made in each of the last 10 years; and how many convictions resulted in each category.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Such information is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Police (Firearms)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with Greater Manchester police concerning the decision of Greater Manchester police to place a permanently mobilised group of armed police officers in Moss Side, Manchester.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None. The posting and deployment of authorised firearms officers, like all other officers, is an operational matter for the chief constable.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines he issues to police forces in England about the issuing and use of firearms by police officers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A copy of the Home Office guidelines which were issued to chief officers of police in March 1983 on the issue and use of firearms is in the Library.

Criminal Injuries

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present situation of Mr. A. M. Jama of Liverpool in relation to his claim for criminal injuries.

Mr. John Patten: I have asked the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, which is entirely responsible for administering the compensation scheme and determining individual applications, to write to the hon. Member.

Stop and Search

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is intended that the records of the ethnic origin of those stopped and searched under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act should be collated by the police force concerned to ensure that racially discriminatory practices are not occurring; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I will write to the hon. Member.

Security Industry

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will include within the options being considered for improving the regulation of the private security industry the statutory regulation of that industry;

(2) if he will include within the options being considered for regulation of the private security industry regulation of the terms and conditions of employees in that industry.

Mr. John Patten: No. The options that we are at present considering relate to improving the self-regulation of the private security industry, including the recruitment procedures followed within the industry.

Fire Service College

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement concerning future funding of the Fire Service college and the plans of Her Majesty's Government for its continued service to the public.

Mr. John Patten: We are consulting the Association of County Councils, the Association of Metropolitan Authorities and the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council on our proposals to introduce in stages new arrangements whereby fire brigades will be charged directly for the courses which their officers attend at the Fire Service college. We intend that the college should retain its premier position in the training of fire officers to deliver a fully effective service to the public.

Police (Graduates)

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for each of the last five years, how many graduates have joined the police service in England and Wales; how many graduates were serving in forces in England and Wales; and what proportion of the service's strength this represents.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is as follows:

England and Wales	492	5,376	4·45

Homosexuals

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether the Government have made or intend to make any investigation into the scale or pattern of violent attacks, motivated by homophobic prejudice, against lesbians and gay men;

(2) whether the Government have any plans to initiate a study of the value of keeping police records of incidents of anti-gay violence with a view to developing appropriate police countermeasures to stamp out homophobic attacks.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 2 July 1990]: We have no plans to do so. All such assaults are to be deplored in exactly the same way as any crime of violence. A high priority is attached to the investigation of violence offences, three quarters of which are cleared up by the police.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cambodia

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent communications he has received from Khieu Samphan of the Khmer Rouge about Her Majesty's Government's policy on Cambodia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Since the beginning of the year, two letters from Khieu Samphan have been addressed to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs about the work of the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council. Since we have no dealings with the Khmer Rouge, the letters have not been acknowledged.

Baltic States

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if visa facilities for travel to the United Kingdom could be established in the individual Baltic states.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are no plans to establish such facilities.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visas are granted annually to citizens of the Baltic states to travel to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No separate figures are available of visas issued to citizens of the Baltic states, most of whom still travel on Soviet travel documents.

Irish Republic

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met his counterpart from the Irish Republic; what matters relating to the Irish presidency of the European Community were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I last met the Irish Minister for Foreign Affairs at the Foreign Affairs Council on 16 July. The Irish presidency of the EC ended on 30 June and was not discussed in any detail.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what rules of procedure have been adopted for the fourth quinquennial review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in August.

Mr. Waldegrave: Draft rules of procedure will be put to the non-proliferation treaty review conference for adoption when the conference convenes in August.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals Her Majesty's Government have received from Nigeria in regard to prohibitions on the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear weapons states.

Mr. Waldegrave: A Nigerian proposal will be discussed at the forthcoming non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provisions will be made for the attendance at the upcoming fourth quinquennial review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty for (a) states not parties to the treaty, (b) non-governmental organisations and (c) international organisations with an interest in security matters; and what information he possesses in regard to the stated desire to attend of parties in (a), (b) and (c), respectively.

Mr. Waldegrave: Observer status at the review conference is open to non-party states, specialised agencies and regional intergovernmental organisations. With regard to non-governmental organisations I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 11 June to the hon. Member for Stockton, North (Mr. Cook). Applications for observer status are made to the secretary general of the review conference.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he, or any officials or Ministers in his Department were present at, or participated in, the colloquium on "Non-Proliferation in a Disarming World: Prospects for the 1990s", held in Geneva on 20 and 21 June;

(2) what actions have been taken by Her Majesty's Government to implement the recommendations set out in the final document of the third nuclear non-proliferation treaty review conference (NPT/CONF/III/64/1) in regard to (a) active involvement of non-proliferation treaty nuclear weapons states in nuclear disarmament negotiations, (b) resumption of negotiations in trilateral and multilateral fora towards a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty and (c) support for an international plutonium storage regime under international safeguards.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) on 25 July.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department received an invitation to attend the conference on the proliferation of nuclear and chemical weapons in London on 14 and 15 July; what information he has concerning the capability of Sweden to develop nuclear weapons; and whether he possesses any information as to the capacity of Sweden to simulate the effects of nuclear weapons test explosions without the direct use of computers.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 25 July to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang). As a party to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, Sweden has undertaken not to develop nuclear weapons.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals will be put forward by Her Majesty's Government at the fourth quinquennial review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 9 May to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang.).

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests have been received by Her Majesty's Government from non-nuclear weapon states parties to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty to be involved directly in nuclear arms reductions talks, pursuant to the commitment set out in preambular paragraph 10 of the treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: None.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what steps he has taken to encourage the Republic of South Africa to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty;

(2) what steps he has taken to encourage Zimbabwe to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty;

(3) what steps he has taken to encourage Namibia to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given on 28 February by my hon. Friend the then Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas).

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken in the five years since the third review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty to implement the recommendation of the final document of that conference (NPT/CONF/III/61/I) in the areas of nuclear disarmament.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 25 July to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang).

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report those non-governmental organisations and their respective concerns that have communicated with his Department on nuclear non-proliferation matters since 1 June.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have frequent contacts with non-governmental organisations and other interested parties on issues related to non-proliferation.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Warrington, North (Mr. Hoyle) on 4 July, Official Report, column 618, he will list all matters discussed in the current year at the European working group on non-proliferation referred to in that answer.

Mr. Waldegrave: Various matters relevant to the nuclear non-proliferation regime have been discussed in the working group on non-proliferation.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial and logistical contribution has been committed by the United Kingdom to the fourth quinquennial review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 11 June to the hon. Member for Stockton, North (Mr. Cook).

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representatives his Department had at the conference on chemical and nuclear weapons proliferation, organised by the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament at Camden town hall on 14 and 15 July.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 25 July to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang).

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representatives his Department had at the colloquium on the nuclear non-proliferation treaty organised by the Council for Arms Control at Chatham house, London, on 10 July; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office was represented by a senior official.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out those conclusions of the third quinquennial review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty that have been implemented to date; and what plans there are to implement any outstanding recommendations before the fourth nuclear non-proliferation treaty review conference in August.

Mr. Waldegrave: The recommendations contained in the final document of the third review conference are wide ranging and apply to a number of states and international organisations; most have been implemented.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with his counterparts in the Democratic Republic of Germany on the implications of the unification of Germany for the membership of that state in the process of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: None.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Ministers or officials from his Department last met the office of the Secretary General of the United Nations, or the United Nations department of disarmament affairs in regard to the forthcoming fourth quinquennial review conference of the non-proliferation treaty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We maintain close contact with the secretariat for the NPT review conference.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his French counterpart about France becoming a signatory on the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 25 July to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang).

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the United Kingdom representation at the forthcoming quinquennial review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty will be constituted.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 11 June to the hon. Member for Stockton, North (Mr. Cook).

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during his recent meeting with his counterpart from the German Democratic Republic, he discussed the forthcoming quinquennial review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with other European Community Foreign Ministers in preparation for the forthcoming quinquennial review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty; and whether it is intended that a common position will be adopted by the European nations at that conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: A joint declaration on non-proliferation was made by EC member states at the June European Council, but, as not all member states are parties to the non-proliferation treaty, there will be no common position at the review conference.

United Nations Assembly

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out all those resolutions on defence and disarmament put to the last and present general sessions of the United Nations; how the United Kingdom voted on these resolutions; and what was the result of the full vote on each of these resolutions.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I refer the hon. Member, however, to the United Nations documents, "Resolutions and Decisions Adopted by the General Assembly during the first part of its 43rd (44th) session" and "Resolutions and Decisions of the Security Council 1988 (1989)" which contain the information he requires and which are publicly available.

Hong Kong

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people have been charged under the summary offences ordinance in Hong Kong for each year in the last five years.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people have been charged in Hong Kong with collecting money in public without a permit for each year in the last five years.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Although no detailed analysis has been made, the Hong Kong Government consider it likely that only a very small number of prosecutions have been undertaken in recent years.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Hong Kong Government intend to ban the use of loudspeakers by any member of the public.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect on civil and political rights in Hong Kong of the recent prosecutions under the summary offences ordinance.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: It would not be appropriate to comment on the details of specific cases at this stage since the matter is sub judice pending the outcome of current court hearings. But it would not be right to view the current controls on the use of loudspeakers in public and the public collection of money as an infringement of civil liberties. These laws are of long standing and are widely understood, and supported, in the community. It should be noted that the international covenant on civil and political rights provides that the exercise of the right to freedom of expression and of peaceful assembly may be subject to restrictions necessary, inter alia, for the respect and protection of the rights and freedoms of others. The restrictions on the use of loudspeakers is imposed very much with this in mind as excessive noise in a public place may create nuisance for members of the community.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Hong Kong Government intend to repeal the summary offences ordinance.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people have been charged with using a loud hailer without a permit in Hong Kong for each year in the last five years.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Because prosecution records in Hong Kong are not computerised, the information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate the Hong Kong

Government are able to make of the total amount collected in the pro-democracy rallies of 1989; and whether anyone was charged with the offence of collecting money without a permit.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Hong Kong Government have not made an estimate of the total amount of money collected at large-scale rallies during 1989 and do not consider it appropriate to do so. In the immediate aftermath of June 4 1989, when public emotions ran high, the law was applied in a flexible manner and no one was charged with collecting money in public without a permit.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the proposed Bill of Rights for Hong Kong will entail the repeal of the summary offences ordinance or any part of it.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Existing legislation in Hong Kong, including the summary offences ordinance, is being reviewed to ensure that all provisions are in line with the proposed Bill of Rights.

Thailand

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when (a) the naval and air attaché, (b) the defence and military attaché and (c) the attaché (defence) presently attached to the British embassy in Thailand began their tours of duty.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The current naval and air attaché at the British embassy in Bangkok began his tour in November 1989; the defence and military attaché arrived in October 1988. There is no one at present filling the post of attaché (defence).

Conservation Convention

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support a conservation convention; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I shall write to the hon. and learned Member.

Immigration

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the waiting times for different queues for interviews in relation to entry clearance for the United Kingdom at Islamabad.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As at 31 May, the estimated waiting times in months are:

	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4
Islamabad	3	5	9	19

Settlement queues are organised as follows:

Q1 Persons with a claim to the right of abode, dependant relatives over 70 years, special compassionate cases.
Q2 All spouses, and all children under 18 years.
Q3 Fiance(e)s and others applying for the first time for settlement.
Q4 Re-applicants.

Visitors

Due to seasonal high demand, applicants for visit visas in Islamabad requiring a full interview can expect to wait up to five days.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There are two special advisers, Mr. Lidington and Mr. Fraser. Their role is to consider the presentational and domestic political aspects of policy issues and to advise the Secretary of State and Ministers.

It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers. They are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Sri Lanka to grant direct entry for humanitarian aid agencies and to allow Commonwealth or United Nations mediators to negotiate a peaceful end to the civil war.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No. We are not aware that the Sri Lankan Government have restricted access for aid agencies. A number are already at work there, and the international committee of the Red Cross is currently supervising convoys of relief supplies to the north. President Premadasa has already spoken of involving the international community in any future talks with the LTTE.

Nuclear Power

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the United Kingdom representation will be constituted at the 34 annual conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna in September.

Mr. Waldegrave: In addition to members of the United Kingdom's permanent mission to the International Atomic Energy Agency, it is intended that two officials from the Department of Energy and one from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will attend the 34th annual conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna in September.

Whales and Dolphins

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to his counterparts in Japan, Taiwan and South Korea concerning the deaths of whales and dolphins in the south Pacific due to fine-mesh drift nets used by fishing fleets from those countries.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Government of Japan and the Republic of South Korea are well aware of our concern about the use of large-scale drift nets in the south Pacific. We and our EC partners supported the United Nations resolution calling for its cessation by the end of June 1991 and welcomed the endorsement of this resolution by the 42nd annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission. We also welcomed the recent decision of the Japanese Government to suspend drift net fishing in the south Pacific one year in advance of the deadline stipulated in the United Nations resolution. We do not have diplomatic relations with Taiwan, and have no Government-to-Government dealings with the authorities there.

Overseas Civil Service (Pensions)

Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to bring the way in which the pensions of expatriate members of the overseas civil service in Hong Kong are paid into line with that prevailing in the other territories of the British empire.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 19 July]: There are no plans to change the present arrangements for paying pensions to members of Her Majesty's overseas civil service who have served in Hong Kong.

Aid and Trade Provision

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all aid and trade provision projects from 1979 to date where his Department nominated lead companies, naming the companies and if they are a subsidiary, also listing the name of the parent company; what are the sums of money involved including the export value and the ATP element; and whether there was any other United Kingdom Government support for these projects including any assistance from the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Living Standards

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures to show the estimate of the annual rise in living standards since 1979 of (a) non-pensioner couples with children, (b) non-pensioner couples without children, (c) non-pensioner single people, (d) non-pensioner single people with children, (e) single pensioners and (f) pensioner couples up to the latest available date.

Mr. Scott: This information relates to incomes as calculated for households below average income, published 23 July 1990; incomes before housing costs.

Estimate of annual percentage change 1979-87

	Per cent.
Non-pensioner couple with children	2·8
Non-pensioner couple without children	2·2
Non-pensioner single people	2·5
Non-pensioner single people with children	1·2
Single pensioners	2·7
Pensioner couples	3·0

The figures are subject to sampling error, particularly in the case of non-pensioner single people with children. In 1987 the sample size for non-pensioner single people with children was 394—4·3 per cent. of the total sample.

Incomes

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish an estimate of how much the real equivalent incomes of the bottom 5 per cent. and the top 5 per cent. of the population rose between 1978-79 and 1989-90, after payment of housing costs.

Mr. Scott: Because of the limitations of sample size and the variability of incomes at extremes of the income distribution, reliable estimates are not available for the lowest and highest 5 per cent. However, changes in the median incomes of those in the lower half of the income distribution are recorded in "Households Below Average Income, 1981-87", copies of which are available in the Library. When making comparisons with real income changes at the highest extreme of the income distribution, which rose by some 40 per cent. for the 95th percentile between 1979 and 1987, it is important to remember that household types, in terms of the numbers of earners per household, income composition and average tax rates are substantially different at the highest extreme, and are susceptible to greater variability over time. Figures beyond 1987 are not available.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will state (a) how many people would gain, (b) what would be the average gain and (c) what would be the cost as a result of raising the level of savings under which housing benefit is payable to £10,000 on the assumption that (i) the rules for other benefits are unaltered, (ii) the interest actually received on savings and not an arbitrarily assumed return is used in assessing benefit and (iii) no change is made to the rule that those with savings under £3,000 receive benefit in full.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The level of savings under which housing benefit remains payable was increased in April to £16,000. On the assumption, therefore, that this £16,000 upper limit is used rather than £10,000 and the income counted in the calculation of housing benefit is the actual interest received rather than the assumed tariff income, it is estimated that 170,000 existing recipients of housing benefit would gain an average of £4·50 per week and 30,000 people would start receiving an average of £7·20 per week. These gains would go to those with higher levels of capital. However, for those with savings not far above the £3,000 lower level there would be an average loss of £1·40 a week: this adverse effect would reduce housing benefit for 110,000 present beneficiaries, and remove entitlement entirely from a further 10,000. The total cost would be around £40 million.

It is not necessarily the case in the current housing benefit scheme that people with savings under £3,000 receive benefit in full. Savings of £3,000 or less do not affect the amount of income counted in the calculation of housing benefit. Where savings are £3,000 or less and total calculated income is equal to or less than the relevant applicable amount, maximum housing benefit is payable. However, many people with no savings or with savings of or below £3,000 have incomes in excess of the applicable amount, and this excess income reduces their maximum housing benefit by the amount of the taper.

Benefit Changes

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all the changes to (a) national insurance benefits and (b) means-tested benefits since 1987, with (i) numbers affected, (ii) additional expenditure, (iii) additional savings and (iv) net cost of each change.

Mr. Scott: It is not possible to collate simply, and on a common basis in the way requested, the effects of a complex succession of interacting benefit changes. In particular the introduction of income support, family credit and the new housing benefit scheme was a major structural reform and the effect of these changes cannot be simply stated: information about the structural effects was provided by the illustrative figures published in the booklet "Impact of the reformed structure of income-related benefits", a copy of which is in the Library. Other details of these and other major benefit changes are published in the public expenditure White Papers for the relevant years.

Pensioners

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures for the latest year available for Scotland showing the number of (a) single and (b) married retirement pensioners with gross weekly incomes excluding state pension benefits of any category and housing benefit and community charge benefit, at the levels of (i) less than £5, (ii) £5 to £10, (iii) £10 to £15, (iv) £15 to £20, (v) £20 to £30, (vi) £30 to £40, (vii) £40 to £50, (viii) £50 to £60, (ix) £60 to £70, (x) £70 to £80, (xi) £80 to £90, (xii) £90 to £100 and (xiii) over £100.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The percentage of pensioners with incomes excluding supplementary benefit and housing benefit are as follows:

	Per cent.
Less than £5	36
£5 to £39·99	32
£40 and over	32

Source: 1987 Family Expenditure Survey.
Note: The income bands requested have been aggregated to provide figures based on adequate statistical samples; for the same reason there is no disaggregation between single and married pensioners.

Earnings

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) men and (b) women (i) in total and (ii) in each region earn above the national insurance upper earnings limit, divided into those on basic rate and the top rate of tax.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is estimated that during 1990-91 about 3·3 million employees will earn more than the upper earnings limit for class 1 national insurance contributions and that of these 2·9 million will be men and 400,000 will be women.

Of these, it is estimated that 1·8 million men and 300,000 women will be basic rate taxpayers and 1·1 million men and 100,000 women will pay tax at the higher rate.

It is estimated that about 200,000 self-employed basic rate taxpayers and about 300,000 higher rate taxpayers earn more than the upper profits limit for national insurance contributions. Of these some 10 to 15 per cent. are women.

The information is not available on a regional basis.

Occupational Deafness

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans to extend the categories of claimants eligible for industrial disablement benefit on the grounds of occupational deafness.

Mr. Scott: We are awaiting a report from the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council on measures to improve the administration and operation of disablement benefit provision for occupational deafness. This report will be considered and evaluated before any firm decision is made whether to extend further the list of prescribed occupations.

Pensions

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to calculate future increases in pensions on the basis of a definite weekly sum above the rate of inflation.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government have honoured their commitment to maintain the value of the state retirement pension in line with prices. What matters most to pensioners is the value of their total income from whatever source. The success of the Government's policies is demonstrated by the 31 per cent. real-terms growth in pensioners' average total net income between 1979 and 1987.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what has been the saving in public expenditure from the break in the earnings link in the uprating of pensions each year since 1979 and cumulatively, at current and 1990 prices;

(2) further to his answer of 20 March, Official Report, columns 594-95, regarding the gross cost of uprating the basic national insurance pension in line with average earnings each year, if he will now give the figures revalued at 1990-91 prices, including the figure for 1990-91; and if he will also give the figures including the gross cost of uprating the invalidity pension and the widow's pension in line with average earnings, also at 1990-91 prices;

(3) if, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Oldham, West of 20 March, Official Report, columns 594-95, regarding the gross cost since 1980 of uprating the retirement pension in line with average earnings, he will now give the figure for 1990-91; and if he will give the gross cost cumulatively since 1980 of uprating the invalidity pension and widow's pension, in addition to the basic retirement pension, in line with average earnings.

Mrs Gillian Shephard [holding answers 5 June and 14 June 1990]: The information requested is set out in the tables.

Table 1.
Gross additional cost of uprating retirement pension in line with the higher of prices or earnings since 1979.

1980-81	nil	nil
1981-82	0·22	0·35
1982-83	0·35	0·54
1983-84	0·43	0·62

Year	Current prices £ billion	April 1990 prices £ billion
1984-85	0·92	1·27
1985-86	1·10	1·43
1986-87	1·95	2·47
1987-88	2·78	3·38
1988-89	3·63	4·17
1989-90	4·50	4·80

Table 2

Gross additional cost of uprating retirement pension, widow's pension and invalidity pension in line with the higher of prices or earnings since 1980 (Current Prices).

£ billion

Year	Retirement pension	Widow's pension	Invalidity pension
1980-81	0·05	[1]—	[1]—
1981-82	0·26	0·02	0·04
1982-83	0·39	0·03	0·05
1983-84	0·47	0·03	0·07
1984-85	0·96	0·05	0·14
1985-86	1·14	0·06	0·16
1986-87	2·00	0·10	0·29

1988-89	3·68	0·15	0·60
1989-90	4·57	0·18	0·79
1990-91	5·56	0·21	1·00

[1] less than £0·01 billion.

Figures on the additional cost of retirement pensions in table 2 are higher than those in table 1. Table 2 uses the actual rate of benefit paid in November 1979 to calculate the additional costs. This actual rate is higher than the rate that would have been paid had the "earnings or prices" rule been applied. Table 1 uses the lower implied rate of benefit in 1979 and so the costs for all subsequent years are lower.

Table 3

Gross additional cost of uprating retirement pension, widow's pension and invalidity pension in line with the higher of prices or earnings since 1980 (April 1990 Prices)

£ billion

Year	RP	WP	IVP

1988-89	4·22	0·17	0·69
1989-90	4·87	0·19	0·84
1990-91	5·56	0·21	1·00
Total	25·22	1·12	4·08

The additional cost of uprating by this method for the benefits in table 3 would imply an increase in national insurance contributions of £4·63 a week for a person on average earnings.

The Government Actuary in his latest quinquennial review has indicated that national insurance contributions would have to rise even more steeply in the future if benefits were to be uprated in this way.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated reduction in public expenditure as a result of the changes in SERPS provided for in the Social Security Act 1986 for each year up to 2035, at 1990 constant prices.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 6 June 1990]: Estimated reduction in gross public expenditure as a result of the changes in SERPS provided for in the 1986 Social Security Act at 1990 prices is as follows:

Year	£ billions
1995-96	[1]—
2001-02	[1]—
2005-06	1
2015-16	3

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the cost of reducing the pensionable age for men from 65 to 60 years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest estimate based on 1985-86 benefit rates of the net cost of reducing pensionable age for men to 60 years is £3,000 million.

Disability Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on implementing a national disability allowance scheme based on attendance allowance, with the top rate based on a higher scale of night and day allowance, and the lower rates based on the level of disability; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We have received comments on our proposals for disability allowance from more than 70 organisations of and for disabled people and from a large number of individual people with disabilities. We regularly meet the disability organisations, and I met the Disability Benefits Consortium—an umbrella group representing more than 250 disability organisations on 5 April to discuss their views on "The Way Ahead". We shall continue to take into account the views of interested organisations and individuals while work is progressing on the two new benefits, disability allowance and disability employment credit.

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps are being taken to ensure people discharged from mental and care institutions into bed and breakfast hotels or temporary accommodation have adequate support.

Mr. Scott: People discharged from mental and care institutions into bed and breakfast hotels or temporary accommodation are eligible for the full range of social security benefits in the usual way. They will also be eligible for support from the health and personal social services which are the responsibility in England of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

Rape (Compensation)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons compensation for rape awarded by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board is subject to deduction from income support; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The vast majority of payments from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board have no effect whatsoever on social security benefits. Under income support, the first £3,000 of capital is disregarded and an income equivalent to £1 a week is assumed for every £250, or part of £250, of capital over £3,000 up to £8,000. However, any income derived from that capital is completely ignored.

In addition, compensation payments arising from a personal injury which are placed on trust are wholly disregarded for at least two years. We propose to disregard these trust funds entirely from 1 October, although any actual payments made by the trustees will be treated in the normal way.

These rules assist claimants and ensure that long-term provision can be made for those requiring long-term care.

Benefit Claimants (Treatment)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the instances in which a woman, single, married or cohabiting, is treated differently, for the purpose of claiming and receipt of benefit, than a man would be in the same circumstances.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is in the table.

Benefit	Issue	Women	Men

	Disentitlement of students on full time course of study	Disentitlement ceases at age 60	Disentitlement ceases at age 65

Child Benefit

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current real value of child benefit as against the level in April 1987; and what would be the annual cost of restoring child benefit to its April 1987 level (a) assuming a similar increase in child dependancy additions paid with income-related benefits and (b) assuming no other benefit increases.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The April 1987 rate of child benefit —£7·25—would be worth £8·91 in April 1990 on the basis of the movement in the index of retail prices between those months. The costs of such an increase would be £1,030 million gross and £780 million net.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what would be the net cost of (a) abolishing, (b) reducing to one year and (c) reducing to six months, the two-year length of service qualifications for full-time workers employed for over 16 hours a week for receipt of statutory maternity pay;

(2) what would be the net additional cost of paying maternity allowance to (a) all full-time pregnant workers, (b) all part-time pregnant workers and (c) all pregnant workers;

(3) what would be the net cost of (a) abolishing, (b) reducing to one year and (c) reducing to six months, the five-year length of service qualification for part-time workers employed for at least eight but under 16 hours for receipt of statutory maternity pay;

(4) what would be the net cost of paying statutory maternity pay at the higher rate of nine tenths of the employee's average weekly earnings for the whole of the maternity pay period if the maternity pay period were (a) 18 weeks, (b) 26 weeks, (c) 39 weeks and (d) 52 weeks.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the net cost of abolishing the capital rule for receipt of the maternity expenses grant for families claiming income support or other income-related benefits.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the net cost of reintroducing the national insurance maternity grant set at a level of £100 per child.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The net cost of paying a universal maternity grant of £100 is estimated as about £56 million. This figure assumes maternity payments under the social fund would no longer be payable.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: At present there are no political advisers or public relations advisers employed to advise Ministers in this Department. The Department is in the process of recruiting one and it is likely that they will be appointed with effect from 16 August. Salary has yet to be agreed.

Income Support

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the net cost of raising the income support rate for claimants aged 18 to 24 years to the level of the rate payable for claimants aged 25 years and over.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The estimated cost for income-related benefits would be in the region of £250 million.

Source: Modelled using data drawn from the 1985-86-87 Family Expenditure surveys and the 1989 annual statistical inquiry.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the net cost of restoring entitlement to income support to all 16 and 17-year-olds at (a) current 18 to 24-year-old levels and (b) at full adult levels.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The estimated annual cost of restoring entitlement to income support to all 16 and 17-year-olds at (a) current 18 to 24-year-old levels of personal allowance and (b) at full adult levels would be around £10 million and £150 million respectively.

Costs are based on existing benefit rates and youth training allowances; the actual cost would also depend on the number of people on youth training.

Source: The 1985-86-87 Family Expenditure surveys and the 1989 annual statistical inquiry.

Pensioners (Housing Benefit)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether pensioners over 75 years of age living in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole have been paid the additional housing benefit to which they are entitled following the Government's changes in the rules for those aged over 75 years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The day-to-day administration of housing benefit is the responsibility of local authorities. We are not aware that councils in Scotland had any particular difficulty in implementing the changes to the housing benefit scheme in October 1989.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost to the national insurance fund of allowing (a) employees and (b) employers to contract out of national insurance contributions for receipt of unemployment benefit at the current contracting out rate for occupational and personal pensions, assessing the take-up rate as (a) 10 per cent., (b) 20 per cent. and (c) 50 per cent.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Such estimates cannot be made on the basis of the assumptions provided. The net cost to the national insurance fund of introducing a system of contracting-out in respect of unemployment benefit would depend on the extent to which expenditure was reduced and the size of the rebate given. The rebate for occupational and personal pensions is based on the cost to pension schemes of providing guaranteed minimum pensions. It would not be appropriate to use that rebate as a basis for producing the estimates requested.

Disability Premium

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the estimated cost would be to his Department if the part-time earnings disregard for those who qualify for the disability premium in income support were to be raised by (a) £1 per week and (b) £5 per week.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The estimated cost in income support of raising the earnings disregard for those who qualify for the disability premium would be £500,000 for a £1 a week increase and £2 million for a £5 a week increase.

Fazakerley Resettlement Unit

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, in the context of the current situation in respect of the Fazakerley resettlement unit, he will make a further statement, pursuant to that of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on 27 June, House of Lords Official Report, columns 1696-97.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: As my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary made clear, it is our policy that no resettlement unit will close until suitable replacement facilities are available. Fazakerley resettlement unit is scheduled to close on 31 March 1991; suitable replacement facilities will be available.

Retirement Pension

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the annual cost, net of tax, of raising the basic retirement pension for single people by £5 per week and the married couple's pension by £8 per week (a) assuming a similar increase in income-related benefits for pensioners, including invalidity pensioners and (b) assuming no other benefit increases.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) single lower limb amputees and (b) double lower limb amputees receive the mobility allowance.

Mr. Scott: I regret that information cannot be provided in the detail requested. The available information shows that there are 8,240 amputees with current awards of mobility allowance.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has decided on the criteria which will determine the circumstances in which deaf-blind people will be treated as being unable to walk or virtually unable to walk to enable them to become entitled to mobility allowance; and what plans he has to ensure that deaf-blind people take full advantage of the extension to the mobility allowance scheme.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 22 February 1990]: The criteria were set out in the Mobility Allowance Amendment Regulations 1990 which were made on 20 March. Information about the extension was included in the new editions of the relevant leaflets which were published in April. We have been monitoring claims that have been received from deaf-blind people and we are contacting representatives of these people to discuss whether further steps need to be taken to ensure that they are aware of the new arrangements.

Benefit Deductions

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants have had deductions made from his Department's benefits because they are in arrears with their poll tax; and if he will publish the figures for each of his Department's offices.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Deductions in respect of community charge arrears can only be made from income support. Information on the numbers of deductions in place is collected centrally on a quarterly basis. The latest available figures are for May 1990. I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Nellist) on 2 July at columns 460-61.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Norfolk, South-West (Mrs. Shephard) will reply to the letters dated 4 June and 20 July from the hon. Member for South Hams about James Woodward of Brixham regarding community charge benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I replied to my hon. Friend on 25 July.

Departmental Offices (Relocation)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to consult local councils, hon. Members and other interested parties before any decision is taken to relocate his Department's offices following his Department's operational strategy exercise.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the grouping together of existing local offices in local management units as part of the local office network review, details of which were given in a written reply to the hon. Member for Rochdale (Sir C. Smith) on 11 July at columns 242-43.

I should make it clear that we are not talking about closing offices to the public, but, rather, an administrative amalgamation for management purposes. Once the geography of the LMUs has been decided, the local managers will be appointed and will begin to develop detailed plans for the organisation of work within their units. In drawing up these plans, managers will consult widely within the community.

Death Benefit

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated annual savings as a result of the changes made to death benefit payments.

Mr. Scott: The estimated cost in 1989-90 of continuing to pay death grant at £30 per person is £20 million. The cost in 1989-90 of funeral payments from the social fund is approximately £24 million. Due to insufficient information, it is not possible to estimate the likely cost in 1989-90 of funeral payments that would have been incurred under the previous supplementary benefit scheme.

Elderly People Homes

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will issue guidance to local authorities wishing to transfer elderly residents' homes to independent trusts while maintaining full eligibility for his Department's benefit entitlements; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The provision of guidance to local authorities is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health. Awards of benefit in an individual case are a matter for the independent adjudicating authorities. The enhanced levels of income support are generally available only to residents in homes registered under the Registered Homes Act 1984 who satisfy the income, capital and other tests for income support and for whom local authorities have not arranged care.

A local authority considering transferring residential care homes to the independent sector needs to satisfy itself as registering authority that the homes in question are properly registered under the Registered Homes Act 1984; and, as social services authority, it needs to satisfy the adjudication officer that it has not arranged the care of residents with the new proprietors. The authority will also need to satisfy itself that it will still be able to provide care for people for whom it is not otherwise available.

Benefits (Young People)

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what independent research he is proposing into the way in which the benefit provisions for 16 and 17-year-olds are working.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have carefully considered the representations from various individuals and organisations about the benefit provision for 16 and 17-year-olds.

From the evidence so far presented, we have not been persuaded of the need to make any major changes to existing arrangements. However, we want to ensure that we fully understand how young people are affected. For this we need statistically reliable information on how the income support rules are working in practice, and I am pleased to announce that, on the basis of a competitive tendering exercise, a contract has been awarded to the research agency MORI to undertake independent wide-ranging research into this area.

The research will have two main elements. First, it will look at a representative sample of 500 successful and unsuccessful applications for income support under the "severe hardship" provisions. This will provide information on young people's understanding and attitudes towards the benefit system, their experience of training and the labour market and what happens to them after a "severe hardship" application has been decided.

Secondly, the survey will collect detailed qualitative data on young people's experience of the benefit system. It will also offer some insight into the effect benefit withdrawal has had on the likelihood of young people leaving home. It will gain information on the circumstances and particular difficulties facing groups of special interest, including girls in the early stages of pregnancy and young people leaving local authority care.

The MORI survey will be complemented by research that the Training Agency will undertake to ascertain what happens to "severe hardship" applicants who have applied to enter a youth training place.

The research will start shortly and will complement the monitoring arrangements already operated by the Department and the Training Agency. These have led us to make a number of helpful adjustments to our procedures over the last 12 months and to improve the support for certain vulnerable groups. We expect the results from the research early in 1991.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the latest estimates of the number of households receiving housing benefit in England showing (a) the division between those who also receive income support and those who do not, (b) the division between council tenants and others and (c) the division between pensioner households, lone-parent families, two-parent families and others;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the latest estimates of the average amount of housing benefit paid in England, showing (a) the division between those households who receive income support and those who do not, (b) the division between rent rebates and rent allowances and (c) the division between pensioner households, lone-parent families, two-parent families and others;

(3) if he will publish in the Official Report the latest estimates of the cost of housing benefit in England showing (a) the division between those households who receive income support and those who do not, (b) the division between rent rebates and rent allowances and (c) the division between pensioner households, lone-parent families, two-parent families and others;

Mr. Scott [holding answer 25 June 1990]: The latest estimates of the numbers of households and the average amounts of benefit paid are in table 1. Information is not fully available in the form requested.

The total expenditure figures in table 2 are derived from local authority estimates. The breakdown into client groups is achieved by modelling based on information from local authorities and the family expenditure survey. The local authority estimates do not separate expenditure into housing benefit paid with, or without, receipt of income support.

Local Government Finance

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to his replies to the right hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham, 28 June, Official Report, columns 352-53, if he will tabulate figures, as in his Department's tax benefit model tables, setting out for each of the families chosen the components of gross incomes each of the deductions from gross income and the resulting replacement ratios; and what the replacement ratios would be if the non-householder families did not have to pay community charge, and if the couple with two children were paying average local authority rates in 1989-90, uprated, instead of community charge.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 17 July 1990]: The available information is set out in the tables.

Pursuant to my replies of 28 June, at columns 352-53, it has been discovered that the information on replacement ratios given earlier was incorrect because no allowance was made for the work expenses specified. Corrected information is incorporated in the tables.

The results in the tables remain arbitrary. They cannot reflect, except by chance, the actual circumstances of particular people and cannot claim to be representative of the population at large. Because of the different nature of community charge compared with the old rating system, it is not possible to apply a simple uprating factor to the latter.

Household Incomes

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will publish a table showing the rise in real household incomes between 1979 and 1987, for the average and for all decile groups broken down by family status in the manner of his answer to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South of 29 July 1988, Official Report, columns 815-17;

(2) if he will publish a table showing the rise in real household incomes between 1979 and 1987, broken down by economic type, for all decile groups and the average;

(3) if he will publish a table showing the rise in real income between (a) 1979 and 1985, and (b) 1979 and 1987, broken down by (i) family type and (ii) economic type for all decile groups; and if he will show the average before and after housing costs.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 13 June 1990]: The information requested is in the tables.

Owing to the fact that when quintile groups are broken down as in the tables, the sample sizes are relatively small, these figures are liable to sampling error. The figures for the categories "Sick and Disabled"—with a sample size of 272—"Lone Parent"—293 on economic type and 394 on family type—and "Other"—606—are particularly prone to sampling error.

Social Fund

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he is satisfied that sufficient application forms for the social fund are available at his Department's offices throughout the Yorkshire region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We are satisfied that sufficient application forms for assistance from the social fund are available at local Department of Social Security offices in the Yorkshire region.

The social fund application form used for both community care grants and budgeting loans is currently undergoing revision with the aim of making it easier for applicants to complete. I understand that some offices in the Yorkshire area have recently experienced temporary difficulty in maintaining stocks of the existing form. Contingency plans have been put into place, and all offices should now have sufficient stocks to meet demand.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the monthly recommended proposed spending levels for social fund expenditure for the current year.

Mr. Scott: The figures set out in the table show the national anticipated expenditure profile for 1990-91.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many individuals were in receipt of (i) unemployment benefit, (ii) income support and income support premiums, (iii) family credit, (iv) housing benefit, (v) child benefit and (vi) one-parent benefit; and what were the average payments made in (a) Wales, (b) the administrative area of Snowdonia national park, (c) the district of Meirionnydd and (d) the sub-district of Bala and Penllyn, during the past 12 months.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 5 July 1990]: The table sets out the information requested for Wales. Separate information is not readily available for the sub-districts of Snowdonia national park, Meirionnydd, Bala and Penllyn.

Nurses

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing for each of the health authorities in Wales the latest figures for (a) the number of appeals by nurses on clinical gradings, (b) the number of these which have succeeded and (c) the number which have been rejected.

Mr. Grist: The latest information available is as shown in the table:

Press Officers

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many press officers are employed by his Department.

Mr. David Hunt: At present my Department employs eight press officers, one of whom also works for the Department of Employment.

Mental Handicap Institutions

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what checks authorities are (a) empowered to make and (b) obliged to make in the event of (i) a change of ownership and (ii) a change of management in respect of a private establishment for mentally handicappod people.

Mr. Grist: Change of ownership and management in respect of independent sector homes for people with a mental handicap have to be registered with the appropriate authority which is empowered under section 9 and 25 of the Registered Homes Act 1984 to refuse registration if the new or proposed owner or manager is not considered to be a fit person. Schedule 1 to the Residential Care Homes Regulation 1984 (SI 1984 No. 1345) sets out the information which must be supplied by all applicants for registration. It is the registration authority's responsibility to verify this information and follow up any points of concern.

Planning Policy

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when his Department will publish a report on planning policy and the use of section 52 arrangements in Wales.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) on 16 July by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

Cook-chill Methods (NHS)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy that cook-chill methods should not be introduced into national health service institutions in Wales pending fresh investigations and subsequent detailed advice from his Department.

Mr. Grist: It is a matter for local health authorities to consider how to provide catering services in a safe and effective way, and this may include the consideration of a cook-chill system.

Detailed guidelines on cook-chill and cook-freeze catering systems were issued to the NHS in Wales in July 1989.

Prescribing Costs

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy in relation to the transfer of prescribing costs from hospitals to general practitioners in those circumstances where patients attend out-patient clinics (a) on a continuing basis and (b) following treatment.

Mr. Grist: The Department's policy on hospital out-patient prescribing is set out in circular HN (76) 69 which states that prescribing costs rest with the doctor with clinical responsibility, although this does not preclude negotiation between GP and consultant in individual cases.

Disability

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what additional resources he intends to make available to (a) voluntary organisations and (b) statutory bodies in Wales in 1991 to promote awareness and facilities in respect of disability.

Mr. Grist: Decisions on the level of central Government resources to be provided in 1991-92 will be taken as part of the current public expenditure round.

Road System Management

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the units or divisions responsible for the road system in Wales together with their addresses, directors, and the last prior professional appointment of those directors.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The trunk road system in Wales is the responsibility of the Welsh Office highways directorate which is mainly based at the Government Buildings, Ty-Glas road, Llanishen, Cardiff. The Director of Highways, Mr. K. J. Thomas BSc CEng FICE FIHT, was previously deputy director at the Property Services Agency's southern region at Reading.

Other roads in Wales are the responsibility of county councils as local highways authorities.

National Curriculum

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will publish the consultative document sent to local education authorities in respect of a statistical model of the resources required to implement the national curriculum in Wales;

(2) if he will list and publish the responses he has received in respect of his consultative document on a statistical model of the resources required to implement the national curriculum in Wales;

(3) if he will give details of the timetable for responses to his consultative document in respect of a statistical model of the resources required to implement the national curriculum in Wales;

(4) if he will give full details of the basis of the statistical model being produced to analyse the number of teachers needed to deliver the national curriculum in Welsh secondary schools;

(5) what progress has been made towards formulating a statistical model of the resources needed to implement the national curriculum in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: An initial statistical model aimed at estimating the number of teachers required to deliver the national curriculum in Wales was produced last year. The assumptions made in the model were circulated to the local education authorities in Wales. A copy of the letter is being deposited in the Library of the House. The assumptions made with regard to teachers of Welsh were discussed in detail with the LEAs and the model is being reworked to take account of those discussions; of changes in pupil numbers; and in the light of more recent guidance on the delivery of the national curriculum.

The revised estimates of the number of teachers required to deliver the national curriculum will be available in the autumn. These will be published along with the assumptions made in the statistical model.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will publish his proposals for history in the national curriculum.

Mr. David Hunt: I am publishing today my proposals for attainment targets and programmes of study for history in Wales. I have based them on the advice of the History Committee for Wales whose final report was published on 12 June. The working group, chaired by Professor Rees Davies, produced a balanced and carefully thought out curriculum which I am proposing to adopt in full. I am proposing some amendments to the structure for assessment to reflect the advice of the School Examinations and Assessment Council and the working group themselves. I am consulting the Curriculum Council for Wales and a wide range of educational interests on the proposals and I have asked for their responses by 2 November. The working group's report is already in the Library, and I shall also place a copy of my proposals in the Library of the House.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what conclusions he has come to on the extent of additional resources, including the number of teachers, required to implement the national curriculum in Wales;

(2) what extra funds he intends to make available to facilitate the proper and full implementation of the national curriculum in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The introduction of the national curriculum should not of itself require a much larger teaching force than at present. Estimates of the number of teachers required by subject are being compiled and will show that a different mix of teaching skills will be required in the future. We will publish these estimates in the autumn.

The successful introduction of the national curriculum will also require considerable in-service training of existing teachers and expenditure on the preparation of materials. These are being funded through the LEA training grant scheme and education support grants; expenditure related to the national curriculum under these schemes was increased to almost £10 million in 1990-91 from under £7 million in the previous year. In addition nearly £3 million of the Welsh language specific grant is being directed to projects which support the national curriculum. The Curriculum Council for Wales is being funded at over £1 million a year to develop support for teachers and the School Examinations and Assessment Council receives over £1 million to develop assessment of the national curriculum in Wales.

Rail Services

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will have discussions with British Rail regarding the effect of proposed timetable changes on the economy of Mid Glamorgan and South Glamorgan.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I will raise this when I meet the chairman of British Rail.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what steps he intends to take to identify (a) the specific communities affected and (b) the environmental, social and economic impact on those communities of implementation of the proposed reduction in rail services in South Glamorgan and Mid Glamorgan;

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent of the impact of fares increases proposed by British Rail for South Wales on the economy of Mid Glamorgan and South Glamorgan;

(3) what assessment he has made of (a) the environmental impact, (b) the impact on road congestion and (c) the impact on the economy of Mid Glamorgan and South Glamorgan of the service reductions proposed by British Rail to take effect in October.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Levels of service and fares are operational matters for the commercial judgment of British Rail. However, I am aware that the local authorities in South Wales view with concern the changes which I understand British Rail propose to introduce in October. The Department is discussing these matters with the authorities concerned.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy to provide or secure additional Government funds for the rail transport network in south-east Wales to assist the development of an infrastructure which favours the region's economy, environment and social structure.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The funding of British Rail is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport. However the Welsh Office has assisted South and Mid Glamorgan councils to develop the rail infrastructure by means of additional credit approvals for projects deemed to be of regional or national importance.

Polychlorinated Biphenyls

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he is liaising with the Department of Chemical Engineering at Bath university over research into alternative methods of disposing of polychlorinated biphenyls;

(2) if he will fund research being carried out by the department of chemical engineering at Bath university into alternative methods of disposing of polychlorinated biphenyls.

Mr. Grist: The Department has not been approached by Bath university about research into alternative methods of disposing of polychlorinated biphenyls or for funding for such research.

Eggs

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he proposes to issue new guidelines on the use of raw shell egg as a binder material in the preparation of hamburgers or beef rissoles in public sector catering establishments.

Mr. Grist: No, but I shall consider the need to remind such establishments of the current guidelines.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he now proposes to ban the use of raw shell egg as a binder material in the preparation of beef rissoles or hamburgers in public sector catering establishments.

Mr. Grist: I have no plans to do so.

Disability

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to ensure that deaf people and those with communication disabilities have a statutory right to interpreters or other communication support during the assessment procedure.

Mr. Grist: Section 3(6) of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 makes provision for a disabled person, or his authorised representative, who is unable to communicate, to be provided by the local authority with necessary services to ensure that such incapacity does not prevent the authority from discharging their functions or the making of representations by the disabled person, or his representative, under this section. In regard to the implementation of this section, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave on 23 July.

Mental Illness and Handicap

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) whether he will make it his policy that no sales of land or property at existing facilities for people with mental illness shall take place until plans for full adequate alternative services for existing users have been agreed and approved;

(2) whether he will make it his policy that no sales of land or property at existing facilities for people with mental handicap shall take place until plans for full adequate alternative services for existing users have been agreed and approved;

(3) whether he will make it his policy that no sales of land or property at existing facilities for people with mental handicap shall take place until plans for full adequate alternative services for potential users have been agreed and approved;

(4) whether he will make it his policy that no sales of land or property at existing facilities for people with mental illness shall take place until plans for full adequate alternative services for potential users have been agreed and approved.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend's policy, as stated in the Welsh Office mental handicap and mental illness strategies, already covers all these points.

Health Workers

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to ensure that ancillary workers are (a) recruited and (b) trained adequately to meet the shortfall on wards in Wales that will follow implementation of Project 2000 for nurse training.

Mr. Grist: The training and recruitment of ancillary workers is a matter for each individual health authority. However, I have made provision within the funding of Project 2000 for a contribution towards the cost of training new health care assistants to replace the lost student nurse service contribution. Health authorities have also been asked to undertake a systematic reassessment of the roles and functions of all support staff to health care professionals as part of the Care Sector Consortium's health care assistant project. This programme should be completed by September 1991.

Road Construction

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether his Department has any plans to undertake an environmental impact assessment of all current and planned road construction programmes.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Environmental impact assessments are undertaken for all road schemes falling within the scope of EC directive 85/337.

Community Care

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to introduce a statutory right to representation in community care services for disabled people who are unable or choose not to represent themselves.

Mr. Grist: Provision for the appointment of authorised representatives of disabled people and as regards their rights in relation to the provision of services for the person they represent is made in sections 1 and 2 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986. In regard to the implementation of these sections, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave on 23 July.

Food Temperature Control

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will publish his timetable for the implementation of food temperature control regulations in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The Food Hygiene (Amendment) Regulations 1990, laid before Parliament on 18 July, will introduce temperature controls on certain foods in a staged implementation:

- from 1 April 1991 all foods in the controlled categories must be kept at or below 8°C (except in small delivery vehicles);
- from 1 April 1992 foods in the controlled categories in small delivery vehicles must be kept at or below 8°C; and
- from 1 April 1993 certain foods in the controlled categories must be kept at or below 5°C (except in small delivery vehicles).

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish figures showing the number and proportion of food outlets in Wales shown to be failing to meet current food temperature regulations when inspected during the past year.

Mr. Grist: This information is not available.

Health Bodies

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) the names, (b) the positions and (c) the principal relevant qualifications of (i) the chairs and (ii) the members of (1) the quality working group, (2) the strategic direction implementation steering group, (3) the Welsh health planning forum and the health gain working group, the people-centred working group and the resource-effective working group, (4) the 10 health gain people-centred services panels of review, (5) the clinical resource utilisation group, (6) the Welsh advisory group on medical audit, (7) the contracts working group and (8) district audit committees.

Mr. Grist: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Health Service Funding

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will outline the process, following implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act, whereby a service provider within a district health authority would make application to the Welsh Office for capital funding; what conditions will determine eligibility for capital funding; and what continuing conditions will attach to such funding should an allocation be made;

(2) if he will outline the process, following the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act, whereby a service procurer or purchasing body would apply to the Welsh Office for capital funding; what conditions will determine eligibility for capital funding; and what continuing conditions will attach to such funding, should an allocation be made;

(3) if he will list the sources of capital funding that will be available to any hospital trust or any other self-governing trusts in Wales; what process of approval such trusts would have to go through following implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act in respect of such capital projects; what conditions will determine eligibility for any public contributions towards such projects; and what continuing conditions will attach to such funding should an allocation be made.

Mr. Grist: A paper setting out proposals for further arrangements for allocating capital funds to the health service in Wales was issued to the service for comment this week. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House and the Vote Office.

The proposals distinguish between 'minor' capital—required for routine equipment replacement and relatively small developments—and 'major' capital—for strategically significant developments. The former would be allocated to health authorities for their discretionary use in proportion to their revenue formula shares. Authorities would be expected to use these funds to maintain and develop the services provided to their residents by hospitals with which they have contracted, including those which they do not themselves manage. The use of capital would be determined in negotiations between health authorities and providing hospitals. The existing rules governing virement between capital and revenue would still apply, but otherwise the Department would not place any conditions on the use of these funds, although authorities would be accountable for their spending in the usual ways, and expenditure would have to be consistent with local strategies for health.

Major capital would be allocated to specific projects according to their benefits in terms of health gain and return on investment. Health authorities or providing hospitals would be eligible to bid for these resources independently, but, in the case of hospitals, their bids would need to be supported by the potential purchasers of their services. Capital provided for major schemes would, of course, be earmarked specifically for those schemes and would form part of a centrally managed programme.

Any NHS trusts in Wales would include the cost of the depreciation of their assets in their charges and this could then be used to fund further capital expenditure. For new developments and major equipment purchases trusts would borrow funds either from the Secretary of State or from elsewhere. The level of borrowing would be subject to an agreed financing limit which would reflect the need for working capital and investment set out in each trust's business plans. No specific conditions would be attached to a trust's borrowing limits, but trusts would be held to account for the funds borrowed and would, of course, be subject to audit.

Medical Services

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list for each family practitioner services authority in Wales in each of the last five years (a) the total expenditure on ophthalmic services, (b) the expenditure on ophthalmic services per 10,000 registered population, (c) the number of opticians, (d) the number of opticians per 10,000 office of population censuses and surveys population, (e) the number of sight tests and (f) the number of sight tests per 10,000 office of population censuses and surveys population;

(2) if he will list for each family practitioner services authority in Wales for each of the last five years (a) the number and percentage of general medical practitioners with consent to use a deputising service, (b) the number and percentage of night visits made by deputising services and (c) the night fees for general medical practitioners per 10,000 registered population;

(3) if he will list for each family practitioner services authority in Wales, for each of the last five years (a) the number of practice nurses per partnership, (b) the number of practice nurses per practitioner and (c) the number of practice nurses per 10,000 registered population;

(4) if he will list for each family practitioner services authority in Wales, for each of the last five yers (a) the total family practitioner services payments, (b) the total family practitioner services payments per 10,000 registered population, (c) the total family practitioner services administration costs, (d) the total family practitioner services administration costs per 10,000 registered population, (e) the total expenditure on general medical services and (f) the total expenditure on general medical services per 10,000 registered population;

(5) if he will list for each family practitioner services authority in Wales, for each of the last five years (a) the total number of general medical practitioners, (b) the number and percentage of general medical practitioners with list sizes under 1,000, (c) the number and percentage of general medical practitioners with list sizes over 2,500, (d) the number and percentage of general medical practitioners under 65 years of age practising single-handed and (e) the number of formal allocations to general medical practitioners per 10,000 registered population.

Mr. Grist: The information requested cannot be provided in the time available. I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

BISF Houses

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met representatives of tenants and owners of BISF houses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I have not met representatives of tenants or owners of BISF houses. Those who are concerned about the condition of their homes should more properly approach their local authority.

Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) whether he has visited any local authorities who carried out pilot implementations of sections 1, 2 and 3 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986;

(2) whether his Department has carried out any pilot implementations of sections 1, 2 and 3 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with voluntary organisations concerning the costs of implementing sections 1, 2 and 3 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986.

Mr. Grist: As explained in the reply to the hon. Gentleman on 23 July, consultation is taking place with the Assembly of Welsh Counties and directors of social services in Wales about the additional costs in relation to the implementation of these sections since it is social services authorities who have responsibility for their implementation.

GP Contract System

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what representations he has received from general practitioners in Wales regarding the time taken in paperwork caused by the new general practitioner contract system; and what steps he is undertaking to minimise that paperwork;

(2) what representations he has received from general practitioners in Wales regarding the screening and health check work required in the new contract; and if he will list all the suggestions general practitioners have made for improving that system and indicate the response to each suggestion.

Mr. Grist: Many representations about the new contract were received in the spring and summer of 1989. Most of these covered a number of issues. Identification of those which relate to paperwork, screening and health checks is not now possible, except at disproportionate cost. There have been no recent representations on this issue.

Welsh Language (Qualifications)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, subsequent to his promise to look into a qualification in Welsh for those pursuing the less intensive course at key stage 4, what consultations he intends to have with local education authorities and other relevant bodies; and if he will announce the timetable for such consultations.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The assessment of programme of study B in Welsh second language raises similar issues to the assessment of other non-core national curriculum foundation subjects. The School Examinations and Assessment Council has been asked to report on these issues and to offer its advice by the end of the year. We shall consider what further consultations may be necessary in the light of its advice.

Eye Tests

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the latest monthly and quarterly figures available to him for Wales as a whole and for each district health authority area in Wales for (a) eye tests undertaken and (b) new ophthalmic out-patient referrals; and if he will give the equivalent figures for 1989.

Mr. Grist: The available information is given in the table.

Many of the sight tests since April 1989 have been private transactions outside the national health service. Statistical information on these is not available centrally.

(a) Sight tests paid for by family practitioner committees

Family practitioner committee	Six months ending: 31 March 1989	31 March 1990
Clwyd	50,117	13,804
Dyfed	44,734	14,237

South Glamorgan	2,260	1,952
West Glamorgan	1,361	1,518
Wales	10,771	11,415

Hospital Closures

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) all the hospitals and (b) departments or wards in Wales that are either currently subject to consultation in respect of possible closure by health authorities or are under his consideration as a result of a health authority completing its consultative process.

Mr. Grist: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Land Transactions Handbook

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales from what date the recent amendments to the land transactions handbook took effect.

Mr. Grist: The most recent amendment to the NHS handbook on land transactions was issued to Welsh district health authorities on 9 June 1989.

Land Transactions Register

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has drawn to the attention of (a) South Glamorgan health authority and (b) other health authorities in Wales the recent amendments to the land transactions register.

Mr. Grist: I will write to the hon. Gentleman for clarification of the information he is seeking and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Salmonella

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the percentage increase in the incidence of (a) salmonella and (b) salmonella enteriditis in Wales in the first quarter of the current year and in (i) the first quarter of 1989 and (ii) the first quarter of 1988.

Mr. Grist: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing (a) the number of cases of salmonella and (b) the number of cases of salmonella enteriditis in each district in Wales in each month from January 1989 up to the latest available date.

Mr. Grist: This information is not available in the form requested.

Environmental Health Officers

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list (a) the total establishment of environmental health officers and (b) the number of posts filled in Wales for each of the past 10 years;

(2) how many posts of environment health officers are currently vacant in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The number of local authority non-manual staff employed in environmental health in Wales for each of the last 10 years is given in the table. It is not possible to identify separately the number of environmental health officers included in this number. It is not possible to identify the total establishment of environmental health officers, or the number of vacancies centrally.

Number of non-manual staff employed in environmental health[1] Total Wales

	Number

1986	822
1987	832
1988	826
1989	850
1990	[2]867

[1] Full-time equivalent as at March for each year.
[2] Figures for March 1990 are provisional.

Prescribing Costs

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether, in the case of a hospital trust or other self-governing trust offering an out-patient service on a continuing basis, all prescribing costs deriving from such a service will be met entirely from within the resources of such a trust.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave earlier today which makes it clear that the costs of drug prescribing should fall to be met by whoever has clinical responsibility for the patient concerned. NHS trusts will be in no different position in this respect from other NHS units.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will instruct family practitioner authorities to exclude from their consideration, when determining the monetary budget or prescribing amount for a particular practice or general practitioner, any sum likely to arise from the transfer of prescribing costs from hospital consultants to general practitioners in those circumstances where patients attend hospital out-patient clinics on a continuing basis and to make separate provision for such amounts.

Mr. Grist: Such instruction is not needed. Policy in this matter is clear. Where clinical responsibility for a patient, including the responsibility to prescribe, rests with a hospital doctor, the cost of prescribing is attributable to hospital service expenditure. Where such responsibilities are accepted by the patient's GP, the cost of prescribing is attributable to family practitioner services expenditure. The decision as to clinical responsibility in any individual case rests with the clinicians involved.

The indicative amounts that family health service authorities will ascribe to GP practices will take account of cases where a GP has clinical responsibility for a patient whose treatment requires the prescribing of particularly high-cost medication.

Disabled People

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take steps to ensure that disabled people have a statutory right to (a) a written outcome of their assessment procedure, (b) make representations as to their community care needs during the assessment procedure and (c) review the outcome of the assessment.

Mr. Grist: We intend that from 1 April 1991 local authorities will be required to establish a procedure for considering any representations, including any complaints, that are made to them about their discharge of responsibilities to an individual under any of their social services functions.

In addition, section 3 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 confers a right for disabled people or their authorised representatives to receive written statements on request following assessment and to make representations regarding assessments and their outcomes. In regard to the implementation of this section, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave on 23 July.

GP Contract (Late Payments)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from general practitioners in Wales regarding late payments for their work under the new general practitioners contract; and what steps he is taking to reduce such delays.

Mr. Grist: None. I would expect any problems over payments to be discussed with the responsible family practioner committee.

Project 2000

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the number of employees who will be needed to take the place of nurses in training in respect of ward duties once Project 2000 is implemented in each of the next five years (a) in Wales as a whole and (b) in each district health authority in Wales.

Mr. Grist: We have made provision to fund the staff replacement shortfall in the lost student contribution of nurse learners. The funding formula for Project 2000, which applies to each DHA in Wales, is based on a 50 per cent. student service contribution, apportioned on the basis of 50 per cent. qualified staff (Grade D), and 50 per cent. unqualified staff (Grade A); and the number of students indexed with the Welsh national board as at October 1989.

Welsh Water (Press Release)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many press releases were issued by the Welsh water authority in each of the years 1983 to 1988 and in the year 1989 up to the date of privatisation; how many were issued from the flotation date to the end of 1989; and how many have been issued by Welsh Water plc in the current year.

Mr. Grist: This was a matter for the Welsh water authority prior to 1 September 1990 and subsequently for Welsh Water plc.

Slaughterhouses

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the slaughterhouses that were visited by European Community inspectors in 1989 and in 1990; if he will indicate which have had their approval suspended; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given today by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Tritium

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what regulations are relevant to the storage of Betalight components which contain tritium gas at BT Cwmcarn; and what actions have been taken to regulate such materials;

(2) what inspections have been undertaken in the last 12 months in respect of the storing of Betalight components which contain tritium at BT Cwmcarn; and what quantities were stored at the time of such inspections.

Mr. Grist: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

ENERGY

Renewable Energy

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the current funding allocated to research projects involving renewable energy resources; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: Just over £20 million has been set aside by my Department to fund research and development projects into sources of renewable energy in 1990-91.

Coal Imports

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the amount of coal imported to Teesside, Wearside and Tyneside for (a) each year from 1979 to 1989 and (b) each month in 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Baldry: Coal imports for these areas, listed by Customs trade port, were as follows:

Dounreay

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if any military contract work has been undertaken by the atomic energy development establishment at Dounreay;

(2) if the Dounreay reprocessing facility has reprocessed any fuel from the Herald reactor at Aldermaston.

Mr. Baldry: The Dounreay reprocessing facility reprocesses, under safeguards, all the fuel from the Herald materials test reactor (MTR) under a contract with the Ministry of Defence. Dounreay also provides waste management services to the adjacent Vulcan establishment and undertakes the post-irradiation examination of some components from that establishment, neither of which involves the MTR fuel cycle at Dounreay.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if any changes in the present safeguards regime at the atomic energy development establishment at Dounreay will be requested by the new reprocessing contracts the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority is developing with reactor operators in Berlin, Madrid and Petter.

Mr. Baldry: No changes to safeguards would be required.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish the co-operation agreement between the United States of America and United Kingdom governments, for the reprocessing at Dounreay of test reactor fuel pins.

Mr. Baldry: I am not aware that such an agreement exists.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consultations have taken place with his counterpart in the United States of America concerning matters of physical protection and travel of highly enriched uranium fuel originating in the United States of America to be reprocessed at Dounreay from reactors in Madrid, Petter and Berlin.

Mr. Baldry: I have had no specific consultations about this particular issue. However, physical protection and transport of nuclear materials have featured in the regular discussions of matters of common interest between officials from my Department and officials from the United States Government.

PowerGen

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consultations he (a) has had and (b) proposes to have with the direct electricity consumers of PowerGen about any trade sale.

Mr. Baldry: Consultations with PowerGen's customers are a matter for the company.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what period of time he proposes for alternative trade sale bidders to Hanson for PowerGen to emerge; and what period of time he proposes between short-listing of the qualified bidders and the final day for tenders to be received.

Mr. Baldry: These matters are under consideration.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy on what date he, his officials, or any of his privatisation advisers first received an approach from Hanson about PowerGen.

Mr. Wakeham: As I told the House on 23 July at column 51, discussions on the best way to effect the private sale of PowerGen have been going on for a number of weeks.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received from the 12 area board chairmen regarding the sale of PowerGen.

Mr. Baldry: None.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) when he last met the Director General of the Office of Electricity Regulation to discuss the sale of PowerGen, and the implications for the regulatory regime of a single purchaser;

(2) what changes he is considering to the regulatory regime in the event of a successful trade sale of PowerGen to Hanson, pursuant to his statement to the House of 23 July.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend has not met the Director General of Electricity Supply to discuss the sale of PowerGen. I do not expect there to be any implications for the regulatory regime of any sale of PowerGen to a single purchaser.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether the European Community's acceptance of a 15 per cent. limit on holdings in privatised electricity companies will be renegotiated in the event of the sale of PowerGen to one bidder.

Mr. Wakeham: The Government's special share proposals for the privatised electricity companies did not require specific approval from the European Commission. As I said in the House on 23 July at column 42, if a trade sale proceeds a golden share would be inappropriate for a subsidiary. The Government believe that the public interest is better protected by a contractual provision in the sale and purchase agreement.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met Sir Michael Richardson of N.M. Rothschild to discuss the sale of PowerGen.

Mr. Baldry: Details of my right hon. Friend's meetings with his and the electricity industry's advisers are confidential.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received from the trade unions representing the work force at PowerGen regarding the trade sale proposal.

Mr. Baldry: Representatives of the trades unions met my right hon. Friend and me on 24 July, and raised a number of issues. My right hon. Friend reaffirmed that any new owner of PowerGen would have to take on the same obligations in respect of the work force as PowerGen has now. My right hon. Friend also confirmed that arrangements would be made for PowerGen employees to receive benefits broadly comparable to those they would have received in a public offering of the company's shares.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received from the board and management of PowerGen regarding the proposal for a trade sale of PowerGen.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend and I have had discussions with the chairman, chief executive and non-executive members of the board of PowerGen concerning the possible trade sale of the company. The chairman has promised the company's co-operation in taking forward the trade sale and flotation options in parallel.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will assess the implications for the United Kingdom coal mining industry of the sale of PowerGen to any company with substantial coal mining interests.

Mr. Baldry: The United Kingdom coal mining industry has a prosperous future if it can produce coal at a competitive price. This will be the case whether or not PowerGen is sold to a company with substantial coal mining interests.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. Wakeham: There is one political adviser currently employed in and paid for by my Department, Mr. Guy Black. It is not the practice to reveal the salaries of advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential. As regards expenses, the normal civil service rules apply.

In respect of the privatisation of the electricity supply industry, two public relations advisers are retained by the Department to provide marketing and public relations advice: Dewe Rogerson, jointly with the industry; and Lowe Bell Communications. Details of their contracts are commercially confidential.

Plutonium

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what amounts of plutonium are currently covered by international nuclear safeguards agreements worldwide.

Mr. Baldry: The approximate quantities of material subject to International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards agreements at the end of 1989 are given in the first table on page 115 of the IAEA's annual report, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he intends to exclude companies incorporated outside the United Kingdom in (a) other European Community countries and (b) non-European Community countries from bidding for PowerGen or National Power;

(2) what (a) classes of company and (b) specific companies he proposes to exclude from bidding for (i) PowerGen and (ii) National Power.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend has not excluded in advance any companies that may bid for PowerGen. All bidders will be considered on their merits. There is currently no proposal to sell National Power to a private purchaser.

British Nuclear Fuels plc

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what guidelines his Department has laid down to British Nuclear Fuels plc for contract work undertaken with companies based outside the United Kingdom in reprocessing in regard to British Nuclear Fuels retaining responsibility for plutonium separated in the reprocessing; and if he will list the respects in which the guidelines differ from International Atomic Energy Agency and non-proliferation treaty safeguards.

Mr. Baldry: The return of plutonium arising from the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel by British Nuclear Fuels plc to its country of origin or to any other destination is made only subject to application of safeguards and on receipt of assurances covering peaceful use, physical protection and controls on re-transfer. The guidelines for returning this material remain as set out in the statement by the then Foreign Secretary, now Lord Callaghan, on 31 March 1976 at columns 514-16, which has been reaffirmed by the Prime Minister. These guidelines ensure that the return of such plutonium is fully consistent with our international non-proliferation obligations under the non-proliferation treaty.

United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what financial targets and external financing limits have been set for the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority for 1990-91; and what the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's capital expenditure programme is to be in 1990-91.

Mr. Wakeham: I have set the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority a financial target for 1990-91 of 4 per cent. return on net assets on a current cost basis. The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's external financing limit for 1990-91 is £45 million and its capital expenditure programme £25 million.

DEFENCE

Domestic Property

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how the money realised from any sales of domestic properties by his Department is treated.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Property receipts are credited to defence votes.

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many homes have been sold by his Department since the beginning of 1989 and in the last three months; and what criteria is used in deciding to whom the properties will be disposed.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: From 1 December 1988—the closest date to the beginning of 1989 for which figures are available—to 30 July 1990, 2,894 homes were sold by the Ministry of Defence, 725 of them during the last three months of that period. These figures include both married quarters and Ministry of Defence civilian houses. Surplus married quarters that are suitable for immediate individual sale are normally offered for sale to service personnel through the services discount scheme; quarters not suitable for sale in this way, for example, dwellings designated in law as "defective", flats in England and Wales, and properties with utilities below adoption standard are normally offered for sale in bulk by tender on the open market. Surplus Ministry of Defence civilian houses are normally offered for sale to the sitting tenant at the appropriate discount; vacant properties and those whose tenants do not wish to purchase are offered for sale on the open market.

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what policy guidelines exist for his Department in dealing with empty properties.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Not all empty properties are surplus to requirements. Properties are empty on occasion because they are undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work, already allocated to families due to move in shortly or held for planned troop deployments. It is our policy to dispose of all properties surplus to long-term requirements. Those that are surplus to current requirements but for which a long-term need has been identified are normally offered for short-term leasing to local authorities or housing associations when security considerations allow.

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are taken to make available properties disposed of by his Department to housing associations or local authorities.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Properties suitable for bulk disposal are normally offered for sale by tender on the open market; housing associations and local authorities are free to bid for them. On occasion we have sold properties to them direct. In addition, we are discussing with the Housing Corporation the establishment of a scheme to make MOD properties available to housing associations for subsequent sale or lease to service personnel.

Japan (Military Expenditure)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the level of Japanese military expenditure over the last five years and on the likely trend in expenditure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: According to recent editions of the International Institute for Strategic Studies' publication "The Military Balance", Japanese defence expenditure over the last five years was:

	(billion Yen)
1985-86	3·1
1986-87	3·3
1987-88	3·5
1988-89	3·7
1989-90	3·9

Plans for Japanese defence expenditure are a matter for the Government of Japan.

Teamwork 90

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide an estimate of the cost to his Department of United Kingdom participation in NATO exercise Teamwork 90.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Costs attributable to exercises such as Teamwork are not indentified separately and could not be calculated without disproportionate effort. As the participation of the ships, aircraft and personnel involved is consistent with their normal training activities, the additional costs of the exercise will be limited to such items as travel and subsistence allowances.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what activities will take place, and when, at (a) each RAF station involved in Scotland and (b) which Scottish waters in the NATO exercise Teamwork 90.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Current plans envisage the use of RAF bases in Scotland at Lossiemouth, Kinloss, Leuchars and Stornoway. A large number of shipping movements are planned to take place off Scotland and the Cape Wrath and Garvie Island ranges will be used. It would be inappropriate to give precise details of the timing and location of activities in the exercise, which will be held from 6 to 23 September.

Flying Sorties

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list by (a) tactical training area and (b) Ministry of Defence ranges for the years (i) 1988, (ii) 1989 and (iii) 1990 to date, the number of flying sorties that have been carried out by military jet aircraft; and if he will show in his answer from what NATO air force they came;

(2) if he will list by low-flying area and for the years (a) 1988, (b) 1989 and (c) for 1990 to date, the number of low-flying sorties that have been carried out by military jet aircraft, and if he will show in his answer from what North Atlantic Treaty Organisation air force they came.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It would require disproportionate cost and effort to provide the information in the detail requested. The hon. Member may however wish to refer to the statistics on low-flying sorties for years up to 1988 presented in evidence by my Department to the recent Defence Committee inquiry into low flying and published in the Committee's fifth report for the Session 1989-90 (HC 120) at page 140. The numbers of low-flying sorties carried out in the United Kingdom in 1989 and 1990 to date, on the same basis, are as follows:

Total sorties	144,323	61,977
Numbers by aircraft type
Buccaneer	2,029	728
F-4	2,469	912
Harrier	6,483	2,720
Hawk	17,601	7,535
Jaguar	7,278	3,202
Jet Provost	13,797	5,382
Tornado	21,741	10,133
A-10	11,337	5,358
F-111	11,903	4,988
Other aircraft including helicopters	49,685	21,019

[1] January to May.

Low-flying sortie statistics are not broken down geographically, but an indication of the proportion of low-flying movements carried out in different low-flying areas appears at page 159 of the report.

Insurance

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 July, Official Report, column 245, what are the reasons why insurance cover is not provided for non-military persons having flights in military aircraft; and what steps are taken to ensure that non-military persons are aware that they have no insurance cover.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: If a non-military person undertaking an air experience flight in a United Kingdom military aircraft were injured as a result of the Ministry of Defence's negligence, the individual could, under common law, pursue a claim for compensation against the Ministry. The Ministry is not insured against this eventuality, choosing to carry it as an acceptable risk. Non-military personnel are not routinely advised of the Ministry's insurance position.

Defence Studies Centre

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funding has been made available by his Department for the foundation of a centre for defence studies at King's college in the university of London.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The amount of grant will be agreed with the Ministry each year, the objective being to sustain the centre each year for up to five years with a grant equivalent to £100,000 at 1989-90 prices. The aim is that in the longer term the centre shall become financially independent of Ministry funding.

Graduates

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion (a) graduates and (b) postgraduates in (x) pure and applied sciences, (y) engineering and (z) computer sciences engaged by the Ministry of Defence following graduation were of all graduates and postgraduates engaged by his Department in each year since 1983.

Mr. Alan Clark: From available records it is not possible to give a complete breakdown distinguishing between graduates and postgraduates for the science and engineering categories requested. To ascertain this detailed information would require a disproportionate amount of effort.

A breakdown of science and engineering graduates entering the MOD service since 1984 and an indication of the postgraduate entry for the scientific group is as follows:

1984-85	128	41	83
1985-86	180	55	68
1986-87	242	77	53
1987-88	301	50	90
1988-89	202	73	130
1989-90	145	48	99

The postgraduate entry figures represent those recruited with experience in lieu of qualifications as well as those qualified to PhD level. The postgraduate entry to the engineering service is known to be very small.

Computer scientists are an integral part of the science entry. From an analysis of information available for 1989-90, about 6 per cent. of those engaged were computer scientists. It is a reasonable assumption that a similar proportion of computer scientists were recruited in previous years.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, for each of the last five years, how many graduates have joined (a) the Royal Navy, (b) the Army and (c) the Royal Air Force; and what proportion of the armed services' strength this represents.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to my hon. Friend.

Simulation Exercise

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the United Kingdom participation in the Allied Command Europe simulation military exercise held at the NATO computer centre in the Federal Republic of Germany; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I presume that the hon. Gentleman is referring to exercise ACE 89, a NATO theatrewide command post exercise, which took place between 6 and 17 November 1989 at the United States warrior preparation centre, Einsiedlerhof in the Federal Republic of Germany. The major objective was to evaluate the ability of computer-assisted exercises to allow senior commanders and their staffs to practise air, ground and sea operations throughout Allied Command Europe, without the costs and environmental implications of putting forces in the field. In addition to those United Kingdom personnel holding NATO appointments who took part, 1 British Corps provided a response cell.

Veteran Aircraft

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the flying accidents involving veteran aircraft owned by his Department which have occurred during the last 15 years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is as follows:

Date	Aircraft Type	Description
17 April 1985	Sea Fury T20	Crashed on landing at Aeroplane and Armament Experimental Establishment, Boscombe Down
25 May 1986	Vampire T11/ Meteor T7	Collided in mid-air at RAF Mildenhall
30 May 1988	Meteor T7	Crashed on approach to Coventry Airport
10 June 1989	Sea Fury FB11	Ditched into sea near Turnberry
14 July 1990	Sea Fury T20	Forced landing near Yeovilton

Regiments

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the regiments and corps in the British Army, indicating the number of regular and Territorial Army units of that cap badge in each case.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is given in the table. Territorial Army units of the same cap badge as Regular Army units are those bearing the same name as the Regular unit. A major unit is one of battalion size or equivalent.

The Corps and Regiments of the British Army:

Manpower Shortages

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the shortfalls in manning for the Navy, Army and Royal Air Force, listed by officers and other ranks, at the latest available date.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Shortfalls in service manpower are measured by comparing adult trained strengths against trained manpower requirements. As at 31 March 1990, shortfalls were:

Royal Navy—170 officers and 1,293 servicemen/women
Royal Marines—202 servicemen
Army—447 officers and 4,839 servicemen/women
Royal Air Force—371 officers and 5,718 servicemen/women

Premature Voluntary Release

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what are the figures for premature voluntary release from the Army and Royal Air Force for the period 1983 to 1990 by quarter, in the form of the reply of 18 May 1989, Official Report, column 275-76;

(2) what are the figures for premature voluntary release from the Army for the fourth quarter of 1989 and any quarters of 1990 for which figures are available now, in the form of the reply of 18 May 1989, Official Report, column 275-76.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the tables:

Nuclear Test Verification

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in verification research in regard to nuclear testing since March.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government continue a programme of verification research as part of the United Kingdom's contribution to the work of the ad hoc group of scientific experts at the conference on disarmament in Geneva. This group last met in March and meets again at the end of this month. Work in the interim has concentrated on preparations for a technical trial (GSETT-2) involving the exchange of seismic data.

Queen Mother (90th Birthday Flypast)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the military flying parade over central London to mark the 90th birthday of Her Majesty the Queen Mother; and what assessment was made of the risks posed in flying vintage planes over London in the display.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The three services have a funded allocation of flying hours for training and display purposes, and the flypast to mark the 90th birthday of Her Majesty the Queen Mother was covered by these allocations. There were therefore no additional costs to the defence budget.

The risks involved in flying vintage aircraft over London were considered most carefully. Given that all the pilots involved were fully operational squadron pilots with extensive flying experience, and that the aircraft are maintained to the highest standards, the risks were assessed to be minimal.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he, his Ministers or officials of his Department have raised the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and the nuclear non-proliferation review conference during meetings with defence Ministers and officials abroad in the past month.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Nuclear proliferation and the non-proliferation treaty are kept under continual scrutiny by Ministers and officials in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Defence. We are active, at various levels, in encouraging non-parties to accede to the treaty, and will play a full part in the proceedings at the 1990 NPT review conference.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals in regard to nuclear materials management and security have been prepared by his Department for the fourth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in August.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 9 May 1990 at column 181.

Military Equipment (Exports)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made by his Department of alleged breaches of legislation that regulates the export of lethal and non-lethal military equipment by Euroean and north American companies.

Mr. Alan Clark: This is a matter for the Government of the country or countries concerned.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are any restrictions on the export of non-lethal defence equipment to (a) Iran, (b) Iraq, (c) Libya and (d) Guatemala.

Mr. Alan Clark: All exports of defence equipment are considered on a case-by-case basis. In addition, there are guidelines in respect of Iran and Iraq announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the then Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary on 29 October 1985 at column 450, and the United Kingdom has had an embargo on all new defence sales to Libya since May 1984.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his department makes of the legislation of European and north American Governments that regulates the export of lethal and non-lethal military equipment.

Mr. Alan Clark: This is a matter for the Government of the country concerned. There are, in addition, international fora in which these matters are discussed.

Redundancies

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements exist for making redundancy payments to (a) his Department's civilian staff and (b) service personnel.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The arrangements for making redundancy payments to civilian staff in the Ministry of Defence are contained in the rules of the principal civil service pension scheme (PCSPS). These provide for benefits according to age, length of qualifying service and rate of pay at the time of redundancy. In the unlikely event that the benefits payable under the PCSPS amount to less than the statutory provision, staff may receive a special payment to bring them up to the level paid under the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978.

The arrangements for making redundancy payments to service personnel are determined in the light of the circumstances at the time when reductions of this kind become necessary. Under the terms that have applied in redundancy exercises in recent years, personnel have, in addition to the normal benefits which would be awarded in respect of service given, received tax-free lump sums to compensate for premature termination of career. Personnel who have not yet completed the minimum service normally necessary to qualify for an immediate pension, but who have completed at leat 12 years' reckonable service, have also been awarded an immediate pension which is proportionate to the service given. These terms would not necessarily apply to any future redundancy scheme.

Military Training

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what legislation regulates the provision of military training by British companies to foreign military forces.

Mr. Alan Clark: When such training might involve the release of United Kingdom classified information, it would be covered by the Official Secrets Acts 1911-1989.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the scale of force reductions that could result from a second round of conventional disarmament talks.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: NATO is committed to seeking further limitations on the offensive capabilities of conventional armed forces in Europe beyond those currently under negotiation at the CFE talks in Vienna, including limitations on military manpower. The high-level task force is tasked with examining what could be done; it would be premature to speculate as to the outcome.

Cancellation Charges

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what cancellation charges are attached to the contracts for production and development of (a) the Chieftain replacement, (b) the first auxiliary oiler replenishment vessel, (c) the first type 2400 submarine, (d) the Rapier field standard C missile, (e) the Trigat medium-range anti-tank missile, (f) the Trigat long-range anti-tank missile, (g) the naval version of the EH101, (h) the multiple launch rocket system phase III, (i) the advanced short-range air-to-air missile, (j) the NATO identification system and (k) the joint tactical information distribution system.

Mr. Alan Clark: Defence contracts usually contain provisions for a contractor to be paid for work done up to the date of cancellation and reasonable additional costs arising from the cancellation. The actual payments made to a contractor in the event of a cancellation would vary accordingly to the circumstances.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which ships by ownership and type will be carrying chemical weapons from Nordenham to Johnson Island in the Pacific.

Mr. Tom King: I will write to the hon. Gentleman shortly.

Defence Arms Control Unit

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is (a) the current number and (b) the grades or ranks of staff attached to the defence arms control unit.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The defence arms control unit consists of 18 civilian and military posts in London; in addition, there are four posts attached to the United Kingdom's delegations in Vienna and Geneva, three military and one civilian. The posts, by grade/rank and location, are as follows:

London
- 1 × Assistant Secretary (Grade 5)
- 1 × Colonel
- 3 × Principals (Grade 7)
- 3 × Lt. Colonel (one detached to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office)
- 1 × Wing Commander
- 1 × Higher Executive Officer
- 3 × Executive Officers
- 1 × Administrative Officer
- 2 × Administrative Assistants
- 1 × Personal Secretary
- 1 × Typist

Vienna
- 1 × Brigadier
- 1 × Group Captain
- 1 × Personal Secretary

Geneva
- 1 × Colonel

Equipment (Unit Costs)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when it became Government practice not to provide declassified information on the unit costs of equipment.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Rhondda (Mr. Rogers) on 14 January 1988 at column 373.

Military Forces (Expenditure)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of 23 July, what is the approximate total expenditure reduction that has resulted from the interim measures that have already been implemented to alter the readiness of British military forces.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is too early to calculate what reduction in United Kingdom defence expenditure might result from the recently implemented interim measures to alter the readiness of some alliance forces; although we estimate that it will not be substantial.

Service Units (Running Costs)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library whatever information is available on the average annual running cost of (a) the defence arms control unit, (b) the Directorate General Information Technology Systems, (c) the equipment accounting centre, (d) the Royal Naval supply and transport service, (e) the Royal Corps of Signals, (f) the Royal Corps of Transport, (g) the Royal Army Ordnance Corps, (h) the Army Catering Corps, (i) the Royal Pioneer Corps, (j) the Royal Army Education Corps, (k) the Royal Army Medical Services, (l) the Royal Army Veterinary Corps, (m) the Army Physical Training Corps, (n) the Royal Army Chaplains' Department, (o) the General Service Corps, (p) the Royal Army Pay Corps, (q) the Women's Royal Army Corps, (r) the Royal Military academy Sandhurst, and (s) the Royal Military school of music.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The figure for the average annual running cost of the corps and other organisations listed by the hon. Gentleman is not held in the form required and could be given only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy regarding the release of information on the average annual running costs of service units.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information on the running cost of service units, as on other subjects, is given freely, provided it can be made available in the form required without disproportionate cost and without compromising security.

Peacekeeping Operations (Training)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training in peacekeeping operations is given to (a) non-commissioned officers and (b) officers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Peacekeeping is one of the subjects covered in general training provided for all commissioned and some non-commissioned officers. Individuals and units to be deployed on specific peacekeeping operations receive further training and briefing appropriate to their tasks and the location and conditions in which they will be serving.

Household Division

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of 23 July, whether the London tourist board has ever provided any financial assistance to assist the Household Division in carrying out its ceremonial duties.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Service Personnel

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the approximate average number of service personnel attached to each (a) armoured regiment, (b) armoured reconnaissance regiment, (c) artillery regiment, (d) engineer regiment, (e) infantry battalion, (f) Gurkha battalion, (g) Army Air Corps regiment, (h) Tornado GR1 squadron, (i) Harrier squadron, (j) Jaguar squadron, (k) Nimrod squadron, (l) Tornado F3 squadron, (m) Phantom FGR2 squadron, (n) Hercules squadron, (o) VC10 squadron, (p) Fleet class submarine, (q) Oberon class submarine, (r) anti-submarine warfare carrier, (s) assault ship, (t) type 42 destroyer, (u) type 22 frigate, (v) type 21 destroyer, and (w) Leander class frigate.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men, of what rank and age, left the armed services in 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is not available in the form requested. Statistics on outflow by age in 1989 and of outflow by rank in 1989-90 will be available shortly, at which point my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to my hon. Friend. To provide statistics by rank and age would entail disproportionate cost.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. Alan Clark: There is only one non-civil servant employed to advise Ministers within the Ministry of Defence. He is Mr. Keith Simpson, who is special adviser to the Secretary of State for Defence. It is not our practice to reveal the salaries of individual advisers, as these are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential. Mr. Simpson is entitled to normal civil service rates of travel expenses and subsistence allowances. In addition, he may be provided with secretarial assistance.

Public relations advice to Ministers in the Department is provided by the chief of public relations and his staff. There are no public relations advisers in the Ministry of Defence paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government.

Trident

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what dates GEC, Plessey, Rolls-Royce, Tarmac and Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd. are likely to complete their contracts on the British Trident programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: These companies are involved with a very large number of Trident-related contracts. Their forecast completion dates extend over a significant period, and a number will not complete until the late 1990s.

HMS Invincible

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the mayors and officials of London boroughs who were invited to functions connected with the visit of HMS Invincible to London in June.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I assume that the hon. Gentleman is referring to the charity banquet held aboard HMS Invincible by the White Ensign Association. Invitations for this function were issued by the association and it is not for me to comment on its guest list.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the purposes of the visit by HMS Invincible to London in June.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: HMS Invincible's visit to London was a normal port visit providing rest and recreation to the ship's crew. While in London the ship was able to provide a venue for a charity banquet organised by the White Ensign Association.

Research Projects

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list, by college, all those research projects funded by his Department currently under way in each of the Welsh university colleges.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It is not our policy to provide details of individual research arrangements.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts and agreements currently exist between his Department and universities and other institutions of higher education for research related to the verification of arms control treaties by seismology.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The MOD has no contracts or agreements for seismology research. There are arrangements for the acquisition of seismological data for research purposes.

Nuclear Submarines (Tilbury)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received from (a) the port of Tilbury authorities and (b) Thurrock borough council in respect of the possible use of the port of Tilbury by Royal Navy nuclear-powered submarines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None. I have nothing further to add to the answer that I gave the hon. Member for Bow and Poplar (Ms. Gordon) on 5 May 1989 at column 277.

Royal Navy Vessels (London)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of all Royal Navy vessels which have visited the port of London since 1 January 1989, giving their date of arrival, date of departure and details of moorings.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all open days, by ship, which have taken place on Royal Navy ships visiting London since 1 January 1986.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Records of days on which HM ships are open to the general public are not kept. However, the Ministry of Defence is unaware of any such open days held in the port of London in the period specified.

Defence Byelaws

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the application of defence byelaws to footpaths and common land.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Byelaws made under section 14(1) of part II of the Military Lands Act 1892 can interfere with highways only in exceptional circumstances, such as when the subject land includes a range danger area. The Secretary of State for Defence is then empowered to make byelaws which, given the consent of the responsible highways authority, can temporarily divert or restrict the use of highways and stop up or divert footpaths crossing or running inconveniently or dangerously close to such land. As for common land, no byelaws may be made under section 14(1) of part II of the Military Lands Act 1892 which take away or prejudicially affect any right of common.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all military lands byelaws made by his Department that cover common land.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 23 July 1990]: A recent review of our records suggests that the following byelaws made under the Military Lands Act 1892 cover areas of common land in use for military purposes:

RAF Greenham Common Byelaws 1985
Sennybridge Training Area Byelaws 1974
RAF Fylingdales Byelaws 1987
The Warcop Principal Training Area Byelaws 1981
Surrey Commons Military Lands Byelaws 1978
Aldershot and District Military Lands Byelaws 1976
Willsworthy Range Byelaws 1980
Okehampton Range Byelaws 1980
Merrivale Range Byelaws 1979
Strensall Common Byelaws 1972

Press Officers

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many press officers are employed by his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There are a total of 221 posts on the strength of the defence public relations staffs. These include staff in the single service command headquarters and in central staffs in the MOD. Latest available figures show there to be 207 staff in post and 14 vacancies. These figures include administrative support staff.

International Military Services Ltd.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries in which International Military Services Ltd. has traded since its inception; and if he will outline the extent to which its trading activity is supervised by officials of his Department.

Mr. Alan Clark: Although a wholly owned MOD company, IMS Ltd. operates, like any other company, on a commercial basis. It has, however, been the policy of successive Administrations not to give details of defence export business with specific countries.

Nerve Gas

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his oral answer of 17 July, Official Report, column 850, if he is now able to provide the information on the date of the proposed movement of stocks of nerve gas from Nordenham through the English channel and the contingency plans which exist in case of accident.

Mr. Tom King: I will write to the hon. Gentleman shortly.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Government Spending

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table restating table B2 of Cm. 1021 on the basis of the 1989 White Paper's departmental groupings.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table analysing at sub-programme level the classification changes and other changes underlying table B2 of Cm. 1021's summary of the differences between the 1989 White Paper's plans for 1989-90, together with parallel figures for the difference between the 1989 White Paper's plans for 1989-90 and the latest available outturn figures for that year.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Taxpayers

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) working and (b) non-working people do not pay tax.

Mr. Ryder: Available estimates for 1990-91 are given in the table. They are based on a projection of the 1987 family expenditure survey and are provisional.

Single people and married couples not liable to tax in 1990-91 millions Single people:

in employment	1·0
out of employment	6·5
Married couples:
Both in employment	0·2
one partner in employment	0·5
neither partner in employment	2·4

Private Medical Insurance

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current estimated cost to his Department in 1990-91 of tax relief on private medical insurance; how many people benefit; and what proportion of these are estimated already to have private medical insurance.

Mr. Ryder: Tax relief on private medical insurance for the over-60s is estimated to cost about £40 million in 1990-91. This estimate is based on the assumption that about 600,000 individuals with 330,000 policies will benefit. It is also assumed that about 90 per cent. of these initial beneficiaries already have private medical insurance.

Savings

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much a person would have to have in savings at current interest rates to generate income of (a) £3,000 per year and (b) £5,000 per year; how many people have savings at these levels; and how many of them are pensioners.

Mr. Ryder: Savings of £20,450 and a gross interest rate of 11 per cent., the current rate of return on a 90 day building society investment account of between £10,000 and £25,000, would yield income of £2,250 in 1990-91, the equivalent of £3,000 gross to a basic rate taxpayer. The corresponding level of savings for an income of £5,000 gross would be £32,600 with a gross interest rate of 11·5 per cent.

Estimates of the number of people with investment income (including interest on savings) of (a) more than £3,000 and (b) more than £5,000, in 1990-91 are given in the table.

Gross investment income, 1990-91 £	Aged under 65 (millions)	Aged 65 and over (millions)	Total (millions)
More than £3,000	1·5	1·1	2·6
More than £5,000	0·9	0·7	1·6

Estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional. These estimates are subject to a large degree of uncertainty since some investment income on which tax is deducted at source is not reflected in the survey.

Mortgage Tax Relief

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to his Department in mortgage tax relief of (a) a 1 per cent. increase in mortgage lending rates, (b) the cumulative cost since mortgage rates began to rise in June 1988 up to the end of 1989-90 and (c) the estimated cost in 1990-91.

Mr. Maples: An increase of 1 percentage point in the current level of mortgage interest rates would increase the annual cost of mortgage interest relief by about £550 million. The estimated additional cost of mortgage interest relief, resulting from the increases in mortgage rates above their 10 per cent. level of June 1988, was £2·8 billion up to the end of 1989-90. The cost will to a large extent have been offset by an increase in the tax yield on interest from deposits. The cost of relief in 1990-91 is estimated to be about £8 billion, taking the conventional assumption that interest rates remain at their current levels.

Pension Funds

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the Inland Revenue rules on the proposals by companies and pension funds seeking to encourage members to transfer their share of assets from the protection of a closed pension fund to an open fund.

Mr. Ryder: There are no Inland Revenue rules on this subject.

Cereals (Import Levy)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the highest import levy on wheat in the last 12 months; and what is the import levy on wheat on the most recent convenient date.

Mr. Ryder: In the period 25 July 1989 to 24 July 1990 the highest rate of import levy on wheat (CN Codes 10 01 10 10 and 10 01 10 90) was £137·5144 per metric tonne.

The levy rate at 24 July 1990 was £103·0138 per metric tonne.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the import levy on maize at the latest convenient date and what has been the highest import levy on maize in the last 12 months.

Mr. Ryder: The import levy on maize (CN Code 10 05 90 00) at 24 July 1990 was £103·4049 per metric tonne. This levy rate was the highest in the period 25 July 1989 to to 24 July 1990.

Empty Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the percentage of properties suitable for residential use and administered by the Crown estate (i) empty for more than six months, (ii) empty for more than one year and (iii) the location of these properties in terms of the region and local authority area.

Mr. Major: I understand from the Crown Estate that of the properties administered by them that are suitable for residential use, 2·14 per cent. have been empty for more than six months and 3·63 per cent. have been empty for more than 12 months. These figures reflect both the slow-down in the residential market, and properties awaiting planned modernisation.

The properties are located as follows:

(a) regionally in Scotland, the North East, the East and West Midlands, the East, London, the South East and the South West.

(b) by local authority area in Moray, Stirling, Holderness, Huntingdon South and North Kesteven, South Holland, Hinkley/Bosworth, South Staffordshire, Huntingdon, City of Westminster, Camden, Kensington & Chelsea, Hammersmith, Hackney, Tower Hamlets, Lewisham, Windsor and Maidenhead, Hastings, Weymouth and Portland, Tunbridge Wells, Rother, Kingston, Elmbridge, West Somerset and Kennet.

Privatisation

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish a table, showing for each nationalised industry privatised over the period 1979 to 1990 or in course of being privatised (a) the date of the original ministerial announcement of impending privatisation, (b) the date of publication of a White Paper or comparable document, (c) the date of publication of the relevant Bill, (d) the date on which Royal Assent was given and (e) the date of the actual privatisation;

(2) if he will publish a table showing, for each nationalised industry, public corporation, trading fund or Government-owned company sold since 1979 (a) the fees and commissions paid by Government Departments to merchant bankers, solicitors, underwriters, advertising agencies, and like advisers and expenditure, (b) the estimated cost of Government and civil service manpower on these activities, (c) the comparable expenditure on fees and commissions paid by the said enterprises, (d) the estimated cost of enterprise time on these activities, (e) the asset value, at both historic and current cost, at the last balance sheet date prior to the sale, (f) the gross proceeds of the sale and (g) net sales proceeds to the Exchequer;

(3) if he will publish a table showing, for each nationalised industry, public corporation, trading fund or Government-owned company sold since 1979 (a) the name of the enterprise and the date of the sale, (b) the number of founding shareholders, (c) the number of shareholders at successive anniversaries of sale, or at the nearest available date, (d) the proportion of shares at each date held by the largest 10, 50 and 100 private shareholders and (e) the proportion of shares initially retained by the Government, and the date and percentages of subsequent disposals.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the amount of subsidies paid in 1978-79 to companies privatised since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 23 July 1990]: The companies privatised since 1979 received subsidies of £19 million in 1978-79. This excludes capital grants and public dividend capital which, as they are not payments for current expenditure, do not fall within the national accounts or public expenditure survey definition of subsidy.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Forman) on 18 July, Official Report, column 590, how much British Gas Employee Share Trustees Ltd., would have saved if the shares in British Gas had been sold to them at a price equivalent to that at which they were sold to S. G. Warburgs.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The price at which shares were sold to British Gas Employees Share Trustees Ltd. was halfway between that at which they would otherwise have had to buy in the market and the price achieved by the Treasury in the bought deal with Warburgs. Both sides therefore benefited equally from the sale to the extent of some £300,000.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing, for each nationalised industry, public corporation, trading fund or Government-owned company sold since 1979 in cases where a golden share existed at the time of sale (a) the name of the enterprise and the date of the sale, (b) the principal eventualities against which that golden share was designed to safeguard, (c) the expiry date and the date on which the golden share has been retired and (d) restrictions on the size of shareholdings, or on the nationality of shareholders, including how these have changed over time; and if he will place in the Library copies of relevant documentation under (b), (c) and (d).

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have today placed in the Library details of the Government's special shares in privatised companies. The memorandum and articles of association of the relevant companies may be obtained from Companies House or the companies themselves.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table for 1989-90 outturn and 1990-91 year to date, comparable with table 21.5.13 of Cm. 1021.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Outturn figures for net privatisation proceeds in 1989-90 are given in the table. Figures for 1990-91 will be reported in the usual way. The target for net proceeds in 1990-91 is £5 billion.

Net privatisation proceeds 1989-90

Company	£ million
British Gas plc—redemption of debt	800
British Petroleum plc—sale of shares (third instalment)	1,367
British Steel plc—sale of shares (second instalment)	1,285
British Telecommunications plc—loanstock	92
Forestry Commission	14
Rover	150
Short Brothers	30
Water plcs—sale of shares	493

Company	£ million
Miscellaneous[1]	−7
Total	4,224

[1] Includes expenses which cannot be netted off the associated sale because they arose in a financial year in which there were no proceeds from the sale.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish (a) a table of financial targets published for the nationalised electricity, gas, telecommunications and water industries in the period 1978 to 1990, indicating both revisions and outturns against targets and (b) a similar table for external financing limits.

Mr. Norman Lamont: To provide a table with all the information requested would involve disproportionate cost. Some of this information is, however, readily available in public expenditure White Papers, cash limit outturn White Papers and the individual industries' annual reports and accounts.

Civil Service Pay

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 17 July, Official Report, column 461, if he will list the reduction in pay levels in home civil service pay to take account of pensions in each of the years (a) 1960, (b) 1964, (c) 1969, (d) 1971, (e) 1973, (f) 1974 and (g) 1978.

Mr. Major: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of (a) the annual cost to the Exchequer of mortgage interest relief at current interest rates and (b) the proportion of those paying national insurance contributions having a mortgage.

Mr. Maples: In 1990-91 the estimated cost of mortgage interest relief is about £8 billion. An estimated 48 per cent. of those paying national insurance contributions have a mortgage.

Income Tax

Mr. Alison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the percentage proportion of the total yield of income tax in the year 1989-90, or the latest available year, accounted for by (a) taxpayers at the top rate of 40 per cent., and (b) taxpayers at the standard rate with gross incomes broadly equivalent to half, one, one and half, two and three times average earnings.

Mr. Major: It is estimated that in 1990-91 the income tax liability of higher rate taxpayers will represent 35 per cent. of total income tax liability. The percentage of total tax liability resulting from basic rate taxpayers with gross incomes broadly equivalent to half, one, one and a half, two and three times average earnings would depend on the size of the income bands assumed.

Mr. Alison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the yield in a full year under the tax regime applying in the latest available year, if the top tax rate of 40 per cent. had been raised to 100 per cent. on the assumption that those with incomes liable to taxation at 40 per cent. had taken no precautionary or offsetting steps to mitigate the extra impost.

Mr. Major: The yield in a full year at 1990-91 levels of income of increasing the top rate of income tax from 40 per cent. to 100 per cent. is estimated to be just under £18 billion.

The estimate takes no account of any behavioural effects that might result from such an increase.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council.

Mr. Major: The Economic and Finance Council met in Brussels on 23 July. I represented the United Kingdom.

The Italian presidency outlined its objectives for the Council over the next six months. These will include preparation for the forthcoming intergovernmental conference on EMU, progress in the investment services, money laundering and capital adequacy directives, agreement on VAT and excise systems by the end of the year with a further discussion of the coverage of VAT rates, a further effort to strengthen mutual assistance in direct taxation, discussion of taxation in relation to the environment and transport, and consideration of a revision of the financial perspectives to take account of German unification. Economic and monetary union was discussed and I outlined our proposals for progress beyond stage one. It was agreed that these should be remitted to the monetary committee for further study. The German Finance minister, Herr Waigel, gave a short report on German economic, monetary and social union. The President of the Commission, Mr. Delors, gave an account of his recent visit to the Soviet Union.

The Council had an exchange of views on the Commission's latest proposals for VAT systems and for raising travellers' allowances. The Council will return to these subjects in October. The Commission asked for further discussion of excise rates at the October meeting and promised to table proposals on excise systems and structures before the end of September.

Finally a convention was signed which will provide a mechanism for solving transfer pricing disputes between tax authorities. This formed part of the package of three tax measures to encourage cross border co-operation which was agreed at the meeting of the Council on 11 June.

Tax Inspectors

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of the amount of revenue brought in by each tax inspector in a year; and what is their average salary.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 23 July 1990]: The receipts for inspectors of taxes cannot be separately identified. Taking all Inland Revenue employees, excluding valuation office staff not employed on taxes work, the tax receipts per employee for the year 1988-89—the most recent year for which figures are available—amounted to £1·12 million per head, with an additional £474,000 per head in national insurance contributions collected. For that year, the average salary of Inland Revenue staff was about £10,500.

Tax and National Insurance

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average individual cumulative gain (a) in current prices and (b) in 1990-91 prices to those earning (i) £5,000, (ii) £10,000, (iii) £15,000, (iv) £20,000, (v) £25,000, (vi) £30,000, (vii) £40,000, (viii) £50,000, (ix) £60,000 and (x) £70,000 as a result of changes in taxation and national insurance since 1979.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 23 July 1990]: Estimates of the annual change in liability resulting from the changes in income tax rates, allowances, and thresholds and national insurance contribution rates and limits are in the table. The estimates are based on a provisional 1990-91 income base projected from the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes. National insurance contribution limits for 1978-79 have been indexed by the change in the RPI between October 1977 and October 1989. The 1978-79 income tax regime has been indexed to 1990-91 levels by reference to the statutory formula and allowing for independent taxation. The comparisons shown in the table between these indexed regimes and the 1990-91 tax and NIC regimes therefore reflect budgetary changes in rates and allowances, but not (i) any changes since 1978-79 in the definition of the income tax base nor (ii) the introduction of independent taxation.

For the purposes of these calculations, the indexed 1978-79 income tax and NIC regimes have been directly applied to the 1990-91 income base. In practice, retention of these regimes, indexed as appropriate, for the intervening years would have led to changes in the income base.

Average reduction in income tax and national insurance contributions per individual[1] in 1990-91 compared with 1978-79 indexed regime

Range of individual's income in 1990-91 (£)	Average reduction at 1990-91 prices (£)
Under 5,000	170
5,000 to 10,000	340
10,000 to 15,000	520
15,000 to 20,000	640
20,000 to 25,000	890
25,000 to 30,000	1,310
30,000 to 40,000	1,990
40,000 to 50,000	3,790
50,000 to 60,000	6,720
60,000 to 70,000	10,110
Over 70,000	31,690
Total	760

[1] Individuals paying either income tax or NIC under the 1978-79 indexed regime.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report tables for the financing of local authority expenditure separately in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland which are directly comparable with the United Kingdom table printed as table 21.4.13 of Cm 1021.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Data are not held in a form which allows the disaggregation of table 21.4.13 of Cm 1021 across territories. Consequently it is not possible to provide analyses directly comparable to this table except at excessive cost. However, much of the information requested is contained in a slightly different form in:

i. Local Government Financial Statistics England
ii. Scottish Local Government Financial Statistics
iii. Welsh Local Government Financial Statistics
iv. Northern Ireland Annual Abstract of Statistics

These are published annually by the Department of the Environment, the Scottish Office, the Welsh Office and the Department of Finance and Personnel, Northern Ireland respectively and are obtainable from the Library.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report tables for the financing of local authority expenditure in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom, in a form comparable to table 21.4.13 of Cm. 1021, but analysing the financing of local authority expenditure as in table 21.4.6, and not the financing of local authority expenditure on a national accounts definition.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The table shows the financing of local authority expenditure as defined in table 21.4.6 of Cm. 1021 for the United Kingdom:

	1984-85 £ million	1985-86 £ million	1986-87 £ million	1987-88 £ million	1988-89 £ million
Grants in aggregate Exchequer finance	13,320	13,230	14,130	15,170	15,623
Other grants	6,250	6,575	7,203	7,575	7,235
Rates (net of all rebates)	12,953	13,881	15,702	17,120	18,904
Trading surpluses, interest and dividend	1,188	1,210	1,355	1,407	1,690
Rents	2,871	3,089	3,055	3,042	3,006
Borrowing from central Government (PWLB)	3,329	5,752	5,723	4,089	4,941
Borrowing from other sources	−943	−4,078	−5,574	−2,801	−4,492
Other receipts	−379	−243	408	−984	−140
Total income	38,589	39,416	42,002	44,618	46,767

The footnotes in table 21.4.13 of Cm. 1021 still apply except that "other grants" excludes the repayment of VAT and "other receipts" excludes the imputed income from non-trading capital.

As for a territorial breakdown I refer the hon. Member to my answer to his previous question about table 21.4.13.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing reconciliations for England, Scotland and Wales between local authority current expenditure as in Table 21.4.8 of Cm. 1021 and the respective aggregate expenditure for grant purposes in successive Revenue/Rate Support Grant Orders.

Mr. Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Rost: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what ways the relationship of the Medicines Control Agency with the Treasury differs from that of the former medicines division of the Department of Health.

Mr. Norman Lamont: None, as the Medicines Control Agency remains part of Department of Health.

National Accounts Adjustments

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will publish in the Official Report tables showing, separately for England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom, the composition of the national accounts adjustments in table 21.4.13 of Cm. 1021.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The data for the components of the national accounts adjustments are not held in a form which permits a disaggregation of the adjustments across territories, except at excessive cost. However, there is no reason to believe their territorial breakdown is disproportionate to the composition of local authority expenditure. The table sets out the principal components of the national accounts adjustments shown in table 21.4.13 of Cm. 1021:

	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Capital Consumption	1,273	1,354	1,469	1,555	1,657
VAT refunds	982	1,063	1,280	1,261	1,410
Company Securities	5	14	71	177	128
Others	225	469	251	442	−215
Total	2,485	2,900	3,071	3,435	2,980

The nature of these adjustments is explained in appendix C of Cm. 1021.

British Gas

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the reply given to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Forman) on 18 July, Official Report, column 590, how many market makers were selected to tender for the 54,000,000 British Gas shares sold to S. G. Warburg and Co.; and whether any higher, if conditional, tender was received.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Four market makers, including S. G. Warburg and Co. Ltd., were invited to bid for the shares. No higher tender was received than from Warburgs although an equal, but conditional, bid was received from one other bidder. In those circumstances, the Government accepted the unconditional bid.

Nationalised Industries

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing for each organisation which was classified as a nationalised industry in the 1980 public expenditure White Paper, or has been so classified in a subsequent White Paper, the employment of that organisation as at 31 March 1979 and at each successive 31 March up to 1990.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information requested is readily available in the individual industries' annual reports and accounts.

Indirect Taxes

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures showing, for 1987, indirect taxes as a percentage of disposable income for each quintile group of non-retired households ranked by original income, on the same basis as in table G on page 95 of "Economic Trends" No. 422, December 1988.

Mr. Maude: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Child Care

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of introducing a tax allowance for child care costs, set against the taxable income of the mother, equal to £50 per week (a) per family with children under the age of 16 years and (b) per family with at least one child under the age of five years, giving the numbers of each who would benefit from such an allowance.

Mr. Maude: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Inflation

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each month since 1979 (a) retail prices index inflation, (b) inflation excluding mortgage interest rates, (c) inflation excluding mortgage interest rates and the poll tax, or equivalent, (d) the average inflation rate for the European Economic Community and (e) the average inflation rate for those countries currently full members of the exchange rate mechanism.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Overseas Investment

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount of investment overseas by British companies in each financial year from 1978-79 to the present.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 25 July 1990]: Figures on overseas direct investment by United Kingdom companies over the period 1978-79 to 1989-90 are as follows:

United Kingdom direct investment overseas (including miscellaneous)

	£ million
1978-79	4,236
1979-80	6,123
1980-81	4,821
1981-82	5,631
1982-83	4,888
1983-84	5,132
1984-85	7,713
1985-86	5,931
1986-87	13,559
1987-88	21,196
1988-89	22,973
1989-90	17,142

EC Payments

Mr. Bob Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the net amounts paid to the EEC for each year from 1979; and what is the estimated amount to be paid in 1990.

Mr. Ryder: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Marginal Tax Rates

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people face marginal tax rates, both including and excluding social security, of (a) over 40 per cent., (b) over 50 per cent., (c) over 60 per cent., (d) over 70 per cent., (e) over 80 per cent., (f) over 90 per cent. and (g) over 100 per cent.: (i) now and (ii) in each year since 1978-79.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply.

Information up to 1989-90 was provided in my reply to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 16 March at columns 400-01. Estimated numbers facing marginal deduction rates including social security, in the specified ranges for 1990-91 are shown in the table.

Rates	[1] 1990-91 thousands
100 per cent. and over	—
90-99 per cent.	40
80-89 per cent.	170
70-79 per cent.	200
60-69 per cent.	10
50-59 per cent.	[2]—
40-49 per cent.	130

[1] Projection based on 1985, 1986 and 1987 FES uprated to 1990-91 levels and incorporating DOE guideline community charges announced in January 1990 and including the effect of Community Charge Benefit.

[2] Denotes an estimate of fewer than 2,500.

Excluding social security and national insurance, no taxpayers experience marginal deduction rates of more than 40 per cent.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Set-aside Scheme

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to what areas outside the existing pilot scheme in East Anglia he intends to extend the agricultural set-aside scheme.

Mr. Curry: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to the countryside premium scheme for set-aside land, currently operated by the Countryside Commission in seven eastern counties of England. The question of extending the present scheme would be a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make an announcement on the arrangements for the third year of the set-aside scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: My right hon. Friends and I have reviewed the workings of this scheme in the light of the experience of its first two years. Our policy is that the scheme, which has as its primary purpose the reduction of surplus production of cereals and other crops, should protect the environment and should, where possible, go further and lead to environmental improvements. In general we favour integrating, so far as possible, environmental measures into agricultural policy. We have therefore decided to make a number of amendments to the scheme for 1990-91 and subsequent years.

First, we have decided to require the plant cover on fallow set-aside land to be cut twice a year instead of once as at present with suitable time gaps between cuts. This should achieve an improvement in the appearance of such land.

Secondly, we are extending the list of environmental features that farmers participating in the scheme will have to maintain and protect to include stone walls, vernacular buildings, unimproved grassland, moorland and heath.

Thirdly, we have decided to introduce a limited grazed fallow option. Under this farmers who kept livestock in the base year 1987-88 will be able to graze animals on fallow land up to a limit of the number of livestock units on the holding in the base year. We have also agreed to allow producers of deer or goats to graze these animals on their fallow set-aside land up to a limit of one livestock unit per hectare if they did not have livestock in the base year. This will be of benefit to fibre producers. I am aware that some farmers have in the past been concerned about the possible effects of a grazed fallow option on upland livestock producers, but this limited provision should allay their fears while being very positive environmentally.

Fourthly, equivalent changes will be made to the Countryside Commission's countryside premium scheme which offers additional aid on suitable set-aside land in seven eastern counties for management practices designed to achieve specific environmental and recreational benefits. This will be helpful in the re-creation of wildlife habitats.

The Government have also decided to increase the rates of aid for permanent fallow and rotational fallow, partly to offset the increased costs arising from the new management rules.

New entrants to the scheme will receive the higher rates and will be bound by the new management rules. Existing participants may also opt to observe the new management rules and receive an appropriate adjustment to rates. Those wishing to continue to observe the old rules may do so but will be paid at existing rates of aid.

The revised rates for permanent and rotational fallow are as follows:

Permanent fallow	LFA	non-LFA
(i) new participants	202	222
(ii) existing participants under new rules	190	210
(iii) existing participants under old rules	180	200
Rotational fallow
(i) new participants	182	202
(ii) existing participants under new rules	170	190
(iii) existing participants under old rules	160	180

The rate of aid for grazed fallow will be approximately half the permanent fallow rate. We have also decided to introduce differential rates of aid in order to reflect better the savings made in the setting aside of large proportions of land on larger farms. Farmers who set aside to fallow more than 100 hectares of land and more than 75 per cent. of their area eligible for set-aside will receive lower rates of payment on the hectarage above 100 ha.

Application forms and explanatory literature will be available from local offices of Agriculture Departments on 27 August 1990. All applications should be submitted by 30 September 1990.

An amending statutory instrument incorporating these changes into the existing legislation will be laid before Parliament.

I have placed in the Library a detailed guidance note providing information on the new rules of the scheme.

Horsemeat Products

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are taken to alert consumers to the horsemeat products imported to the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Horsemeat and horsemeat products are covered by the provisions of the Food Safety Act 1990 and the Food Labelling Regulations 1984. Under the Food Safety Act it is an offence to offer for sale any food that is falsely described or labelled, advertised or presented in a way that is likely to mislead as to its nature, substance or quality. Under the Food Labelling Regulations horsemeat products have to indicate clearly that they contain horsemeat so that consumers are aware of this fact.

Export Subsidies

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total amount spent by the European Commission in export subsidies on agricultural products for each year since 1980; and how much was spent in respect of wheat for each of those years.

Mr. Curry: The expenditure charged to the Community budget on export refunds on agricultural products, excluding refunds on exports for food aid, and on wheat —grain and flour—for each year since 1980 is as follows:

(in mecu)

	Export refunds on agricultural products	Export refunds on wheat[1]
1980	5,695	n/a
1981	5,209	n/a
1982	5,054	n/a
1983	5,560	809
1984	6,619	492
1985	6,716	478
1986	7,409	692

Wheat

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total domestic consumption of home-grown wheat in the latest convenient 12-month period.

Mr. Curry: The latest MAFF estimate of total consumption of home-grown wheat within the United Kingdom for the marketing year ended on 30 June 1990 is 10·68 million tonnes.

Pesticides

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he has made on the review of pesticides; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Companies have been required to submit details of data held in support of all pesticides approved prior to 1981. The Advisory Committee on Pesticides has considered the priority to be given to each one and an ordered list will be published shortly.

Tuna

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he proposes to meet his counterparts in the European Community regarding the banning of imported tuna caught with dolphin by-catches.

Mr. Curry: I have no plans at present. The United Kingdom fully supported the Community's endorsement of the United Nations resolutions against indiscriminate large-scale pelagic drift netting which involved the incidental take of dolphins. Further, the United Kingdom supported this resolution at the recent meeting of the International Whaling Commission. Tuna fishing does not necessarily involve incidental take of dolphins and I am aware that some tuna products are advertised as having been obtained from fisheries that have not involved by-catches of dolphins.

Whales and Dolphins

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has made representations to his counterpart in the Danish Government concerning the recent slaughter of whales and dolphins in the Faroe Islands.

Mr. Curry: When the International Whaling Commission met this July I again made plain my concern to the Danish authorities about the traditional pilot whale hunt in the Faroe Islands, particularly in relation to improving the humaneness of the hunt.

Dairy Products

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the effect for New Zealand's dairy farmers of the decision taken by the European Commission on 19 July to raise export restitutions on dairy products.

Mr. Curry: It is for the New Zealand Government to assess the likely effect on New Zealand dairy farmers.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, in the light of the current state of the international dairy market and the negotiations now taking place in Geneva on the general agreement on tariffs and trade Uruguay round, if he will make a statement on the reasons for the decision taken by the European Commission on 19 July to raise export restitutions on dairy products.

Mr. Curry: The Commission acted on its own authority and without consulting member states. We had, however, made it clear on earlier occasions that we were opposed to an increase in export refunds in the dairy sector at this time. The world dairy market is already depressed as a result of declining demands coupled with increasing production and low-priced eastern European exports which have not previously played a significant part in the market. Clearly increasing the level of subsidised exports from the Community is not the right way to tackle our underlying problem of overproduction.

Public Footpaths

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are taken in calculating set-aside payments to take into account public footpaths along the side of or across a field; and by how much a payment varies, between a field of given acreage with a footpath and a similar field without a footpath.

Mr. Curry: Areas of fields not cropped because of farm tracks, pylons, footpaths or broad margins amounting to more than 0·1 of a hectare are not eligible for set-aside payments. Taking the example described, a field without footpaths would contain a slightly higher proportion of land eligible for set-aside and would therefore receive a slightly higher payment than a field of similar size with footpaths amounting to more than 0·1 of a hectare.

Agricultural Dwellings

Mr. Soley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what action he intends to take to ensure that the Ministry's duty as an independent adviser to local authorities on proposals for agricultural dwellings is not compromised by the commercial advice given by the Agricultural Development Advisory Service;

(2) what action he intends to take to ensure the independence of the Ministry's assessment of the financial viability of proposals for agricultural workers' dwellings.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 3 July at column 493. I have nothing further to add.

Dioxins

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place the food surveillance results and information on the advisory level of intake for dioxins that were presented to the Toronto dioxins symposium in 1989 in the Library.

Mr. Gummer: The paper in question gave an overview of the Ministry's programme of work on dioxins in food and included interim results of a survey of levels in fish and milk. These were all below the Department of Health's guideline levels for intake of this substance through the diet.

A full account of this, and the work currently in progress, will be published as a food surveillance paper towards the end of 1991. In the meantime I am placing a copy of the symposium paper in the Library, as requested.

A more detailed consideration of the presence of dioxins in the environment, including food, may be found in pollution paper 27 "Dioxins in the Environment" published by the Department of the Environment last year.

Slaughterhouses

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of man years of his staff involved in advising on hygiene and welfare standards in abattoirs from 1983 onwards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Local authorities are responsible for enforcing legislation on hygiene and welfare at abattoirs. Officers of my Department visit all abattoirs to advise on hygiene and welfare standards and, in relation to exporting premises, to ensure that Community requirements are observed. The manpower involved for each year since 1983-84 was as follows:

	Man-years
1983-84	53
1984-85	52
1985-86	56
1986-87	45
1987-88	45

For subsequent years, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 15 March at column 323.

It is planned to devote additional resources to this work as the industry prepares for the single market.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has now received the report on general conditions of the visit by European Community inspectors to 14 slaughterhouses in March 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have nothing further to add to the reply that I gave the hon. Member on 22 March at columns 736-38 and the letter that I sent to him on 23 April.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the slaughterhouses that were visited by European Community inspectors in March 1989 and 1990; if he will indicate those which had their approvals suspended; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: European Community inspectors visited the following slaughterhouses in England and Wales in March 1989 and 1990:

England Wales Slaughterhouse (EWS) numbers 8, 23, 32, 44, 53, 60, 77 and 103.

EWS 33.

On the question of suspensions, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 23 July.

Tuberculosis

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what has been the actual cost of his tuberculosis eradication scheme (a) in general and (b) for badgers for each of the last 10 years; what are his estimates for future expenditure for 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will give the number of man years of those employed in his Ministry on (a) tuberculosis eradication in general and (b) tuberculosis and badgers for each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields of 5 July, Official Report, column 687, how many outbreaks of tuberculosis have been recorded on a county-by-county basis for each year since 1986; if he will indicate, for each year and in each county, how many outbreaks were considered to have connections with badgers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: In a number of counties in the south and west of Great Britain, a significant proportion of the now confirmed cattle TB breakdowns are considered to have connections with badgers.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of cattle have contracted tuberculosis on a county-by-county basis in each of the last six years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The table sets out for counties in England and Wales for the years 1986-89 the numbers of tuberculosis reactor cattle slaughtered in which tuberculosis was confirmed, expressed as a percentage of the total number of cattle in the county. Information in the form requested is not available for earlier years.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will introduce, as part of his tuberculosis control programme, areas where badgers are not killed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Badgers are not killed in the Gloucestershire study area and, at the time of his report, Professor Dunnet considered additional such areas to be unjustified. This possibility has been reconsidered as a means of assessing the effect of any badger control strategy with the same result.

Badgers

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many dead badgers his Ministry has received for each year since 1985; and if he will indicate the causes of their death where known.

Mr. Gummer: The vast majority of badger carcases submitted by the public were the result of road traffic accidents, but records are not kept of the cause of death. The numbers received and examined were:

	Number
1985	1,826
1986	2,060
1987	1,967
1988	2,015
1989	2,085

Committees (Disclosure of Information)

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields of 23 July, if he will place in the Library copies of the forms that members of (a) the Food Advisory Committee, (b) the Veterinary Products Committee and (c) the consumer panel have to sign concerning the disclosure of information from those committees.

Mr. Gummer: Members of these committees are not asked to sign forms about the disclosure of information.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the effect on the tuberculosis eradication programme of the extra demands on the state veterinary service resulting from BSE.

Mr. Gummer: The tuberculosis eradication programme has not been affected by the work generated by BSE.

Salmonella

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many tests in each of the last six months were undertaken for salmonella on eggs at ports of entry; how many consequently were found to include salmonella-contaminated eggs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: So far this year, I have received no reports of imported consignments contaminated with salmonella enteriditis or typhimurium.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will invoke article 36 of the treaty of Rome to prohibit salmonella-contaminated eggs being imported into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: As the hon. Gentleman is aware, it would be illegal to attempt to use article 36 to prohibit the import of eggs on such grounds.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. Curry: There is one special adviser, Mr. R. Gueterbock, currently employed by this Department. My Department employs no public relations advisers. Mr. Gueterbock is paid by the Department, but it is not our practice to reveal the salaries of special advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential. The normal civil service rules apply to expenses. In addition, any special adviser may be provided with secretarial assistance.

Land Prices

Mr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average price per hectare of average quality arable agricultural land in England on the latest available date; and what was the comparable price in the previous year.

Mr. Curry: Official price statistics of agricultural land do not distinguish between land uses. The bulk of arable production takes place on land grades 1, 2 and 3. The latest available average price of land, including buildings, for these combined grades sold in England is £4,370 per hectare and relates broadly to calendar year 1988; the comparable figure for 1987 is £3,555 per hectare.

Poultry Imports (Portugal)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to counter the import of poultry from Portugal in view of the incidence of Newcastle disease there.

Mr. Gummer: In the absence of harmonised Community rules, current national import conditions require that all poultry imported from Portugal is accompanied by a certificate signed by an official veterinarian confirming that there has been no case of ND in the flock of origin or any hatchery within 20km during the three months prior to export.

In addition such birds are also subject to a period of at least eight weeks post in port followed by a period of at least 12 weeks quarantine isolation under official veterinary supervision.

These safeguards have worked efficiently to prevent the introduction of ND into this country by imported poultry. There have been no outbreaks of ND in Great Britain from any source since 1984.

Rendering Industry

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields on 23 July, if he will list the dates on which he had meetings with representatives of the United Kingdom rendering industry.

Mr. Gummer: As stated in my earlier reply to the hon. Gentleman, Ministers in this Department frequently meet representatives of the rendering industry. My most recent meeting with the industry was on 11 July, and I also visited a plant belonging to one of the largest United Kingdom renderers on the same day.

Aspartame

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he received a dossier of documents concerning the safety and testing of aspartame from Dr. Erik Millstone of Sussex university; what action has been taken to refer them to the committees of experts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: My officials first received a set of documents from Dr. Millstone on 28 September 1989 and have received further documents on two subsequent occasions. All have been passed to the Department of Health to be brought to the attention of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemical in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment in connection with its current review of aspartame. Dr. Millstone has also written to me directly.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Salmon

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether fisheries conservancy board bailiffs and a scientist were authorised to remove salmon for the purpose of stripping eggs from them during the salmon seasons 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 on the Grillagh river in County Londonderry.

Mr. Brooke: No.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many reports have been received by the Fisheries Conservancy Board of poaching and illegal salmon stripping on the Grillagh, Clady and Maine rivers since November 1988; and what action has been taken.

Mr. Brooke: The Fisheries Conservancy Board receives a substantial number of reports, mostly oral, about poaching throughout its area of responsibility, but, as no central record of reports is maintained, it is not possible to quantify the number received in relation to specific watercourses. All reports are investigated by board staff.

In January 1989 the board received information from a local angling club that there were dead salmon in the Grillagh river. On investigation a board bailiff found a number of dead fish some of which had been cut open. Subsequently allegations were made that board staff were involved in the stripping of salmon and the illegal operation of a hatchery.

Because of the alleged involvement of its staff the Fisheries Conservancy Board referred the investigations to the Royal Ulster Constabulary for investigation. Following the submission of its report the Director of Public Prosecutions directed "No prosecution".

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many subject access requests under the terms of the Data Protection Act his Department has received; what was his estimate of the number of requests that would be received; what consideration he is giving to the subject access fee charged by his Department as a result; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments have received a total of 28 subject access requests since November 1987. The estimated number of requests was 3,800 annually. I have no plans to reconsider subject access fees.

Strangford Lough

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to issue new leases of the foreshores of Strangford lough; and if he has any plans for its future management under a locally based democratic and representative structure.

Dr. Mawhinney: The issuing of leases of the foreshore of Strangford lough is a matter for the owners. The Crown Estate is the major owner of the foreshore.

The future management of foreshore contained in the Strangford lough area of special scientific interest is a matter between individual owners and occupiers and the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland. The Department will consult widely regarding the formulation of management plans for Strangford lough in the context of the proposed marine nature reserve.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any proposals for the leasing of the beds of Strangford lough; and what proposals there are for its future management under a democratic representative structure based within the local community.

Dr. Mawhinney: The issuing of leases of the sea bed of Strangford lough is a matter for the owners. The Crown Estate is the major owner of the sea bed. The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland will consult widely regarding the formulation of management plans for Strangford lough in the context of the proposed marine nature reserve.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he commissioned the Queens university Belfast marine biology station in Portaferry to prepare a survey and report on a management structure for Strangford lough; whether this survey is completed; and if he proposes that this report will be made available to the public.

Dr. Mawhinney: On 9 January 1989, the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland commissioned the Queen's university, Belfast, to carry out a study of the human and physical factors affecting Strangford lough, especially the natural resources of the lough. The final report has not yet been received. The report will not be published, but much of the material will be used as the basis for a consultation document on the future management of Strangford lough.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what dates he declared the area of special scientific interest (part 3) for Strangford lough; how many applicants have since been issued with consents; what is his estimate of the total remaining potential applicants; and if he will make a statement about his proposals to make this area of special scientific interest acceptable to those landowners and users who have not applied for consent.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Strangford lough (part 3) area of special scientific interest (ASSI) was declared on 21 April 1989. Thirty-five applicants have been issued with consents to carry out notifiable operations under article 25 of the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands (Northern Ireland) Order 1985. It is not possible to estimate the number of remaining potential applicants. The indications are that the ASSI is gaining widespread acceptability with landowners and occupiers.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many consents have been issued by the Department under the ASSI (part 3) for Strangford lough; and how many of these consents were in respect of notifiable operations which are not such as would cause any damage to the scientific interest but which are required by article 10 of the 1989 amending order No. 492 to the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands (NI) Order 1985.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland has issued 35 consents to the carrying out of notifiable operations within the Strangford lough (part 3) area of special scientific interest.

It is a legislative requirement that a single list of notifiable operations should be drawn up for each ASSI as a whole. Each of these operations has the potential to damage the scientific interest in some part of the ASSI but may not cause damage in other parts. The 35 consents to notifiable operations so far issued are for operations which will not damage the scientific interest in the locations concerned.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) whether he has any plans to cease using accountancy firms sued by the Government for negligence;

(2) whether he has any plans to cease using accountancy firms found to be unprofessional by the joint disciplinary scheme;

(3) whether he has any plans to cease using accountancy firms criticised by Department of Trade and Industry inspectors.

Mr. Cope: I refer the hon. Member to my previous reply on 15 January at column 17.

The Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments are aware of the need, before awarding contracts, to take into account all relevant considerations and to make such inquiries as are necessary to establish the professional competence of the firm concerned. In this connection, close links are maintained with Her Majesty's Treasury and the Department of Trade and Industry and the relevant guidelines on the employment of accountants, accountancy firms and advisors are followed.

Stevens Inquiry

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons were arrested as a result of the Stevens inquiry; how many are (1) male and (2) female; how many have been charged with (a) murder, (b) attempted murder, (c) possession of arms and/or ammunition, (d) explosives, (e) membership of an illegal organisation, (f) collection of, or being in possession of, information relating to known or suspected terrorists and (g) collection of, or being in possession of, information which might be of use to a terrorist organisation.

Mr. Cope: As a result of the inquiry led by DCC Stevens, 94 persons have been arrested, of whom 59 have either been charged or reported for offences. This includes two females. The requested information on charges is as follows:

Charge	Number of persons
Murder	Nil
Attempted murder	Nil
Possession of arms and/or ammunition	9
Explosives	Nil
Membership of an illegal organisation	Nil
Collection, recording or possession of information likely to be useful to terrorists	29

No specific offence exists of collection of or being in possession of information relating to known or suspected terrorists. Where persons were found to be in possession of photographs and so on of known or suspected terrorists they have been charged under section 22(1) of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978.

It should be noted that two of the nine persons charged with possession of arms and/or ammunition are also included in the 29 charged with the collection, recording or possession of information likely to be useful to terrorists.

Milk

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to change the statutory role of the Northern Ireland Milk Marketing Board; and if he will make a statement about the future of the Milk Marketing Board.

Mr. Brooke: I have no proposals at present to change the statutory role of the Milk Marketing Board for Northern Ireland.

Boyd House, Ards Hospital

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many residents there are in Boyd house at Ards hospital; what is the demand for places at Boyd house; and if he will make a statement about the future of Boyd house.

Mr. Needham: There are 44 residents in Boyd house, with 17 people on the waiting list for admission. The organisation of services at local level is a matter for the health and social services boards. We are not aware of any proposals by the Eastern board relating to the future of Boyd house.

Community Care

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will introduce the community care reforms in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement on community care.

Mr. Needham: The Government's proposals for the development of community care in Northern Ireland are as set out in the policy paper "People First", which the Department of Health and Social Services published in March 1990.

The proposed changes will, however, be introduced more slowly than originally intended. As my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health told the House on 18 July, the Government have decided that it would not be practicable to implement all the reforms simultaneously in April 1991. In particular, the present social security arrangements for people needing care in private or voluntary residential care and nursing homes will continue until April 1993. Since the social security system operates on a national basis, Northern Ireland will follow the new national timetable. This means that health and social services boards will not begin purchasing care on behalf of their clients in residential homes and nursing homes until 1 April 1993.

It is, however, intended to maintain the momentum on developmental work needed to turn the concept of high quality community care into a reality. The Department will be issuing a series of implementation documents on key aspects of the reforms for consultation over the next few weeks. Health and social services boards will be implementing the proposals on arm's length inspection units and complaints procedures from next April; and will have additional time to prepare thoroughly for successful implementation of the other major changes.

Irish Language

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total funding made available by his Department each year for the maintenance of the Irish language.

Dr. Mawhinney: Irish is widely taught in schools and colleges of further education in Northern Ireland. It is also available in initial teacher training and in the universities. However, the costs of these forms of support are not held centrally.

In addition, full Irish-medium education is provided in two schools, Bunscoil Phobal Feirste in Belfast and Steelstown primary school in Londonderry. In 1989-90 the running costs for such Irish-medium education were approximately £367,000. Capital grants have also been made in the past to the Bunscoil amounting to £443,000. A further allocation of £20,000 has been made available to Bunscoil Phobal Feirste to assist in the development and production of curriculum materials in Irish language.

Funding of Irish language projects by the central community relations unit also began last year under the cultural traditions programme and grant in the region of £90,000 was paid. Provision in the present financial year is around £200,000 including support for the Ultach trust.

In addition, funding has been provided for a project at Queen's university, Belfast to research the origins of Irish place names; funding in this financial year is £130,000.

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has made to the Irish Government to release members of the Protestant minority from the need to pass examinations in Irish as a condition of public employment.

Mr. Brooke: I have not raised any matters relating to the Protestant minority in the Republic with the Irish Government. However, questions relating to the language requirement for Northern Ireland residents seeking employment in the education sector in the Irish Republic have been raised.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the reasons for the bans on the use of Irish in prisons (a) in correspondence, (b) during visits and (c) on forms; what is the average time taken to censor Irish language publications for prisoners' use; and what is the practice on the provision of opportunities for Irish sports in prisons in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope: I regret that in the time available it has not been possible to provide the information requested. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Lough Neagh

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what quantity of water is abstracted by his Department each day from Lough Neagh; and what effect it has on the water level in the lough and on the flow to the lower River Bann.

Dr. Mawhinney: Water taken from the lough has no material effect on either the level of the lough or the flow to the lower Bann.

The top 25 millimetres (inch) of the lough contain some 9,500 million litres—2,000 million gallons—of water, which is equivalent to about 75 days' supply at peak demand.

The flow from the lough to the lower Bann averages some 8,000 million litres—1,750 million gallons—a day, or some 65 times the net amount abstracted for the public water supply.

The water service of the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland currently abstracts up to 220 million litres—48 million gallons—a day from Lough Neagh.

Some 96 million litres—21 million gallons—is returned to the lough after use and treatment. The result is a net export of some 124 million litres—27 million gallons—a day.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. Cope: No one is presently employed in such a capacity.

Prisoners

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether republican and loyalist (a) remand prisoners and (b) convicted prisoners are separated in Northern Ireland prisons.

Mr. Cope: I regret that in the time available it has not been possible to provide the information requested. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Religious Schools

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has any proposals to grant formal constitutional or statutory guarantees to Protestant and Roman Catholic schools that they will be treated equally as envisaged in paragraph 8.51 of the report of the Standing Advisory Committee on Human Rights (Cm. 1107).

Dr. Mawhinney: As was said when the SACHR report was published on 26 June 1990, it is a document of breadth, sensitivity and complexity whose recommendations need careful consideration before any conclusions are reached.

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the framework granted to Roman Catholic schools with the formation of the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools will be extended to Protestant and integrated schools.

Dr. Mawhinney: The vast majority of schools in Northern Ireland, other than the voluntary grammar schools, are either controlled schools or Catholic maintained schools. Since controlled schools are in the ownership and management of the education and library boards, there is no need to establish a further body for them analogous to the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools.

There are a small number of maintained schools still in the ownership of the Protestant churches and there are seven maintained integrated schools. I have no plans at present to establish bodies analogous to the council for these schools.

Universities

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the number of Northern Ireland domiciled undergraduate entrants to British universities and Irish universities, outwith Northern Ireland, in each year since 1968.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

Academic year	British Universities	Republic of Ireland Universities
1968-69	326	359
1969-70	418	211
1970-71	508	171

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Antrim North of 19 July, Official Report, column 1160, whether it remains the policy of Her Majesty's Government to consider an alternative to and a replacement of the Anglo-Irish Agreement through the present proposed negotiations, in the terms set forth in his recent letters to the right hon. Member for Lagan Valley (Mr. Molyneaux) and the hon. Member for Antrim, North.

Mr. Brooke: I am happy to confirm that the terms of my letters of 4 May to the hon. Gentleman and to the right hon. Member for Lagan Valley (Mr. Molyneaux) do indeed remain the policy of Her Majesty's Government. In the context of discussions about possible future arrangements for the government of Northern Ireland, we would give serious consideration to any implications for the agreement that such arrangements might have, and we would also consider any proposal—including any proposal for an alternative to the agreement—that would advance the underlying objectives of achieving peace, stability and reconciliation.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Minister will now carry out the duties allocated to the hon. Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley) in the last Cabinet Office document intituled, "A List of Ministerial Responsibilities".

Mr. Brooke: I have decided that these duties will be reallocated as follows.

My noble Friend Lord Skelmersdale will assume responsibility for the Department of Agriculture. I shall myself answer in this House on agriculture matters. In the Department of the Environment, my hon. Friend the Member for Wiltshire, North (Mr. Needham) will take on responsibility for the roads service, the works service and the public record office, to add to his existing responsibilities for planning, urban affairs, the lands service and comprehensive development. My hon. Friend the Member for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney) will assume responsibility for housing, local government, historic monuments, conservation, environmental protection, the water service, ordnance survey, the lands registry, the registry of deeds, and transport, including the fire service.

Other ministerial duties remain unchanged. I continue to have overall responsibility for the work of the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments.

Motorways

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many miles of Northern Ireland motorways central safety barriers are (a) up to British and European standard and (b) sub-standard; and how soon the sub-standard barriers will be replaced.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1990]: There are 11 miles of tensioned steel safety barriers which meet British standards on Northern Ireland's 69 miles of motorway. A contract for the provision of a further 3 miles is currently under way. The remaining 55 miles have a non-standard central earth mound barrier which is unique to Northern Ireland. A programme to replace the mound barrier with steel barriers will be completed over a number of years.

AIDS

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the cumulative totals on 31 December 1987, 30 June 1988, 31 December 1988, 30 June 1989, 31 December 1989 and 30 June 1990 of (a) people who have died with AIDS (b) people with AIDS including those who have died and (c) HIV antibody positive persons in Northern Ireland (i) by patient characteristic and (ii) in total.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 23 July 1990]: The information requested is as follows:

a. People who have died with AIDS

Date	Male (cumulative)	Female (cumulative)	Total (cumulative)
31 December 1987	3	—	3

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer to the questions from the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 18 July relating to the Fair Employment Commission, what is his estimate of the cost of answering each of those questions; and by how much this sum is over the limit allowed for the answer of a parliamentary question.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1990]: Consideration must be given to the cost to public funds in terms of the time and effort required to provide an Answer. It is estimated that the cost of answering the hon. Gentleman's questions would have been in excess of £600.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in the Official Report those firms and employers which are registered with the Northern Ireland Fair Employment Commission in the Moyle district council area or by reference to the postal code or codes which cover that area; and if he will indicate for each such firm and employer the number of employees.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 July 1990]: The firms listed are those in the Moyle district council area which have been registered by the Fair Employment Commission. The total number of employees is shown opposite the name of the firm.

Registered concerns in Moyle district council area

	Number of employees
Leabank Private Nursing Home 1 Beechwood avenue Ballycastle	33

Citizens Advice Bureaux

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the policies of the Department of Education on citizens advice bureaux in Belfast.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 25 July 1990]: The citizens advice bureaux in Belfast, as elsewhere in Northern Ireland and indeed in the rest of the United Kingdom, are voluntary advice-giving agencies independent of the Government and I do not interfere in their operations or determine their policies.

Youth Training

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any funds provided to Derry Youth and Community Workshop under the youth training programme in the last financial year are unaccounted for.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 25 July 1990]: The Department of Economic Development has still to receive audited accounts for 1989-90 from the workshop management committee. A recent financial inspection carried out by the youth training programme inspection team has not found any irregularities.

Community Service Grant

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether consideration is being given to improving community service grant aid to local authorities who face particular demands from disadvantaged areas.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 25 July 1990]: I have no plans to increase the community services grant aid to councils, which stands at £1,935,000 this year.

The hon. Gentleman will appreciate that councils have the ability either to increase their resources from the rates or to alter their priorities in the allocation of their available resources. He can be assured that the allocation of grant to each council is made on as fair and equitable a basis as possible.

Maternity Services

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what research his Department has funded to assess the safety or the comparative costs of delivery in (a) district general hospitals, (b) general practitioner maternity units and (c) at home; and if he will give the conclusions of each project funded.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 11 July 1990]: The Department of Health and Social Services has not funded any research in these areas in recent years, but account is taken of the results of any relevant research undertaken elsewhere.

R-plates

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) whether any research has been done on the effectiveness of the R-plate scheme for newly qualified drivers in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the use of R-plates on motor vehicles in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 16 July 1990]: To date no specific research has been carried out on the effectiveness of the R-plate scheme for newly qualified drivers in Northern Ireland. The R-plate scheme was introduced in Northern Ireland on 1 April 1968. This requires the newly qualified driver to display R (for restricted) plates on the front and rear of the vehicle for a period of 12 months after passing the driving test. R drivers may not exceed a speed of 45 mph. Speed limits for roads of 30 mph and 40 mph must, of course, be obeyed.

The 45 mph speed restriction allows the newly qualified driver to gain experience for one year at lower speeds and warns other drivers that the vehicle is likely to be driven by an inexperienced driver.

Royal Ulster Constabulary accident statistics show that lack of experience in the first five years of drivers and motor-cyclists is a major contributory factor in relation to responsibility for accidents. Drivers are only half as likely to be responsible for an injury accident in the first year —the R-plate year—after passing the driving test as in the second year.

Research is being commissioned to determine whether the R-plate scheme contributes to this effect.

Political Parties (Discussions)

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his recent discussions with political parties in the Province.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 19 July 1990, c. 1157-58]: Despite a further intensive round of exchanges, it has not yet proved possible to secure final agreement on the basis for holding political talks.

After the holiday period, when all the main potential participants should again be available, I intend to resume my efforts to resolve the outstanding issues. For that purpose I plan to hold further meetings with the political parties and with representatives of the Irish Government in September.

SCOTLAND

Bypasses (A76 and A77)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the latest dates when he expects statutory procedures to begin on the bypasses for Mauchline and New Cumnock on the A76 and Maybole and Girvan on the A77.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The road orders for the A76 New Cumnock bypass have been made and the draft compulsory purchase order was published in April 1989 and there is one objection still outstanding. It is intended to publish draft road orders for the A76 Mauchline bypass during this financial year. The options for the A77 Maybole and Girvan schemes are currently the subject of detailed investigation and no date has yet been set for the publication of draft orders.

HIV Infection

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what conclusions he has drawn about the likely future incidence of HIV infection in Dundee, following the results of the project to screen pregnant women for HIV infection at Ninewells hospital; and what assessment he has made of the likely funding implications which will arise for Tayside health board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The results of an HIV antenatal screening study in Dundee, which is being funded by the medical research council, have not yet been fully collated and assessed, and it is, therefore, too early to draw firm conclusions from them.

It is not feasible at present to assess the likely funding implications which will arise for Tayside health board from the results of the study.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the instance of HIV infection in (i) men and (ii) women per 1,000 of population for (a) Dundee and (b) Scotland, in each year for which figures are available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on the incidence of HIV infection in men and women per 1,000 of population for Dundee is unavailable. The information for Scotland, based on the numbers of males and females who have been identified and reported to the communicable diseases (Scotland) unit as being HIV antibody positive, is set out in the table:

HIV antibody positive persons

Road Accidents

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the accident and fatal accident figures for each month of 1988, 1989 and any months of 1990 currently available for each stretch of the A77, A74 and A96, for the whole of each road, and on a directly comparable basis.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested for years 1988 and 1989 is provided in the following tables; figures are not available yet for 1990.

1988 and 1989 Accident Rates

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce measures to reduce the number of traffic accidents; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government are pursuing a wide range of measures in an effort to reduce the number of traffic accidents. These include engineering measures to improve the roads, publicity and advice to engender greater public awareness of the need for care on the roads, and legislation to improve standards of road safety behaviour.

In the last financial year, I committed £1 million to be spent specifically on low-cost accident investigation and prevention (AIP) schemes which funded 70 engineering schemes throughout Scotland. For this financial year I have committed a further £1·2 million to be spent on AIP work and to date 78 schemes have been approved throughout Scotland.

The Scottish Development Department has set up a specialist AIP team which liaises with the AIP teams also recently introduced by regional councils. Their combined efforts should play a major part in achieving the goal the Government have set of a reduction in road casualties by one third by the year 2000. Specific sites that have a bad accident record are looked at in detail with a view to undertaking low-cost engineering remedial works specifically designed to alleviate the particular problems identified. Strategies to bring improvements for routes as a whole are also being prepared.

Regional councils have been asked to set casualty reduction targets for local roads in their transport policies and programmes.

In terms of publicity, 1990 has been designated as Scottish Road Safety Year as part of efforts to tackle major areas of concern in Scotland related to speeding, drinking and driving and child pedestrian accidents. This is in addition to the Government's national campaigns and publications aimed at specific road safety issues. In May the Government announced wide-ranging proposals for the reduction of child casualties on roads, when they published the findings of the report on child pedestrian accidents and crossing behaviour in Scotland. It identified both engineering measures and educational measures aimed at adults, especially parents, and drivers, which would improve road safety. These proposals have been issued to the regional and island councils' roads, education and health service departments. It is envisaged that casualties can best be reduced through the publicity and co-ordinated responses of all these groups.

On the legislative side, responsible road user behaviour is fostered by effective and fair traffic laws. We intend to introduce legislation at the earliest possible opportunity to implement the proposals to improve road traffic law that are set out in the White Paper, "The Road User and the Law". In addition, new legislation has recently come into force on child rear seat belts and we intend to introduce amended regulations for Scotland on road humps.

Heather Moorlands

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to preserve heather moorlands in Scotland; and whether he will introduce a moorland management grant analogous to the financial support for forestry and sheep grazing.

Mr. Rifkind: The preservation of heather moorlands in Scotland is encouraged in a number of ways. The farm and conservation grant scheme provides grants for the enclosure of areas of heather moorland to protect them from livestock and muirburn, and heather regeneration and bracken control continue to be eligible for grant. Three of the four mainland environmentally sensitive area schemes contain prescriptions for the retention of existing areas of heather and in all four there is the requirement to make muirburn for good heather management in accordance with the standards set out in the joint DAFS-NCC report entitled "A Guide to Good Muirburn Practice". Heather areas can also be notified as SSSIs by the NCC if the area is of special interest by reason of any of its flora, fauna or geological or physiographical features. I am considering what further measures to preserve heather moorlands may be required.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide an analysis, comparable with table 21.4.8 and with the local authority expenditure in Cm 1015, showing that local authority expenditure in Scotland which falls outside expenditure within his own responsibility.

Mr. Rifkind: The information is as follows:

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the revenue received in 1989-90 from those who were required to pay 20 per cent. of their poll tax; and what is the estimated revenue that will be received in 1990-91 from such payers.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the poll tax rate of collection he is assuming in determining the level of support for local authorities in 1991-92.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The decision that my right hon. and learned Friend announced yesterday was based on a considered view of what local authorities should reasonably spend next year and of the level of support from central Government that was appropriate. The decision took account in particular of views on these matters that had been expressed to him by the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, but my right hon. and learned Friend did not accept the convention's suggestion that the taxpayer should be burdened with the consequences of the failure of local authorities to collect the sums due to them.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects people who had between £8,000 and £16,000 of savings in the financial year 1989-90 and who have applied for a poll tax rebate to have their claims decided; and when he intends to publish full details of how this particular rebate scheme is to be operated.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Draft regulations prescribing the details of the community charge special payments scheme have been the subject of consultation with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and will be laid shortly. Responsibility for operating the proposed scheme will rest with local authorities and it will be for them to decide when they are able to make payments to successful claimants.

Water Supply Pipes

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total value of grants paid by each district council in Scotland for the replacement of water supply pipes made of lead during the financial years 1988-89 and 1989-90 and for the current financial year to date.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Replacement of lead plumbing is usually carried out in conjunction with other works, and in these cases it is not possible to identify the cost of the plumbing work separately. Grants payable on applications approved in the years 1988-89 and 1989-90 for the replacement of lead plumbing alone were as in the table; returns have not yet been received for the period from April 1990 onwards.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total number of employees of the Greater Glasgow health board, broken down by categories and grades, at the end of each of the last five financial years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not readily available by category and grade for the end of the financial years. Information on grades within categories could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Public Transport

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is, for each year since 1975, the total amount of public funding in (1) roads, (2) railways and (3) airports in Scotland in 1990 moneys.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 12 July 1990]: The information held centrally is given in the table.

I shall write to the hon. Member when the figures for British Rail's direct expenditure in Scotland become available.

Notes:

1. Railways—Support by Strathclyde regional council under section 20 of the Transport Act 1968 for British Rail services in Strathclyde.
2. Airports—Highlands and Islands Airports Ltd.: grant from the Scottish Office to ensure the continuation of operations at eight highlands and islands airports which provide the communities they service with vital social, business and welfare links. Public expenditure figures relating to BAA airports in Scotland are not held centrally.
3. Other public transport investment—Other expenditure by central and local authorities on transport provision. A detailed breakdown of these figures is not available, but they include expenditure on railways (other than section 20 support and British Rail's direct expenditure in Scotland) and expenditure on local authority aerodromes.
4. The expenditure has been converted to 1990-91 prices using GDP deflators.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the amounts he indicated to each health board for support finance for the years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91, (b) how much was budgeted by individual boards in those years and (c) the actual expenditure for support finance by individual boards for those years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Indicative levels were last set centrally for 1988-89. Health boards were asked to set their own targets for 1989-90 and 1990-91. The available information is given in the table:

Arrests

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were arrested by the police in Scotland in 1986, 1988 and 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not available.

Gaelic

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total funding made available by his Department each year for the maintenance of the Gaelic language.

Mr. Lang: In the current financial year some £306,000 will be provided, by my Department, as grant aid under the provisions of the National Heritage (Scotland) Act 1985 to bodies that support Gaelic. A further £1·2 million will be spent on projects under the specific grants scheme for Gaelic education. From 1992-93 the Scottish Office will provide £8 million for the establishment of a Gaelic television fund which will be used to make an additional 200 hours of Gaelic television programming to be broadcast annually on top of the 100 hours currently transmitted by the television companies in Scotland.

Press Officers

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many press officers are employed by his Department.

Mr. Rifkind: In addition to the director and deputy director of the Scottish Information Office, 21 information officer grades were employed on press office duties at 1 July 1990.

Political Advisers

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the political advisers and public relations advisers currently employed to advise Ministers in his Department, including those persons paid by other organisations and seconded to the Government, giving in every case the source of payment, rate of salary and expenses.

Mr. Rifkind: Two special advisers, Mr. Graeme Carter and Mr. Alan Young, are employed in the Scottish Office to advise Ministers on political matters. They are employed and paid directly by my Department. It is not our practice to reveal salaries of individual advisers as they are individually negotiated in relation to previous outside earnings and are, therefore, confidential. Expenses are payable to them at the normal civil service rates.

There are no public relations advisers on the staffing strength of the Scottish Office either paid directly or on secondment from another organisation.

In respect of the privatisation of the electricity supply industry, two public relations companies are retained by the Department jointly with the two Scottish electricity companies to provide marketing public relations advice —PR Consultants Scotland and Citigate Communications Ltd.. Details of the contracts are commercially confidential.

Community Care

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he plans to meet representatives of (a) voluntary agencies representing carers and the elderly, (b) the nursing and medical professions and (c) the directors of social work departments to discuss the implications of the delayed implementation of the care in the community proposals;

(2) if he will make a statement on the expenditure implications of the delay in the implementation of the care in the community proposals.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the effect on closure proposals for hospitals housing elderly patients of the delayed implementation of the care in the community proposals.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As with all hospital closures, proposals submitted by health boards to close hospitals housing elderly patients will be considered on their merits, and the availability of suitable alternative care will be one of the factors taken into account.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he plans to meet representatives of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss the delayed implementation of the care in the community proposals.

Mr. Lang: I shall consider carefully any request from the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss the revised programme for the implementation of the Government's proposals for community care.

EC Structural Funds

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what proportion of European Community structural funds aimed at correcting regional and national imbalances was given to projects within (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland in each of the last seven years; and what level of such funding is expected for (i) Strathclyde and (ii) Scotland in 1990-91 and 1991-92;

(2) what action he has taken to enable Scotland to obtain a full share of European structural funds up to and beyond 1992.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Sexual Abuse

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what specialised centres Her Majesty's Government support with public funds for young women sexually abused in (a) Scotland, (b) Edinburgh, (c) Glasgow and (d) Aberdeen.

Mr. Lang: My Department provides core funding in the form of grant assistance under the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 to a number of voluntary organisations, including Scottish Women's Aid, which support local organisations providing accommodation for women who are the victims of domestic violence and other forms of abuse. Direct funding of local projects in this and other fields of social work is primarily the concern of local authorities; projects in certain urban areas may also be eligible for support under the centrally funded urban programme. No accommodation funded in this way is provided specifically for young women who are sexually abused.

Mental Handicap

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what requirements a health board, social work department or any other relevant body employs in respect of the assessments of the suitability of (a) the owner, (b) the manager and (c) anyone holding a position of responsibility in a private nursing home for those suffering from mental handicaps.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The registration and inspection of private nursing homes are the responsibility of health boards and are governed by the Nursing Homes Registration (Scotland) Act 1938 and the regulations made thereunder, the Nursing Homes Registration (Scotland) Regulations 1988.

Health boards may refuse to register an applicant if they are satisfied that he, or any person employed by him at the home, is not a fit person, whether by reason of age, conduct or otherwise.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will undertake a review of the arrangements by which the suitability of persons engaged in the ownership and management of private nursing homes for people with mental handicaps are assessed and monitored; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No. I am satisfied with the current arrangements whereby under the Nursing Homes Registration (Scotland) Act 1938 health boards have a responsibility for assessing the suitability of applicants for registration to run a nursing home and their employees.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessments health boards and other relevant bodies are required to make in the event of (a) a change of ownership and (b) a change of management in respect of a privately owned nursing home for those with mental handicaps.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The registration and inspection of private nursing homes are governed by the Nursing Homes Registration (Scotland) Act 1938 and the regulations made thereunder, the Nursing Homes Registration (Scotland) Regulations 1988.

In the case of a change of ownership a fresh application for registration must be made to the health board.

Where the management changes the change must be notified within 72 hours to the health board, which requires to be satisfied that the person employed is a fit person by reason of age, conduct, qualification or otherwise.

Heart Disease

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current rate of electro-cardiogram testing for heart diseases per 1,000 of population in each of the health board areas.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is not available centrally.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of staff trained and employed in electro-cardiagram testing for heart disease by each of the health boards.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not available centrally.

Road System

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the units or project teams responsible for the road system in Scotland together with their addresses, directors, and the last prior professional appointment of those directors.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are two project teams located within the Scottish Office roads directorate, New St. Andrew's house, Edinburgh, which have responsibility for the preparation and management of major trunk road schemes in Scotland. The project directors are Mr. R. D. Udall and Mr. J. A. Howison whose prior professional appointments were as principal engineers within the Scottish Development Department's chief road engineer's office.

Intensive Care Units

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many intensive care units there are; and what is the total number of beds in such units which have (a) a one-to-one nurse to patient relationship, (b) at least five beds per unit, (c) more than 250 admissions per annum and (d) full-time residential care.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Traffic Wardens

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to transfer the functions of traffic wardens to the private sector.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have no such plans.

Hospital Closures

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will direct health boards to suspend all plans for closure of geriatric, psychiatric and mental hospitals until April 1993.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am aware that some boards are considering changes in the pattern of geriatric services which will ultimately require ministerial approval. Formal proposals will come forward in due course and each will be considered on its merits. There are, however, no closure submissions before me at the moment.

Brook Advisory Centre, Edinburgh

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with national health service authorities in Scotland regarding alternative arrangements for pregnant women presently served by the Edinburgh Brook Advisory Centre in the event of its closure.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement regarding community health education and the role played by the outreach team of the Brook Advisory Centre of Edinburgh.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Prisoner Statistics

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of mentally ill or disturbed men and women who are currently serving terms of imprisonment.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 2 April 1990 to the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) at columns 361-62.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he is taking to facilitate the transfer of mentally ill and disturbed prisoners to mental hospitals.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None. I believe that the existing arrangements for the transfer to suitable hospitals of prisoners requiring in-patient treatment for mental disorder under sections 70 to 72 of the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984 are functioning satisfactorily.

Psychiatric Patients

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many psychiatric patients have been discharged from psychiatric hospitals and long-stay mental hospitals in the last year for which records are available; and how many more have been referred to the care of local authorities.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Labour Statistics

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of unemployed claimants in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow and (b) Strathclyde on 1 January 1983 and 1 January 1990; and what is the current number.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Private Tenancies

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give figures for rents for private tenancies by local authority area.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not available for all private tenancies. Information is held centrally only in respect of the average rent of tenancies where the rent has been registered by the rent officer.

Average registered rents for the calendar year 1989 are set out in the table:

Derelict Land

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total area of land recovered from dereliction in each district authority area during the last five years; if any formerly listed buildings were demolished in any recovery programmes; what is the present area of dereliction in each district authority area; and by how much the extent of derelict areas has changed, over the past five years, in each of these district authority areas.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Of the four pieces of information requested, three are not collected centrally. As for present levels of dereliction, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Angus, East (Mr. Welsh) on 24 April at column 59.

Junior Hospital Doctors

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the British Medical Association in Scotland to discuss the problem of junior doctors' working hours; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend and I have not formally met representatives of the British Medical Association to discuss junior doctors' hours of work.

Local Authorities (Capital Receipts)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will lift restrictions preventing local authorities from diverting money from capital receipts into the building of houses.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no restrictions that debar local authorities from using the capital receipts arising from the sale of assets, including council houses, to which the housing revenue account applies for the purpose of financing the construction of new council houses. Within the aggregate levels of the appropriate consent to incur capital expenditure issued by my right hon. and learned Friend under section 94 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973, local authorities are free to determine their own priorities for council housing investment.

Waste Producers

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimated cost for regulating producers of waste (a) in Strathclyde and (b) in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Regulatory responsibility is shared between district and islands councils, river purification boards, the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland and Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate. Expenditure figures to cover all those activities are not available centrally.

Heart Disease and Lung Cancer

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the latest statistics concerning (a) deaths and (b) sufferers from (i) heart disease and (ii) lung cancer in each of the health board areas; and what were the comparable figures in 1975, 1980 and 1985.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The figures that are held centrally are as follows:

The Scottish cancer register provides information on the number of new cases of cancer diagnosed each year in Scotland. The figures shown are, therefore, estimates of the incidence of cancer. Prevalence figures are not immediately available.

Job Creation

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce measures to create more jobs in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang; I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

NHS Trusts

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will extend the consultation period in relation to the submission of views to him regarding hospitals becoming self-governing trusts; if he will list the individuals and organisations to whom copies of the application prospectus have been sent; what is the total cost of the production, printing and distribution of the prospectus; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Empty Properties (Health Boards)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of empty properties owned by health boards in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland as a whole (i) is currently empty awaiting sale, (ii) has been empty for more than six months and (iii) has been empty for a year or more.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not available in the form requested.

Young People (Sex Education)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about teaching of safe sex to young people by specialised professional centres.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The teaching of safe sex to young people is undertaken by a wide range of organisations. At national level the Scottish Health Education Group (SHEG) produces educational material which aims to provide young people with information and advice to help heighten awareness of the risks and problems sexual relationships can cause, particularly in relation to HIV infection and AIDS. The group is about to undertake fresh research that will explore perceptions of sexual health among young people in the 16 to 25 age group to ascertain the need for new health education material in this area.

At the local level, health board family planning clinics play a valuable role in providing free and accurate contraceptive advice and information on the need for safe sexual practices. Doctors and practice nurses also have a role to play in this area. The school system also undertakes an important role in the delivery of sex education. A joint SHEG/Scottish Consultative Committee on the Curriculum working party on health education in schools has recently reviewed the structure of health education programmes for the 10 to 14 age group: this review has included extended consideration of the treatment of sexuality and relationships. The working party's report, which advocates the concept of the health-promoting school, is expected to be published in September. In addition, of course, parents have a direct responsibility for the instruction of their children in the matter of sex education.

Voluntary organisations also operate at both the national and local levels and contribute to the teaching of safe sex to young people.

Slaughterhouses

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the slaughterhouses that were visited by European Community inspectors in 1989 and 1990; if he will indicate which have had their approval suspended; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following slaughter houses in Scotland were visited by EC inspectors in 1989 and 1990:

Inverurie Scotch Meat Company Ltd., Inverurie
David A. Hall Ltd., Broxburn
British Beef Company Ltd., Hawick
G. D. Vivers and Sons, Annan
Dundee Public Abattoir, Dundee
Mathers (Inverurie) Ltd., Inverurie

1990
Aberdeen Meat Marketing Company Ltd., Banchory
Inverurie Scotch Meat Company Ltd., Inverurie
McIntosh Donald, Portlethen
Buchan Meat Producers Ltd., Turriff
William Watt, Strathaven
J. Kelly and Sons (Meat) Ltd., Larkhall
Scotbeef (Meat Packers) Ltd., Bridge of Allan

Two of the slaughterhouses listed are currently suspended from engaging in intra-Community trade in sheepmeat. The suspension is applied until structural or operational requirements are attended to and it would not be appropriate to identify those plants that may be suspended at any one time.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library a list of abbatoirs in Scotland indicating which are European Community approved and which have had their European Community licences suspended.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

Note:—All abattoirs which are EC approved are denoted by an asterisk.

Two of the abattoirs listed are currently suspended from engaging in intra-Community trade in sheepmeat. The suspension is applied until structural or operational requirements are attended to and it would not be appropriate to identify those plants that may be suspended at any one time.

Scottish Natural Heritage

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many posts will be required by the proposed natural heritage agency; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Natural Heritage will inherit the staff of the Countryside Commission for Scotland and the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland. I am not yet in a position to quantify the total complement of staff which the new body will require.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average price per hectare of average quality arable agricultural land in Scotland on the latest available date; and what was the comparable price in the previous year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Agricultural land price statistics do not differentiate between land qualities or distinguish arable land from other types of agricultural land. The average prices of farms sold with vacant possession and remaining in agriculture during 1987 and 1988, the latest years for which complete records are available, were as follows:

	1987 (£ per hectare)	1988 (£ per hectare)
All farms	848	758
Lowground farms	1,130	994

Heart Operations

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average length of time patients in the Greater Glasgow health board area must wait before receiving coronary heart bypass operations.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: During the financial year 1989-90, the median waiting time for coronary heart bypass operations in hospitals in the Greater Glasgow health board area was 63 days for urgent cases and 167 days for routine cases.

Forestry

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he intends to introduce legislation relating to the United Kingdom forestry industry.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government have no plans to introduce legislation relating to the United Kingdom forestry industry.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, following the European Commission report on forest damage in Europe, his Department intends to raise in the European Community the issue of forestry policy in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The European Community does not have a common forestry policy. Responsibility for forestry policy rests with the individual member states.

Firearms

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what category of certificate has been issued to cover the firearms displayed on HMS Plymouth on the River Clyde at Glasgow.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Special Olympics Games

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland why was it decided that no Scottish Office Minister should attend the opening ceremony of the European Special Olympics Games in Glasgow on Saturday 21 July.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: It had been planned that a Scottish Office Minister would attend, but in the event because of circumstances arising none was able to do so.

Rating Valuation

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost per domestic dwelling of carrying out the last valuation exercise for rating purposes in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not available. The 1985 revaluation in Scotland covered both domestic and non-domestic property and the cost of valuing different classes of property is not separately identifiable.

Milk

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to prevent in the future the sale of untreated or unpasteurised milk in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The present restrictions in Scotland on the retail sale of raw milk for human consumption have, since their introduction in 1983, been fully justified by the dramatic decline in the incidence of reported milk-borne infections.

Proposals have recently been received from the EC Commission aimed at generally improving the health rules and standards for the production and marketing of raw milk across the Community. They seek to establish microbiological and antibiotic residue levels, but, as presently drafted, would not of themselves outlaw the sale of raw milk that met the prescribed standards.

These proposals, which, if adopted, would not come into force until 1993, are presently the subject of public consultation, but our aim in any discussions on them will be to maintain the high public health standard of milk which we have achieved.

Water Pollution

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends fully to implement the recommendations of the 1984 SDD report regarding ferruginous discharges into rivers and streams.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: While the Scottish Development Department (SDD) did not produce any report on this subject in 1984, it was reviewed in a report "Water Pollution Control in Scotland—Recent Developments" published in August 1983. This report did not make any specific recommendations regarding ferruginous discharges, but if the hon. Member would care to write to me with details of his particular concerns, his letter will receive careful attention.

Bed-and-Breakfast Establishments

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to make regulations exempting small bed-and-breakfast establishments in Scotland from non-domestic rates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: As I announced on 19 July I have decided, having considered the many responses received to the consultation paper on this subject, to prescribe that dwellinghouses that are made available for letting as bed-and-breakfast accommodation to no more than six persons per night are to be included within the statutory definition of domestic subjects. This will ensure that the occupiers of such premises are not liable for non-domestic rates. The relevant regulations—the Abolition of Domestic Rates (Domestic and Part Residential Subjects) (No. 2) (Scotland) Regulations 1990—have been laid before Parliament today.

These regulations implement our proposal for clarifying the boundary between domestic and non-domestic subjects in the case of bed-and-breakfast establishments, thus ensuring the consistent treatment of such premises for rating purposes. I am confident that they will be welcomed by the operators of many small establishments, especially in rural areas.

Scottish Bus Group

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make available the prices paid for individual subsidiaries of the Scottish Bus Group.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department of Transport about the publication of sale prices of the subsidiaries of the National Bus Company. Sale prices of the subsidiaries of the Scottish Bus Group will be made available in due course once privatisation has been completed.

A1 (Roadworks)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the timing of proposed works to the A1 road at Pencraig hill in East Lothian.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 25 July 1990]: A report has been received from Lothian regional council which considers the provision of crawler lanes on a short section of dual carriageway at Pencraig hill to prevent the build-up of "platoons" of traffic behind slow-moving vehicles at this location. The scheme will now be reviewed by the new A1 steering group which is required to identify a programme of overtaking opportunity schemes between Edinburgh and Morpeth. In the first instance, the group will require to identify five overtaking opportunity schemes by next spring for early implementation, and Pencraig hill will be considered in this context.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Power

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement of current Government policy in respect of the activities of the International Atomic Energy Agency and Euratom in the implementation of safeguards for nuclear material designated for peaceful uses through the continuous surveillance of nuclear facilities and materials.

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply.

The Government's policy continues to be that all civil nuclear material held in the United Kingdom is subject to Euratom safeguards under the Euratom treaty of 1957 and to the terms of the United Kingdom—Euratom—IAEA safeguards agreement of 6 September 1976—IAEA INFCIRC 263.

ENERGY

Nuclear Incidents (Reporting)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what nuclear incidents his Department has reported to the International Atomic Energy Agency's incident reporting system since the United Kingdom joined in March 1986; and what is the average time gap between an incident being reported by the relevant United Kingdom operator to his Department and subsequently conveyed to the incident reporting system.

Mr. Baldry: In the United Kingdom, the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate co-ordinates reports to the International Atomic Energy Agency's incident reporting system. To date 53 such events in the United Kingdom have been reported. The time gap between the incident being reported by the operator and its subsequent transmission to the IAEA is usually about three days.

The primary aim of the International Atomic Energy Agency's incident reporting system is to improve safety by analysing the causes of unusual events and providing operational feedback to member states. Such events are therefore selected for reporting on the basis of the lessons that can be learned from them rather than the consequences associated with them. This system is, of course, additional to two IAEA conventions—on the early notification of nuclear accidents and on mutual assistance in the case of a nuclear accident—which were adopted by the general conference in September 1986.

Wind Turbine

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if his Department has assessed the viability of the new wind turbine developed by Alastair Reed Associates, Glasgow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: My Department has not been approached by Alastair Reed Associates, and their wind turbine has not been assessed.

Radioactive Waste Management

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what safeguards arrangements currently apply to United Kingdom-produced spent reactor fuel and reprocessed plutonium.

Mr. Baldry: All civil spent reactor fuel and plutonium is subject to Euratom safeguards under the Euratom treaty of 1957 and to the terms of the UK-Euratom-IAEA safeguards agreement of 6 September 1976—IAEA INFCIRC 263.

Heating Conversion System

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether his Department or the energy technology support unit at Harwell has assessed the energy-saving potential of the TRI SOL heating conversion system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The TRI SOL heating system is the subject of a project under the European Communities' former demonstration programme for energy technologies. The project is expected to be completed in December 1990 and the results of an assessment of it should be available from the Commission of the European Communities in 1991.

Hinkley Point C

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish the report of the Hinkley Point C inquiry before he announces his decision and before the House rises for the summer adjournment.

Mr. Wakeham [pursuant to his replies, 2 July 1990, c. 431 and 20 July 1990, c. 760-61]: I have today decided to grant consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 and to direct that planning permission should be given pursuant to section 90(2) of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 to Nuclear Electric plc for the extension of the Hinkley Point nuclear power stations by the construction and operation of an additional PWR generation station to be known as Hinkley Point C.

My decision on whether Nuclear Electric plc will be given the necessary financial approval to allow the project to proceed will depend upon the outcome of the review of nuclear policy scheduled for 1994 which I announced to the House in my statement of 9 November 1989.

Copies of my decision letter together with the inspector's report are being placed in the Libraries of the House.

A copy of my decision letter and the inspector's conclusions and recommendations will be available from the Vote Office.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Rendering Industry

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields on 23 July, if he will list the dates on which he had meetings with representatives of the United Kingdom rendering industry.

Mr. Gummer: As stated in my earlier reply to the hon. Gentleman, Ministers in this Department frequently meet representatives of the rendering industry. My most recent meeting with the industry was on 11 July, and I also visited a plant belonging to one of the largest United Kingdom renderers on the same day.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

India

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total amount of United Kingdom bilateral aid spent on energy projects in India since 1980.

Mrs. Chalker [holding answer 26 June 1990]: United Kingdom financial aid for energy projects, including coal mining and oil and natural gas, in India has been £477 million since 1980, including estimated expenditure for 1989. In addition, expenditure on technical assistance has totalled £31 million in the same period.

DEFENCE

Gulf Forces

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution the United Kingdom has made to the Western European Union forces in the Gulf; what is the extent of the contributions made or promised by the other eight member nations; and what additional steps he expects the Western European Union to take in support of the United Nations operations there.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All Western European Union member countries have undertaken to contribute to the multinational effort in the Gulf region, either directly or indirectly, and to co-ordinate fully their activities with other forces taking part in the implementation of United Nations Security Council resolutions 661 and 665. On current plans they will deploy more than 30 naval vessels to the Gulf area by the end of September. The United Kingdom has deployed four destroyers/frigates, three mine counter-measures vessels and their command ship, and four Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels in support of the multinational naval effort.

ENERGY

Reprocessing Plants

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when the most recent meeting of the large-scale commercial reprocessing plant safeguards group took place; what issues were discussed; and whether the large-scale commercial reprocessing plant group intends to present a report on the future of safeguarding of large reprocessing plants to the forthcoming quinquennial review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Baldry: The most recent meeting of the large-scale commerical reprocessing plants group, the third plenary, was held in Avignon between 18 and 22 June this year. A paper on the large-scale commercial reprocessing group was also presented at the Institute of Nuclear Materials management conference held in Los Angeles between 16 and 19 July. A copy of the paper, which describes the current activities and interests of the large-scale commercial reprocessing group, has been placed in the Library of the House. As the work of the large-scale commercial reprocessing plant group is not yet complete, no report was presented to the non-proliferation treaty review conference.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current percentage collection rate by each local authority for the poll tax; what is the shortfall in revenue; and by how much poll tax rates would have to be increased in each case to compensate for the loss of revenue from non-payment.

Mr. Portillo: The Government have no comprehensive information on current collection rates. We shall be receiving details of collection rates at 30 September 1990 from local authorities and this information will be collated and made available to the local authority associations in the same way as was the information for 30 June.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the latest figures he has for actual spending in 1989-90 and planned spending in 1990-91 for (a) each of the London boroughs, (b) the metropolitan districts of Salford, Stockport, Trafford, Sefton, Wirral, Coventry, Sandwell, Bradford and Leeds and (c) the shire counties of Cambridgeshire, Devon, Dorset, Gloucestershire, Hereford and Worcestershire, Kent, Oxfordshire, Somerset and Wiltshire.

Notes:
1. Domestic rates gross of rate rebates but net of rate relief grant.
2. Community charge income gross of charge benefits and transitional relief grant.
3. Income from the non-domestic rate pool is distributed in proportion to relevant population (£292·51 per adult). It is not comparable with income from non-domestic ratepayers in earlier years.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the relationship of community charge to rates in the manner of his answer to the hon. Member for Ealing, Acton (Sir G. Young) on 19 June, Official Report, column 480, using actual rates of community charge set by local authorities.

Mr. Key: The analyses already provided offer the most valid illustration of the distributional effects of the introduction of the community charge system. Use of actual community charges would not provide a proper comparison with 1989-90 rates since increases in local authority spending mean that the community charge is raising 30 per cent. more revenue than was raised by domestic rates.

Local Government Superannuation Regulations

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the implementation of the Local Government Superannuation (Amendment) Regulations 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Local Government Superannuation (Amendment) Regulations 1990 came into force on 17 September. Comments on the draft regulations were invited from interested parties in April, and 14 replies were received. These included a detailed response from the United Kingdom steering committee on behalf of local authorities in England and Wales.

Archaeological Funds

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 18 July, Official Report, column 562, what consideration he has given to the most appropriate measures for protecting archaeological finds made on unscheduled sites.

Mr. Trippier: My Department is currently discussing this issue with English Heritage.

Nature Conservation Grants

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements will be made arising from the proposed reorganisation of the Nature Conservancy Council to co-ordinate applications for nature conservation grants for projects with a Great Britain interest or which relate to more than one country; and whether the Joint Nature Conservation Committee will take a co-ordinating role.

Mr. Trippier: The Government has already made it clear that the new agencies should agree efficient procedures for dealing with applications for nature conservation grants which cover more than one agency's interests, in order to prevent duplication of funding and to avoid unnecessary work for applicants. Grants are an executive function for the country agencies themselves and there is no need for any statutory or other formal provision for involvement by the Joint Nature Conservation Committee.

Water Quality

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list each nitrate derogation which has been granted to each water company in England and Wales, giving the date when each derogation was issued and the expiry date;

(2) if he will list each centre of population which receives drinking water which is in breach of European Community nitrate limits.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Derogations for nitrate which were granted in 1985 were withdrawn by the government in 1988. For those supplies which breach the EC and national standard for nitrate, or where there has been a past breach which is likely to recur, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has accepted an undertaking from the water company under section 20 of the Water Act 1989 to secure compliance with the standard. All supplies will comply by 1995 at the latest. Those supplies which do not meet the standard in the interim are not considered to endanger health. Copies of the undertakings by the water service companies are available in the Library.

I am arranging for copies of the undertakings my right hon. Friend has accepted from the statutory water companies to be placed in the Library.

Undertakings accepted by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales are a matter for the Welsh Office.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment further to his reply of 19 July, Official Report, column 729, if he will give details and results of all surveys of groundwater contamination in Staffordshire undertaken by the National Rivers Authority.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The National Rivers Authority has a network of 75 regularly measured groundwater quality monitoring points in Staffordshire. The network particularly covers the triassic sandstone aquifer which is a major source of public water supplies in the county. The data collected from the monitoring surveys is lodged on the public Water Act register which is held at the authority's Severn Trent region's office.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps he has taken to ensure that the chargepayer's privacy is adequately protected when information is disclosed by a community charge registration office or charging authority without the knowledge or consent of the charge payer; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will introduce regulations to provide that a community charges registration officer should not disclose information about a charge payer to another community charges registration officer without the knowledge or informed and express consent of the charge payer; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: Community charges registration officers and charging authorities may only make use of information they have obtained in carrying out their statutory functions in accordance with their powers under the Local Government Finance Act 1988, and are bound by the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984. There is no intention to alter this position.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar, all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Christopher Patten: I am reminding my officials of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Blue-green Algae

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has given to local authorities concerning advice to the general public of health hazards associated with blue-green algae.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Advice from the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is included in the standard letters sent by the National Rivers Authority to chief environmental health officers, medical officers of environmental health and site owners when particular water bodies are identified as being likely to develop potentially toxic algal blooms. This advice is also included in a leaflet containing information on the dangers associated with blue-green algae published by the National Rivers Authority on 6 June. The wide distribution given to this leaflet included environmental health officers as well as owners and users of recreational water facilities.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of all research currently undertaken into blue-green algae.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: As part of the work of its task group on blue-green algae, the National Rivers Authority has undertaken a comprehensive survey of research into this field, both in this country and overseas. Details are included in the report published by the National Rivers Authority on 1 October. The report makes a number of detailed recommendations for further research which are being carefully considered.

Home Ownership

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the level of home ownership currently (a) in number and (b) as a percentage of all housing; and what are the comparable figures for 1980, 1970 and 1960.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The information is as follows:

	England		United Kingdom
	Owner-occupied dwellings (millions)	per cent. of all dwellings	Owner-occupied dwellings (millions)	per cent. of all dwellings
December 1960	6·4	45	7·0	42
December 1970	8·2	51	9·5	49
December 1980	10·3	57	11·9	55
December 1989	13·2	68	15·3	66
June 1990	13·3	69	n.a.	n.a.

n.a. = not available.

Landfill Gas

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his answer of 19 July, Official Report, column 726, when he intends to publish the results of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution's survey into landfill sites to determine those with the potential to generate landfill gas; and which sites have been and are being monitored in Staffordshire.

Mr. Trippier: The results of the survey are expected to be published in the near future. The survey has identified 22 gassing or potentially gassing sites in Staffordshire. It would be for Staffordshire county council as the waste disposal authority to provide any details about the number of sites currently being monitored.

Voluntary Agencies

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many voluntary agencies, who in 1989 received Government funding under section 73 of the Housing Act 1985, did not do so in the current year.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Fourteen. However, the following 23 organisations received section 73 grant for the first time this year:

Brighton Housing Trust
Centrepoint (Soho)
Chester Lodgings and Support Group
Coventry Day Centre
Housing Aid for Youth, Blyth
Key House Project, Keighley
Leicester Night Shelter
Lodgers
The London Connection
St. Martin in the Fields Social Care Unit
The National Foster Care Association
Newark Young Single Homeless Trust
North Lambeth Day Centre
The Passage Day Centre, Westminster
The Portsmouth Housing Trust
Reading Emergency Accommodation Project
Riverpoint Single Homeless Ltd., London
St Basil's Centre, Birmingham
The Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul, London
Thames Reach, London
Threshold, Hammersmith
West End Co-ordinated Voluntary Services for Homeless Single People, London
Yeldall Christian Centre.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further criteria were used to determine which voluntary agencies received funding in the current year in addition to section 73 of the Housing Act 1985.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bedfordshire, North (Sir T. Skeet), on 5 June, at column 485.

Palace of Westminster (Cleaning)

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a further statement on the timetable for the cleaning of the exterior of the inner courtyards of the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Key: The work to repair and clean the stonework in the courtyards is due to begin in 1994-95 following the completion of the work to the Victoria tower.

Rents

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the typical gross rate of return on uncontrolled rents of private residences in the private sector in (a) central London and (b) north-west England as a percentage of the capital value of the asset.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We do not yet have sufficient information on the level of rents being charged for assured tenancies to serve as a basis for estimates of the rate of return on capital. A survey intended to provide such information is currently in hand.

Environment Protection (Local Government Spending)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account the autumn statement on standard spending assessment will take of the necessary expenditure incurred by local authorities on (a) pollution control, (b) enforcement, (c) prevention, (d) training of staff and (e) all extra duties to be conferred following the enactment of the Environmental Protection Bill.

Mr. Portillo: Extra duties falling to local authorities were one element in my right hon. Friend's decision to increase aggregate external finance for local authorities by 12·8 per cent. for 1991-92. He expects to make his proposals for standard spending assessments, including control totals for service blocks, in the next few weeks.

Peatlands

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to reach conclusions about measures necessary to conserve peatlands; if he is satisfied that the current options offer sufficient scope to accommodate both continued peat extraction and conservation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The noble Lord Reay's response to the debate on peatland issues, which took place in another place on 9 May 1990, indicated that there were a considerable number of matters to be addressed. Work on these is progressing both in my Department and elsewhere, but information on some key aspects is not yet available. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State hopes to be able to make a statement about measures necessary to conserve peatlands during the first half of 1991.

Amphibians

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his efforts in the last three months to establish the extent of the changes in the population of frogs and other amphibians over the last decade; and if he will detail the effect on frogs of habitat loss and pesticides.

Mr. Trippier: The Nature Conservancy Council (NCC) has commissioned Leicester Polytechnic to undertake an inquiry to provide information on the current status of widespread species of amphibians and reptiles.

Provisional information shows that the status of the frog has continued to improve during the 1980s; it has increased in seven of the NCC's regions and not changed appreciably in the other eight. The crested newt has done least well of the species studied, but the rate of decline has slowed. The toad, the smooth newt and the palmate newt have more or less held their own nationally during the 1980s.

In instances where frog numbers had declined, and where the reasons for decline were given, 88 per cent. of correspondents mentioned habitat loss. Nobody specifically mentioned pesticides.

City Grant

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by region, and date of completion, all projects completed where city grant has been paid, the name of company, the amount of private investment and the amount of grant paid for these projects.

Mr. Atkins: The information requested is shown in the following table. Although some schemes are physically complete some of them are still incurring expenditure and in those cases final claims are still to come. A further 54 schemes are currently under construction.

Sunday Markets

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he has received about the effects on residents of the introduction of Sunday markets;

(2) whether he intends to take any action to control the spread of Sunday markets.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department has received a small number of representations about Sunday markets during the last 12 months. The representations have commonly raised issues relating to noise nuisance, traffic congestion, permitted development rights, unauthorised operators, and amenity.

Local authorities already have a variety of statutory powers to control markets, and my right hon. Friend has no plans for further legislation.

Planning Applications

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the pressure on the resources of the NCC of their increased volume of planning applications coming from the south-east of England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Nature Conservancy Council (NCC) has drawn attention to this pressure in the corporate planning documents submitted this year. It will be taken into account when determining the grant-in-aid to be made available to the Nature Conservancy Council for England next year.

Development Corporations

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his proposed guidelines to the chairmen of development corporations will include arrangements relating to compulsory purchase powers in respect of land acquisition; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The guidance will contain advice on handling any conflicts of interest which may appear to arise from the use of compulsory purchase powers by an urban development corporation.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps his Department has taken to ensure that the procedures adopted for the letting of contracts or the offering of consultancies by the Sheffield development corporation have conformed with the procedures outlined in his answer of 20 December 1989, Official Report, column 329; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what steps his Department takes to ensure that all development corporations are following the procedures laid down in regulations arising out of the Local Government Act 1988 or similar previous enactments relating to competitive tendering, together with appropriate EC directives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Guidance on the competitive tendering requirements of the Local Government Act 1988 and EC directives was issued to all UDCs, including Sheffield, in December 1988. The Department monitors compliance through arrangements for project approval, post implementation sampling of projects, and the work of external auditors appointed by the Secretary of State.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will now publish the report of the investigation into the running of Sheffield development corporation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he intends to take any action arising from the recommendations of the inquiry into the operation of the Sheffield development corporation in respect of separating out potential conflict of interest arising out of appointments held in companies or organisations who may have a commercial or other similar relationship with the development corporation, to review the membership of the Sheffield development corporation board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Those who gave evidence to Sir John Garlick's inquiry did so in confidence. I do not therefore believe that it would be fair or appropriate to publish the report.

On 29 August, I issued the following statement:

"Earlier this year my Department received from Mr. Keith Beaumont, the Chief Executive of Sheffield Development Corporation, a letter criticising the Chairman's role in the conduct of the Corporation's business.

"The letter was sent by Mr. Beaumont quite properly in his role as the Corporation's Accounting Officer. I thought it right to ask Sir John Garlick, a former Permanent Secretary of this Department, who as a Member of the Board of London Docklands Corporation is familiar with UDC procedures, to look into the matters raised and report to me as quickly as possible. He has now done so.

"I am satisfied that Mr. Sykes has performed his role as Chairman with complete honesty and integrity. Sir John found no grounds whatever for thinking Mr. Sykes had attempted to secure improper financial gain through his role as SDC Chairman—nor had Mr. Beaumont made any such suggestion.

"Mr. Sykes has tremendous enthusiasm for and commitment to the regeneration of the Lower Don Valley and has my full support in continuing as Chairman of the Development Corporation.

"Sir John did however find a number of shortcomings in the way Corporation business had been conducted. Some of these were the responsibility of the Chairman, others of SDC officers. Sir John also concluded that some criticism could be made of the Department for not ensuring that the most effective guidance was available to the Chairman.

"The shortcomings in the conduct of SDC business were in four areas:

(1) The holding of Chairmanship of Hallamshire Investments plc concurrently with SDC Chairmanship. Mr. Sykes was instrumental in establishing Hallamshire Investments plc which is a joint public/private sector investment company set up with the specific objective of investing in the regeneration of Sheffield. Mr. Sykes is non-executive Chairman of Hallamshire, but has no financial interest in the company and is not involved in its investment decisions. On this basis my Department agreed, after discussion with Mr. Sykes, that he could properly retain the Chairmanship. This was an exception to the normal rule that Development Corporation Chairmen give up Chairmanships of companies which operate in their area.

"Sir John found no evidence of harm or wrongdoing but concluded that, given the nature of the company's activities, for one person to hold the chairmanship of both Hallamshire Investments and the SDC was inconsistent with the need to avoid situations where public duties and private interests conflict or where there could be a suspicion of conflict. Sir John also found that my Department's views on his retention of the Chairmanship of Hallamshire Investments and of certain other business interests may have left the Chairman confused as to exactly what constraints applied to his activities, particularly in relation to Hallamshire Investments.

(2) "The Chairman's business interests. Mr. Sykes has a wide range of business interests both inside and outside Sheffield. He has been entirely open about these to the Department since his appointment and has in general followed the guidance given to Development Corporation Chairmen which is designed to ensure that there can be no conflict or suspicion of conflict between public and private interests.

"Sir John was satisfied that the Chairman had no wish deliberately to disobey the rules and indeed noted that on several occasions he was at pains to ensure that he was acting entirely properly. But Sir John found a few occasions when a clear distance was not kept between his public and private activities and when as a result a suspicion of conflict might have arisen. He found no evidence whatever of any financial impropriety or wrongdoing.

(3) "Appointment of consultants to the SDC. The rules governing the appointment of consultants to public bodies are strict. Competitive tender is required in all but exceptional circumstances and the Corporation's systems need to be able to ensure and demonstrate that value for money is being achieved.

"Sir John told me that, in his wish to ensure that the SDC had access to high quality advice, the Chairman had, he judged pressed too hard for the appointment of a particular consultant. Sir John noted however that it was a matter of judgment as to how far it was reasonable for a Chairman to press for the appointment of a particular individual or firm, and that his own judgment in this case was inevitably subjective. He also noted that SDC officers had been slow in making progress on the appointment of any candidate in the particular case.

"Sir John also criticised the SDC's systems for selecting, appointing and subsequently monitoring consultancy appointments. These were the responsibility of the Chief Executive. Again Sir John found no evidence of financial impropriety or wrongdoing, but noted the need for proper observance of procedures and adequate systems to ensure that the SDC always obtained best value for money.

(4) "Use of SDC facilities. Mr. Sykes' personal staff of two full time secretaries and one part time assistant work on both SDC and non-SDC business. The SDC pays for one full time member of staff, Mr. Sykes for the other two.

"Sir John found no evidence that the SDC paid for more secretarial time than it should under this arrangement. Indeed the SDC may well, on balance have gained. But he regarded the arrangement which the SDC had entered into as untidy and open to abuse.

"Sir John emphasised that he found no evidence of actual harm arising from any of these matters. But noted that a continuation of what had happened in the past could lead to justifiable criticisms in future.

"I have discussed these findings with Mr. Sykes and with my officials. Mr. Sykes entirely recognises the procedures and standards involved in public business and the need for the SDC to improve its official systems and procedures. He and his board have given me an assurance that the Corporation will maintain the highest possible standards in future. The Corporation is also taking steps to review its systems and procedures.

"As far as Sir John's criticism of the Department is concerned, I am making arrangements to strengthen the guidance given to all Chairmen and board members. Detailed guidance will be given to cover the difficult issues that can arise for a Chairman who has a range of local business interests. Local knowledge and connections can in themselves be of considerable value to an urban development corporation. But a clear distance needs to be kept between the activities of the public body and private business interests to avoid any suspicion of a conflict of interest.

"As far as the Chairmanship of Hallamshire Investments is concerned, I am satisfied that Mr. Sykes behaved entirely properly in continuing to hold both Chairmanships after the first discussions with the Department. But we both accept Sir John's conclusion that, given the nature of the company's activities, there are difficulties in one man holding the Chairmanships of both the SDC and Hallamshire. Mr. Sykes has therefore told me that he will be talking to the Board of Hallamshire Investments with a view to resigning his Chairmanship.

"I am most grateful to Sir John for the speed and thoroughness with which he has completed his work. I am happy that the Corporation will now be able to get on with its vital work of regenerating the Lower Don Valley. The Corporation has made excellent progress so far in securing environmental and economic improvements. I confidently expect that positive change to continue and accelerate over the next few years".

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has anything to add to his answer of 20 December 1990, Official Report, column 329, in respect of the practice adopted by the development corporations in the letting of contracts or the funding of consultancies, following the statement issued by the Minister of State on 29 August in respect of the investigation which had been undertaken into the running of the Sheffield Development Corporation; and if he will make a statement on the new guidance to be given to the chairmen of development corporations in respect of the separation of public and private interest.

Mr. Portillo: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my right hon. Friend on 20 December 1989. When the Department's revised guidance to UDC chairmen and board members on handling conflicts of interest is issued a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, in the guidelines to be issued to development corporation chairmen, advice will be given on (a) the appointment of staff without public advertisement or interview for the post concerned, (b) the separation of payment from public and private funds for those employed by, or paid on behalf of, the development corporation and (c) the calling of ad hoc and unminuted meetings of selected members of the board of development corporations for discussion of business to be considered by the whole of the board membership; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: All urban development corporations have been advised that staff should be recruited on merit on the basis of fair and open competition and in accordance with the standards expected of public sector employers. My Department will shortly issue guidance on the separation of payment from public and private funds for those employed by or paid by UDCs. Arrangements relating to meetings of a UDC board are a matter for the corporation to determine.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when officials of his Department were notified of suggestions of impropriety or concerns relating to the procedural or other conduct of the workings of the Sheffield development corporation about which he subsequently initiated inquiries; what action was taken at that time as a consequence of the reference made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: In July 1989 a member of the public expressed concern about the conduct of SDC's affairs. In September that year the chief executive raised similar concerns informally with the Department. In neither case did the Department consider that there was any evidence of impropriety.

At the end of May this year, the chief executive wrote to the Department criticising the chairman's role in the conduct of the corporation's business, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State asked Sir John Garlick to carry out a formal investigation. That investigation found no grounds whatever for thinking that the chairman had attempted to secure improper financial gain through his role as SDC chairman.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether development corporations are now to be made subject to the provisions of the compulsory competitive tendering legislation contained in regulations arising out of the Local Government Act 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Urban development corporations have always been subject to the provisions of parts I and II of the Local Government Act 1988.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what further resources he has made available for successor agencies to the Nature Conservancy Council in addition to his estimate of the notional cost required to perform the new range of statutory duties;

(2) pursuant to his reply of 25 July, Official Report, column 453, if he will make it his policy that the final additional costs of reorganisation of the Nature Conservancy Council will be made available to Parliament before the Environmental Protection Bill concludes its parliamentary stages;

(3) what funding he proposes to enable successor agencies to the Nature Conservancy Council to carry forward new initiatives to enhance nature conservation;

(4) what is his latest estimate of the increase in staff numbers and resources as a result of the Nature Conservancy Council being split into four separate agencies;

(5) what percentage of the agreed posts in successor authorities to the Nature Conservancy Council, on current estimates, will be staffed by April 1991.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have made an extra £1·4 million available in the current financial year to cover initial reorganisation costs. Detailed work on the cost of reorganisation in 1991-92 has been carried out by the existing agencies and the relevant Government Departments. It is already the Government's intention to make the main results of this work available to Parliament very shortly and before the Environmental Protection Bill concludes its parliamentary stages.

The Government's statement will include details of the manpower requirements of the new agencies and the outcome of the current work being undertaken by the Nature Conservancy Council and Countryside Commission to meet those requirements by assigning existing staff to the new agencies. Any vacancies which remain will be filled by trawls or recruitment and every effort will be made to complete this process before 1 April 1991.

Decisions about the total resources to be made available to the successor agencies to cover all their responsibilities in 1991-92 will be taken within the timetable and context of the annual public expenditure round.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the number of grants given by the Nature Conservancy Council in the year ending 31 March 1990 for the management of land which is not SSSI and not related to net profits forgone, and the total cost of such grants.

Mr. Trippier: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what dates in 1988, 1989, and 1990 he met the chairman of the Nature Conservancy Council to discuss formally his proposed changes in the Nature Conservancy Council.

Mr. Trippier: The Secretary of State or his predecessor, as well as other Ministers, met the chairman of the Nature Conservancy Council on a number of occasions in 1989 and 1990 to discuss the Government's proposals to reorganise the Nature Conservancy Council.

Restrictive Covenants

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what weight his inspectors attach to restrictive covenants when considering and determining planning appeals.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The weight to be attached to any relevant planning consideration is a matter for the inspector to assess within the particular circumstances of each appeal.

Nitrogen Oxide Abatement

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 26 July, Official Report, column 387, if he will make a statement on the final report into evaluation of nitrogen oxide abatement technologies for large combustion plant.

Mr. Trippier: My Department has not yet received the final report.

Kurdish Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what finance has been made available to local authorities in London to assist the needs of Kurdish asylum seekers in the past two years.

Mr. Key: The Department has to date made payments of £790,174 to London boroughs on the basis of initial claims under the terms of the scheme of special financial assistance established in January 1990 for London local authorities which incurred in 1989-90 extra expenditure directly as a result of the influx of Turkish asylum seekers into the United Kingdom in April, May and June 1989. Final audited claims are due to be submitted to the Department by 31 December 1990. The housing investment programme allocations made to the London authorities for 1990-91 took account of the housing capital needs related to the arrival of refugees, including Turkish asylum seekers.

Next Steps

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the management consultancies (a) his Department and (b) the executive agencies for which he is responsible have employed in connection with the Next Steps agency programme; and if he will list the task for which they were employed, and the fee paid.

Mr. Chris Patten: Consultants have been employed on eight occasions to advise on the development of financial and management systems for my Department's agencies and agency candidates. Details of the individual contracts are commercially confidential.

Water Undertakers (Land Disposals)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a list of land disposals by regional water undertakers, stating in each case the reasons for the disposal of each parcel of land.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. The Department does not hold this information since land disposals do not normally require the Secretary of State's specific approval. Customers interests in disposals are protected by the Director General of Water Services. Proposed disposals in National Parks, the Broads, areas of outstanding natural beauty and sites of special scientific interest must be cleared by the Countryside Commission, and, in the case of SSSIs, the Nature Conservancy Council. Water undertakers as private companies can exercise their commercial judgment on disposals, subject to meeting their obligations under the Water Act 1989.

Community Charge

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to end the entitlement of the mature student spouse of a top income tax rate payer to pay the reduced rate of 20 per cent. community charge.

Mr. Key: Pursuant to the reply given on Tuesday 24 July at column 182, a student for the purposes of the community charge is defined by reference to the nature of the studies undertaken not the source or level of income available. The administrative cost of assessing the resources of all students and their spouses would far outweigh the increased charge revenue collected to the disadvantage of all chargepayers and taxpayers and would serve only to create new anomalies.

House of Commons Crypt

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the result of the work of a team from his Department and English Heritage in investigating the stonework round the crypt font in the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Key: Work to solve the problem of damp penetration which has caused the deterioration of the marble is proceeding on two fronts.

Recent excavations by English Heritage have revealed evidence of a pre-Victorian culvert running parallel to the south wall of St. Stephen's Hall. The culvert is damp leading to the thought that it may be drawing up ground water. English Heritage's proposals are now awaited for further excavations to try to establish the relationship, if any, of the culvert to the dampness in the Chapel.

Consultant architects have also been considering the means of preventing the seepage of moisture through the stonework. Because of the pressure of the rising ground water they do not recommend the application of a damp proof outer membrane. Instead they propose the construction of a new waterproof retaining wall. This will be considered together with the results of English Heritage's further work.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his Department's discussions with the sculpture conservation department of the Tate gallery on the progress of the restoration of the purbeck marble in the Crypt of the House of Commons.

Mr. Key: The head of sculpture conservation at the Tate gallery visited the Crypt Chapel in January 1990 when he saw at first hand the complexity of the conservation problem under consideration. It was agreed that before any action could be taken within the Chapel, the source and entry route of the ground water has to be established.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Aid

63. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning the level of United Kingdom overseas aid and the ways in which it is allocated; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Increasingly people who talk to me about aid recognise the importance of aid supporting sound economic policies and good government, and doing more to tackle the key issues of poverty, population and the environment.

Sheep Farming

67. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy in respect of aid to encourage sheep farming in the third world.

Mrs. Chalker: Sheep play an important role in the livelihoods of many poor communities, as they exist on marginal land and produce a range of products which provide subsistence and cash income.

ODA supports activities which directly or indirectly enhance sustainable sheep production in developing countries, priority being given to nutrition, health and breeding in the context of land use systems.

Bangladesh

68. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total amount of aid to Bangladesh granted over each of the past three years.

Mrs. Chalker: Gross disbursements of bilateral official development assistance provided by the United Kingdom to Bangladesh over the calendar years 1987, 1988 and 1989 amounted to £31·6 million, £44·9 million and £52·9 million respectively. In addition the share of aid given through multilateral institutions, and attributed to the United Kingdom was £25·3 million in 1987 and £27·2 million in 1988. Figures for 1989 are not yet available.

Tigray

69. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he propposes to take to assist the work of the Relief Society of Tigray.

Mrs. Chalker: We have committed emergency aid worth over £35 million to Ethiopia since the beginning of 1989. This includes the provision of 5,859 tonnes of sorghum, and other relief assistance, totalling some £6·18 million for the hungry in those areas of northern Ethiopia where the Relief Society of Tigray works. A further 2,500 tonnes of wheat valued at £0·733 million is currently on its way to Tigray.

Animal Conservation

70. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what animal conservation projects are currently being considered by his Department for funding.

Mrs. Chalker: Several possible projects are under consideration of which animal conservation would be an important element. They include the following:

Anguilla: Coastal zone inventory.
Belize: Coastal zone inventory.
British Virgin Islands: Coastal zone inventory.
Cameroon: Environmental advice.
Egypt: Study of impact of pollution on acquatic communities, Lake Manzala; Ecological studies, Lake Maryut.
Kenya: Further support for Kenya Wildlife Service.
Madagascar and Mauritius: Creation of nature reserve areas on off-shore islets.
Namibia: Fisheries resource management.
Nigeria: Conservation adviser, conservation education programme.
Tanzania: Support for Ruaha game park.

Zambia

72. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list any requests he has received from the Government of Zambia for specific items of aid since July.

Mrs. Chalker: Since July of this year, the Government of Zambia have formally requested:

(a) extension of earlier assistance to the Central Statistical Office;

(b) assistance with rehabilitation of Lusaka urban district council water supply, sanitation and other utilities;
(c) provision of fisheries instructors;
(d) a second phase of assistance under the Central Province district development project; and
(e) payment of the first £5 million tranche of a £30 million programme aid grant in support of economic adjustment.

Items (b) and (c) are under consideration, the former in company with other donors. The remaining requests have been accepted and implementation is in hand.

Brazil

73. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals Her Majesty's Government have to increase aid to Brazil to tackle environmental problems.

Mrs. Chalker: Under the memorandum of understanding on environmental co-operation, signed in July 1989, we have agreed four projects with the Brazilian authorities with a total cost to Her Majesty's Government of £4·6 million. We expect to agree a further four projects soon. We are discussing a number of further proposals with the Brazilian authorities.

As part of our programme of environmental assistance, we are also supporting—as a tripartite initiative, involving the Brazilian Government and ICI—a conference on the theme of "Ecological Restoration for Forest Conservation". It will be held in Brasilia from 30 October to 1 November 1990. I am looking forward to the conference and I will be taking the opportunity whilst in Brazil of discussing with the Brazilian authorities, including their Secretary for the Environment, our present and proposed programme of environmental projects.

Emergency Relief

74. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on emergency relief aid expended under the United Kingdom's aid programme.

Mrs. Chalker: Providing immediate and effective humanitarian assistance is one of the key areas of the aid programme. Last year we spent over £61 million in disaster relief, help for refugees and emergency food aid.

Natural History Museum (Collections)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the discussions of the right hon. Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker) over the summer with Dr. Neil Chalmers, Dr. John Peake and other officials of the natural history museum about the future of the collections relative to the Overseas Development Administration.

Mrs. Chalker: My recent visit to the natural history museum was informative and useful. Working particularly with our Natural Resources Institute, the museum will play a valuable role in ODA's research and development programmes for developing countries and identify new opportunities for fruitful collaboration. The institute and museum will pursue these opportunities and I will be kept informed of developments.

Biological Diversity (Study)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the letter of 9 July from the Minister for Overseas Development to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, if she will make a statement on the interim results of the strategic study she has commissioned on biological diversity in marine environments, with particular reference to work on reefs.

Mrs. Chalker: We are studying the first draft of the report that we commissioned on marine biological diversity. I shall let the hon. Member know the outcome.

Bophuthatswana

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many housing projects in Bophuthatswana have been assisted by the Overseas Development Administration;

(2) what community development projects are being assisted by the Overseas Development Administration in Bophuthatswana;

(3) if the British awards scheme has funded academic support at South African universities for any students from Bophuthatswana;

(4) what proportion of British aid to black South Africans is directed to Bophuthatswana;

(5) how many scholarships and training awards in Britain are being provided for undergraduates and postgraduates from Bophuthatswana.

Mrs. Chalker: While we and other countries, with the exception of South Africa itself, do not recognise Bophuthatswana as an independent state, assistance has been approved since April 1989 for 12 community development projects located within that territory. We see no reason, however, to keep records of the geographical origin of those receiving help under scholarship and housing assistance programmes which are intended to benefit disadvantaged black people throughout South Africa.

Overseas Aid Annual Review (Cost)

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost was to public funds of publishing the 1990 overseas aid annual review; and how many copies were printed.

Mrs. Chalker: 15,000 copies were produced at a total cost of £76,504·90, a unit cost of £5·10.

Cambodia

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 18 June, Official Report, column 682, if he will make a statement about Britain's current humanitarian and other assistance to the people of Cambodia.

Mrs. Chalker: I am monitoring the situation closely and announced that I would make up to £100,000 available for British non-government organisations to help civil war displaced people inside Cambodia. My officials are in touch with interested NGOs about this.

Since 1988-89 under the Overseas Development Administration's joint funding scheme we have committed £565,000 in support of 12 humanitarian assistance projects carried out by non-government organisations. We currently have a number of other NGO project proposals under consideration and expect to receive more applications. In addition we have allocated £1·25 million to support programmes in Cambodia carried out by the United Nation's Children's Fund, the World Food Programme and the World Health Organisation; these include provision of safe water supplies, food for work schemes, primary health care, education and assistance for agricultural development. We have also provided nearly £15 million since 1979 in assistance for refugees on the Thai-Cambodian border.

For the future, we are ready to consider with other donors, initially in a reconvened Paris International Conference on Cambodia, how refugee repatriation and development/reconstruction needs might best be met in the context of a comprehensive political settlement.

PRIME MINISTER

Spanish Fishermen

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a further statement on the implications of the European Court of Justice decision on interim relief to Spanish fishermen from the 1988 Act; and if she will consider submitting all future draft bills to the court for its consideration with a view to avoiding administrative complexities involved with interim relief.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to my earlier answers on the subject of the European Court of Justice's decision on interim relief. I have no plans to take up my hon. Friend's suggestion.

Waverley Housing Trust

Sir David Steel: To ask the Prime Minister what guidance is given to civil servants concerning the scope of advice and information given to local authority officials prior to the passage of relevant legislation through Parliament; and whether she will make a statement concerning advice surrounding the establishment of the Waverley Housing Trust.

The Prime Minister: Civil servants may give information and advice to outside organisations and individuals concerning the Government's policies, consistent with the general rules governing conduct and the requirements of statute regarding the disclosure of information. Where information is given about policies whose implementation is dependent on the passage of legislation through Parliament, this would be made clear.

I shall ask my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland to write to the right hon. Member once his information into contacts between civil servants and those who established the Waverley Housing Trust is complete.

Children

Mr. Parry: To ask the Prime Minister if she will accept the invitation to attend the world summit for children to be held at the United Nations on 29 and 30 September.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Prime Minister if she proposes to accept the invitation to attend the United Nations world summit for children in New York during September.

The Prime Minister: I attended the world summit for children in New York on 29 and 30 September where I gave an address on the role of the family in child development.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Prime Minister which new initiative designed to protect British children in the areas of (a) health, (b) education rights and (c) environment Her Majesty's Government are taking as a result of the recent New York international conference.

The Prime Minister: The United Nations world summit for children drew upon the experience of developed countries in drawing up an action plan for improving the health and welfare of all children. We have already made substantial progress in most of the areas mentioned and are undertaking a number of relevant initiatives which, where appropriate, we will be progressing in co-operation with overseas countries.

Examples in the field of health care include the treatment and prevention of AIDS, childhood immunisation programmes aimed at controlling infectious diseases and better nutrition for pregnant mothers and young children.

In the United Kingdom rights to education are already provided for in legislation. Section 8 of the 1944 Education Act places a duty on local education authorities to "secure provision of Primary and Secondary schools". Futhermore, British education aims to develop fully the abilities of all children, with compulsory school starting at 5 years of age.

The White Paper "This Common Inheritance", which sets out the Government's environmental policies for the next decade and beyond, emphasises our duty to protect the environment for the benefit of future generations.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Prime Minister what specific measures Her Majesty's Government are proposing in order (a) to help children in the Third world in the areas of health and education and (b) to combat child labour exploitation both at home and abroad; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Through our aid programme we provide a great deal of assistance to children, both through our bilateral programme, and multilaterally through organisations such as UNICEF and WHO. Our policy is to support the development of health care services for all the family as the best way of improving child health.

In education, we support programmes of assistance to educational institutions in the developing world covering school buildings, training of teachers, the provision of materials and educational planning.

The Government deplore the exploitation of children for economic purposes. However in many countries children in the cities and the countryside have to work in order to survive. Widespread exploitation of children can only be overcome by the alleviation of poverty and by more appropriate policies for economic growth and social development. We are assisting in this through our aid programme.

PRIME MINISTER

Science Policy

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the visits she has made during the recess in her capacity as Minister for co-ordinating science policy in appropriate cases.

The Prime Minister: On 28 September I hosted a seminar given by young scientists on the following subjects, antibody engineering, novel materials, collision physics: human genetic disease, enzymology and astronomy.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister whether the Government will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: My colleagues in charge of Departments have been asked to ensure that officials are aware of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

European Community

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions she has had with other heads of Government in the European Community about the enlargement of the Community territorially.

The Prime Minister: Heads of Government reaffirmed at their meeting in November 1989 that there should be no decisions on EC enlargement until the work on the single market has been completed. However I have made clear on many occasions our view that the Community should remain open to all the countries of Europe once they are democratic and ready to join.

Child Benefit

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment she has made of the benefits child benefit has given to families on income support since it was introduced.

The Prime Minister: Families on income support do not gain any overall financial advantage from child benefit because it is taken fully into account in the assessment of their income support entitlement. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security has indicated on many occasions, this is one of the factors he has to take into account when he reviews the level of child benefit.

Company Cars

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister whether the Government will introduce legislation to (a) disallow business expenditure on the supply or running costs of passenger cars other than light vans as a business expense and (b) charge the full cost of such vehicles to the keeper for income tax purposes; and if she will provide an estimate of the revenue yield in each case.

The Prime Minister: I have noted the hon. Member's suggestion. The detailed information needed to give estimates of yield is not available.

Correspondence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will make it her policy that the Private Office will in future return to the sender all requests addressed to her for intervention at departmental level with a request to make representations direct to those concerned.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make it her policy to release to the press any letters she receives asking for favours or intervention with Departments of State.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will place in the Library a copy of her reply to the letter sent to her on 21 July by Mr. Colin Wallace, 14 Dalloway road, Arundel, about the Calcutt inquiry.

The Prime Minister: No. It is not my normal practice to do so.

Nautical Archaeology

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Prime Minister whether she has now completed her review of Departmental responsibilities for nautical archaeology; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: We have completed the review of Departmental responsibilities for nautical archaeology. We have now proposed, in paragraph 9.36 of the White Paper "This Common Inheritance", that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment should assume responsibility for the protection of historic wrecks in English waters, and that similar transfers of responsibility should take place in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. This will bring together control of archaeology on land with that under water. We will be responding more fully to the Joint Nautical Archaeology Policy Committee on the other matters raised in its report, "Heritage at Sea".

Gulf Crisis

Mr. Wray: To ask the Prime Minister if she will take urgent steps to help those Third world countries which as a direct consequence of the Gulf crisis are in danger of economic hardship.

The Prime Minister: The best way to help countries damaged by the Gulf crisis is to bring an end to the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait and restore stability to the region. Britain has made a very substantial contribution to that effort, including the decision to send over 15,000 servicemen to the Gulf. We have also contributed to the cost of resettling refugees and shall also contribute to the European Community's special programme of assistance to Jordan, Egypt and Turkey. But the bulk of assistance to affected countries will need to come through adjustment assistance to be given by the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank and from those countries which are not participating in the military effort.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the Third world countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America most seriously affected (a) by the oil price increases and (b) by the trade embargo ordered by the United Nations as a consequence of the Gulf crisis.

The Prime Minister: The economies of Egypt, Jordan and Turkey have been most directly affected by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and the consequent application of UN sanctions against Iraq.

All net oil-importing countries are being adversely affected by the increase in oil prices, but there is no single measure of which are the most seriously affected. This will depend on the source and volume of their oil imports and access to alternative energy sources, as well as on the initial strength of their economies and their ability to adjust to the new situation.

Veterans

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Prime Minister if she will create a veterans' Department.

The Prime Minister: No. The Government and everyone in this country recognise the immense debt of gratitude owed to war veterans and other ex-Service personnel. It is essential that departments deal with their affairs efficiently. However, although it might seem convenient to have a separate Department of veterans' affairs, I do not believe that this would result in better service and it could have the effect of confusing responsibilities which at present fall clearly on each departmental Minister.

EMPLOYMENT

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: I am reminding my officials of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the safety record of companies working on the channel tunnel project.

Mr. Forth: The Government and Health and Safety Executive have made clear their concern about accidents on the channel tunnel project. The contractors are now engaged in a programme of implementing the recommedations made in the HSE's accident prevention advisory unit's recent audit of safety management on the project. The HSE is monitoring this process carefully.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what arrangements are made for the Health and Safety Executive to inspect the channel tunnel workings.

Mr. Forth: It is for the Health and Safety Executive to make arrangements for inspections of the channel tunnel workings. Inspectors visit the workings regularly to inspect and monitor conditions and to investigate incidents and accidents.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department has indentified any additional safety measures which might be introducted on the channel tunnel project to make working safer.

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for health and safety on the channel tunnel project rests with the employers.

The Health and Safety Executive's (HSE) accident prevention advisory unit carried out an audit of the management of health and safety on the channel tunnel project in May 1990. The contractors have accepted the recommendations of the audit and are now engaged in a programme of implementing them. HSE is monitoring that process carefully. HSE inspectors continue to visit the channel tunnel sites and will continue to take whatever action is necessary to maintain and develop safety standards.

Social Attitudes Survey

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects the British social attitudes survey to be completed; and when he expects it to be published.

Mr. Jackson: The British social attitudes survey takes place annually in the early spring. The results of each survey are published approximately 18 months after the field work. The results of the 1990 survey, which covers questions on the child care needs of working women as referred to in the reply from my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment on 24 July at columns 195-96 will be published in November 1991.

Iraqis (Training)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many Iraqis have been in Britain for industrial training in each year since 1980.

Mr. Forth: The number of work permits issued under the training and work experience scheme since 1984 are given below. Statistics for issues prior to April 1984 are not available. Records of approvals for the work element of sandwich courses are not kept by nationality.

	Number
1 April 1984 to 31 December 1984	6
1 January 1985 to 31 December 1985	12
1 January 1986 to 31 December 1986	7
1 January 1987 to 31 December 1987	4
1 January 1988 to 31 December 1988	6
1 January 1989 to 31 December 1989	6
1 January 1990 to 31 August 1990	5

"Hard Labour"

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if his Department has considered the report "Hard Labour", prepared by the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I have considered this report. I believe that the existing provisions of employment legislation strike a fair balance between safeguarding the rights of employees and avoiding excessive burdens on business which would discourage the growth of job opportunities.

Unemployment (Costs)

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if his Department has considered the estimates of the costs of unemployment assessed by the unemployment unit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: My Department has not considered the estimates in any detail as we do not accept the analysis on which they are based.

Earnings

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the level of national average earnings for (a) men, (b) women and (c) all workers (i) at current prices and (ii) at 1990 prices for each year since 1970; and what was the level of medium earnings for (a) men, (b) women and (c) all workers for each of these years.

Mr. Jackson: Information on the earnings of full-time adult employees in Great Britain in April of each year is published in table 15 of Part A of the annual new earnings survey reports. Figures for males and females combined are readily available only from 1983 onwards and are given in table 17 of the recently published part A of the 1990 survey report. Information on the retail prices index (all items) to convert the figures to 1990 prices is published in table 6.4 of Employment Gazette for April 1990, and table 26 of the annual supplement to Economic Trends for April of each earlier year.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Statutes

56. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Attorney-General what steps he takes to ensure that his Department obtains up-to-date information on statutes and orders in force.

The Attorney General: The Departments for which I am responsible obtain such up-to-date information both from Her Majesty's Stationery Office and from commercial publishers.

Guinness Trial

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General whether he will refer to the Court of Appeal the sentence on Mr. Gerald Ronson, in the Guinness trial, on grounds of leniency.

The Attorney-General: No. I did not consider the sentence to have been unduly lenient, which is the criterion specified in Section 36 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 as governing my power to refer sentences to the Court of Appeal.

"Another Blood Libel"

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General what consideration has been given by the Crown prosecution service to initiating proceedings in respect of the leaflet "Another Blood Libel", published by the Campaign for Gentile-Jewish Reconciliation.

The Attorney-General: I understand that the Board of Deputies of British Jews have forwarded a leaflet entitled "Another Blood Libel or Ritual Murder", to the police with a request that an investigation leading to criminal proceedings is begun.

Before the Crown prosecution service can consider initiating proceedings it is necessary for a police investigation to produce evidence as to the individual or individuals responsible for publication or distribution of the leaflet. No file of evidence has yet been received by the Crown prosecution service but should one be forwarded then full and careful consideration will be given to the institution of criminal proceedings. The Law Officers and the Director of Public Prosecutions regard the publication and distribution of material which offends against the provisions of part III of the Public Order Act 1986 as a serious matter.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

ERASMUS Project

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students in the academic year 1990-91 have applied and how many have been accepted, to take part in the ERASMUS project.4

Mr. Alan Howarth: Student mobility under ERASMUS takes place largely within inter-university co-operation programmes for which higher education institutions apply direct to the European Commission for funding. For 1990-91, the Commission has approved for support 1,748 ICPs involving 1,100 insitutions and 44,484 student exchanges. This includes 375 United Kingdom led ICPs and 8,857 UK students who will spend a period of their study in another European Community country.

Information is not available on the number of student exchanges proposed in ICP applications made to the Commission or on the number of students not involved in an ICP who are assisted as "free movers" under ERASMUS.

Special Needs Teaching

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the impact of local management of schools in special needs teaching.

Mr. Fallon: Local management of schools was introduced in April this year. We are monitoring its effects carefully. I expect the introduction of LMS to benefit all school provision, including that for special needs.

Teachers (Pay)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he next expects to meet the teaching unions to discuss local arrangements for pay.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend has met each of the six teacher unions on several occasions to discuss the Government's proposals for new teachers' pay negotiating machinery. He has no immediate plans for further meetings.

University Accommodation

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on student accommodation in Scottish universities.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The provision of accommodation for students in universities is a matter for the institutions themselves. Universities are autonomous and therefore responsible for deciding their own funding priorities within the total resources at their disposal. I pay tribute to the efforts made by university accommodation services to help students find suitable accommodation.

Funds Allocation (Local Authorities)

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what guidelines he has recently issued on the criteria applied by local education authorities in allocating funds.

Mr. Fallon: The last major set of guidelines issued was in circular 7/88, published in September 1988. My right hon. Friend expects to issue a draft circular for consultation later this year.

Trafford (Secondary Schools)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent discussions he has had with Trafford council about the selection procedures for Trafford's secondary schools.

Mr. Fallon: No recent discussions have taken place, but officials from the Department have been in correspondence with the authority over its selection procedures.

TVEI

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on his assessment of the technical and vocational education initiative scheme's operation in St. Helens.

Mr. Eggar: I understand that the pilot TVEI scheme in St. Helens went well, producing effective curriculum changes with good practice in teaching and learning styles.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the latest figures for the numbers of applications for all approvals of city technology colleges.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. Friend has to date agreed with sponsors to establish 14 city technology colleges. Proposals to establish a 15th city technology college at Bristol are currently subject to consultation with the local education authority and other interested parties.

Open Enrolment

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the implementation of open enrolment in secondary schools.

Mr. Fallon: The provisions of the Education Reform Act 1988 relating to school admissions came into effect for all secondary schools on 4 August this year. These provisions do away with the artificial limits placed by some local education authorities on the number of pupils admitted to particular schools, thus increasing parents' chances of securing a place for their child at the school of their choice. Following the introduction of pupil-led funding the "more open enrolment" provisions also provide a clear incentive for schools to raise educational standards.

Pupils (Attainment)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what measures he is taking to improve the educational attainment of school pupils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The national curriculum is central to the Government's drive to raise standards of achievement in schools. It will provide pupils with a framework of clear objectives, matched with regular assessment against national standards. We have already introduced the first national curriculum requirements for English, maths, science and technology, and early feedback from Her Majesty's inspectorate is encouraging. Preparatory work on the remaining national curriculum subjects is well in hand.

Schools (Local Management)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received regarding local management of schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. Friend continues to receive representations from governing bodies, headteachers, parents and others about local management of schools. Many of these welcome the opportunities which delegated budgeting brings them.

Sport and Physical Recreation

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps his Department will take to protect the position of sport and physical recreation in the national curriculum for pupils aged 14 to 16 years.

Mr. Eggar: Physical education, which includes sport, will be a compulsory part of the curriculum in all maintained schools for the first time under the requirements of the national curriculum. My right hon. Friend has asked the National Curriculum Council for advice on increasing flexibility in the curriculum framework for 14 to 16-year-olds. Their advice will be submitted in early November. Whatever the outcome of this consultation, we expect the great majority of pupils in this age group to undertake some form of physical education.

Sport

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary for State for Education and Science what progress has been made by his Department's working group on sport in the national curriculum; and when its interim report will be published.

Mr. Eggar: The national curriculum working group on physical education is working towards production of its interim report, which is to be submitted to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Education and Science and for Wales by 31 December 1990.

Teacher Vacancies (Newham)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about current levels of teacher vacancies in the London borough of Newham.

Mr. Fallon: Data provided by the London borough of Newham for the Department's September survey shows that there were 13 secondary vacancies and no primary vacancies at the beginning of the new school year.

Higher Education

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the number of 16 and 17-year-olds remaining in full-time education.

Mr. Tim Eggar: Trends in the numbers of 16 and 17-year-olds in full-time education in England are shown in the following table.

Age	1979-80		1987-88		1989-90[1]
	Numbers (thousands)	Participation rate Per cent.	Numbers (thousands)	Participation rate Per cent.	Numbers (thousands)	Participation rate Per cent.
16	322	42	350	48	349	55
17	204	27	237	33	264	39
16 and 17	526	34	587	41	613	47

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I am reminding my officials of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984. The Department expects to issue guidance shortly on the responsibilities of school governors under the Data Protection Act 1984.

Local Education Authorities

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he reviews cases where a local education authority refuses to comply with the recommendations of the local government ombudsman.

Mr. Fallon: No. The Commission for Local Administration in England is entirely independent of central and local government. Part II of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 made new provision for cases where the local government ombudsman is not satisfied with the action which a local authority is taking in response to a report.

Honours Degrees

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received concerning the provisions of four-year honours degrees.

Mr. Alan Howarth: None. The length of degree courses is essentially a matter for individual higher education institutions and validating bodies.

Iraqi Students

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many Iraqi students have been in British institutions of (a) secondary and (b) tertiary education in each of the years from 1980 to 1990.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The numbers of students from Iraq enrolled on courses in publicly-funded institutions of further and higher education in Great Britain between 1980 and 1989 are as follows:

Academic Year	Students
1980-81	2,218
1981-82	2,018
1982-83	2,239
1983-84	1,845
1984-85	1,559
1985-86	1,378
1986-87	1,420
1987-88	1,255
1988-89	918

Figures for 1989-90 are still being collated. Comparable information on secondary education is not held centrally.

Literacy (Devon)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the literacy levels of primary school children in Devon from current statistics and those of 10 and 20 years ago.

Mr. Eggar: Information on the literacy levels of primary school children in Devon is not available centrally.

Research Projects

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list research projects currently being undertaken into reducing hypertension and improving treatments for cardiac failure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Government fund medical research primarily through the Medical Research Council. I am arranging to place in the Library a list of the main projects relating to hypertension and cardiac failure currently supported by the MRC. Other relevant research may also be supported by university departments and medical schools, and the health authorities.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to prevent the closure of the blood pressure research unit at the Western infirmary, Glasgow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The unit is funded by the Medical Research Council. The council receives grant in aid from this Department. Under the terms of its royal charter, it is for the council to decide what research to support. I understand that the council has not taken a decision about the future of the Glasgow unit.

Grant-maintained Schools

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those grant-maintained schools that have been visited by Her Majesty's inspectors and the dates on which they were visited.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 23 July 1990]: Up to June 1990, the following grant-maintained schools had been visited by Her Majesty's inspectors. The last date of visit is given.

Queensbury School, Beds	May 1990
Hendon School, Barnet	June 1990
Queen Elizabeth's, Barnet	June 1990
Baverstock School, Birmingham	February 1990
Small Heath School, Birmingham	June 1990
St James CE School, Bolton	January 1990
Colyton GS, Devon	March 1990
Old Swinford Hospital School, Dudley	March 1990
London Oratory School	February 1990
Wilmington Girls School, Kent	February 1990
Castle Hall School, Kirklees	January 1990
Heckmondwike GS, Kirklees	June 1990
Bacup and Rawtenstall Grammar School, Lancs	January 1990
King's School, Grantham	June 1990
Queen Elizabeth GS, Lincs	June 1990
Skegness GS	November 1989
Wilson's School, Sutton	May 1990
Audenshaw School, Tameside	February 1990
Bankfield School, Cheshire	March 1990
Southlands School, Berkshire	June 1990
Cardinal Vaughan School, London	June 1990

City Technology Colleges (Private Donations)

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total amount of private donations to city technology colleges, including planned and proposed colleges (a) pledged, (b) confirmed, (c) committed, and (d) actually paid over and showing in each case the nature of donations in kind rather than cash.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 25 July 1990]: The total value of private donations for announced projects in the CTC programme currently stands at some £31·5 million. To date, £8·636 million has already been paid over —£7·081 million in cash and £1·555 million in kind. In addition, some £6 million has been promised for possible further projects not yet announced, the support of curriculum development work and other work by the City Technology Colleges Trust. I regard these resources as representing the firm commitment of the private sector to date.

Football Licensing Authority

Mr. Tom Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects the inspectorate required by the Football Licensing Authority for the exercise of its functions to be in place; and what will be its terms of reference.

Mr. John Patten: I have been asked to reply.

The appointment of the inspectorate and the formulation of its terms of refernce are the responsibility of the Football Licensing Authority. I understand, however, that advertisements have been commissioned by the authority to appear at around the end of October. Applications will then be processed and appointments made as soon as possible. The role of the inspectorate will be to inform and advise the authority on matters relating to the licensing of sports grounds at which designated football matches are played, and to the exercise by local authorities, in relation to those sports grounds, of their functions under the Safety of Sports Grounds Act 1975.

TRANSPORT

A12

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the traffic flows along the A12 between (a) the M25 interchange and Chelmsford, (b) Chelmsford and Witham, (c) Witham and Colchester and (d) Colchester and Ipswich for each year from 1985 to 1989; and if he will indicate the division between heavy goods vehicles and other traffic.

Mr. Chope: Information is not available in exactly the format requested. However, representative data are available for daily traffic flows between the following points on the A12 trunk road:

	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989
M-25 Margaretting	40,000	49,000	54,000	59,000	62,000
Boreham-Hatfield Peverel	42,000	44,000	56,000	58,000	62,000
Feering-Marks Tey	34,000	38,000	52,000	53,000	58,000
Marks Tey-Stanway	41,000	46,000	52,000	57,000	63,000
Four Sisters	26,000	29,000	32,000	31,000	32,000

Heavy goods vehicles accounted for approximately 15-20 per cent. of these daily traffic flows.

London Underground

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing the level of investment in the London Underground system in each year from 1974 to date, and in which year it ceased to be the responsibility of the Greater London council.

Mr. Freeman: The figures for investment in the Underground since 1974 are as follows:

Year	Cash	Real (1990-91 prices)
	£ million	£ million
1974	36·3	162·7
1975	43·4	155·7
1976	49·9	154·2
1977	43·6	116·0

Year	Cash £ million	Real (1990-91 prices) £ million
1978	46·8	115·1
1979	65·0	141·0
1980	77·9	143·2
1981	90·9	149·1
1982	81·8	123·7
1983	109·8	158·9
1984-85	[1]117·0	[1]158·9
1985-86	135·1	135·1
1986-87	171·2	212·6
1987-88	212·9	256·1
1988-89	206·2	233·9
1989-90	307·3	327·2
[2]1990-91	400·0

[1] Annualised equivalents figure of a 15-month total of £156 million (cash) and £211·8 million (real).

The London Regional Transport Act came into force in 1984. However, the level of the Underground's funding for 1984-85 was determined by the GLC. On current estimates, Underground investment in 1990-91 will be two and a half times higher, in real terms, than in 1984-85.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what surveys have been made of the impact of the opening of the channel tunnel in 1993 and of the Waterloo link upon the numbers travelling by the Northern line.

Mr. Freeman: A survey carried out by Halcrow Fox for British Rail in 1989 estimated the numbers of channel tunnel passengers that would be using the Underground. London Underground is making use of the resulting data in its strategic planning.

Airport Capacity

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the working party he has established to examine the Civil Aviation Authority's report on runway capacity in the south-east will be examining only the range of options set out in that report; and if he will make his policy that greenfield sites for major new airports in the south-east will not be considered.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend explained in his reply of 17 July to a parliamentary question from my hon. Friend the Member for Saffron Walden (Mr. Haselhurst) his intention that the working group should address the wider implications of airport development for the options identified by the Civil Aviation Authority, in addition to examining the contribution of regional airports to meeting demand. My right hon. Friend had earlier agreed with the authority's judgment that the development of a major airport on a completely new site in the south-east was unlikely to be realistic or acceptable.

Railway Investment

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing the level of railway investment on a comparable basis in each year from 1974 to date.

Mr. Freeman: British Railways Board's railway investment is as follows, in constant 1990-91 prices:

1974	492
1975	534
1976	506
1977	502
1978	484
1979	489
1980	512
1981	432
1982	362
1983	353
[1]1984-85	421
1985-86	504
1986-87	486
1987-88	601
1988-89	612

[1]1984-85 was a 15-month accounting period. The 12-month equivalent is given; the actual figure (in 1990-91 prices) was £526 million.

Note: Railway investment includes track, signalling, locomotives, rolling stock, stations and railway facilities. Expenditure by subsidiaries, and on non-operational land and continuously welded rail (CWR), are excluded. Figures are drawn from BR Annual Reports and Accounts, adjusted to exclude CWR between 1974 and 1979, and adjusted to 1990-91 prices using published GDP deflators.

Summerley Coal Aston Airstrip (Accidents)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will arrange for the air accidents investigation branch to investigate and report upon the two separate aircraft accidents at the Summerley Coal Aston airstrip in Derbyshire on 24 July; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The air investigation branch has completed its investigations into the two unconnected light aircraft accidents at Coal Aston airstrip, Derbyshire on 24 July 1990.

The first accident occurred when the pilot of a Cessna 150 aircraft landed with excessive speed and bounced heavily causing the nose landing gear to collapse. The second accident occurred when a Piper Tomahawk aircraft, operated by the United States Air Force Flying Club failed to accelerate to a safe flying speed within the reduced runway length used. There were no injuries sustained in either accident.

Full details of the AAIB investigations will be published in the next AAIB Bulletin on 7 November.

Oil Spillages (Protection Equipment)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of the stockpile of equipment, particularly oil absorbent booms or barrier booms, held in Scotland at Cambusbarron; and how long it would take to transport this equipment to protect Loch Roag in the western isles in the event of an oil spillage.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Cambusbarron stockpile is one of three centrally located stockpiles of specialist equipment for shoreline clean-up of oil pollution maintained by the marine pollution control unit (MPCU) and available at short notice to local authorites who have accepted primary responsibility for beach cleaning. A list of all directly owned or contracted counter-pollution resources available to the MCPU, including the Cambusbarron stockpile, is held in the House of Commons Library. Equipment from the Cambusbarron stockpile could be deployed to Loch Roag within 10 to 17 hours from Callout, depending on the availability of suitable aircraft and vessels. Additional equipment relevant to a particular incident could also be deployed as necessary from the other MPCU stockpiles or from commercial sources.

Taxis

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has, subsequent to his announcement of 11 May 1989, Official Report, column 486, to propose changes in legislation concerning taxi and private hire car vehicles.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government have no such legislative changes to propose at this stage.

Minch Oil Spill Exercise

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make public the results of analysis of the marine pollution unit oil spill exercise carried out in the Minch on 4 and 5 July.

Mr. McLoughlin: The marine pollution control unit (MPCU) oil spill exercise carried out in the Minch on 4 and 5 July 1990 was the latest in a continuing series of annual live exercises designed to activate and test contingency plans to deal with oil spillages from ships. These objectives were successfully achieved by the exercise. Some minor lessons were learned with regard to communications and certain aspects of on-scene command and control. These have been taken into account.

Airports (Safety)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which statutory body or part of his Department is responsible for advising (a) him and (b) local authorities on the safety of people on the ground outside the statutory safety and air zones of new or expanding airports.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Civil Aviation Authority has the statutory responsibility for the safety regulation of civil aviation. The primary purpose of its safety regulation group, which comprises some 750 professional and other staff, is to minimise the probability of aircraft having accidents or incidents. By so doing, the authority also protects people on the ground.

Bus Routes (London)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration he has given to requiring tendering for bus route contracts for London Regional Transport to be published in the same manner as other areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Under the London Regional Transport Act 1984, the tendering of bus routes in London and the decision on whether to publish successful tender bids are matters for London Transport. While the Government have no immediate plans to amend this legislation, the point raised by the hon. Gentleman will be considered in the context of our plans to deregulate the London bus market.

HEALTH

Hospital Catering Costs

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the cost of food in hospitals, per patient, excluding special diets and supplementary food and labour costs, but including all meals and beverages, for each district health area in England.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department collects the average cost of provisions per patient per day for each hospital annually. These figures exclude labour costs but include special diets and supplementary food. They will be published for 1987-88 and 1988-89 as part of the additional health service indicators which will be placed in the Library later this month.

Friern Barnet Psychiatric Hospital

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funds have been allocated to date by North East Thames regional health authority on reprovision of facilities for patients currently resident at Friern Barnet psychiatric hospital; and what funds are scheduled to be spent between the present time and September 1991.

Mr. Dorrell: The allocation of funds for the reprovision of care for the mentally ill, is a matter for the individual health authorities concerned.

Water Supply

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has received from the chief medical officer of the possible dangers to public health from the presence of viruses in water mains; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Viruses are removed from mains water during the process of water treatment. These treatment processes are designed to ensure that the water supply meets microbiological standards and is not therefore a risk to public health.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the possible dangers to public health from viruses in water mains and from leakage of harmful organisms and viruses from (a) water mains and (b) sewage pipes to (i) water services and (ii) land; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: As drinking water conveyed in water mains is treated to remove harmful organisms and viruses, leakages do not present a risk to public health. Potentially harmful organisms leaked from sewage pipes will be attenuated by natural decay and dilution, thus minimising the risk to public health. No land is free from naturally occurring bacteria or viruses and any additional risk from leaked sewage, unless in sufficient quantity to cause flood conditions, is minor.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the possible damages to public health from (a) the flushing of water mains and (b) the reduction of water pressure in respect of any harmful organisms or viruses which may be present in water mains; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: As flushing is done with disinfected mains water which is flushed into sewers or surface water drains, there is no risk to public health. Following any significant drop in mains pressure due to some loss of integrity of a distribution system it is routine procedure for pipes into which contaminated water may have entered to be disinfected and flushed. The water is then sampled and analysed before it is returend to the public supply. Reductions in pressure for operational purposes are controlled to prevent contamination and minimise the risk to public health.

Kidney Dialysis

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children under 10 years of age are receiving kidney dialysis per million of the population; how many he estimates could benefit from this treatment who are not getting it; and what was the number in 1985 of children under 10 years of age receiving kidney dialysis per million of the population.

Mr. Dorrell: According to information provided by the European Dialysis and Transplant Association, the number of children in the United Kingdom under 10 years of age receiving treatment for end stage renal failure was as follows:

At 31 December 1985:
185 children, of whom 35 (5·0 per million population) were receiving dialysis
At 31 December 1988:
212 children, of whom 32 (4·3 per million population) were receiving dialysis

The rate per million population is based on the number of children in the relevant age group. The latest year for which statistics are available is 1988.

It is not possible to provide accurate information on the number of children who could benefit from this treatment, but we are not aware of any children requiring renal reaplacement therapy who are not receiving it.

Diabetic Kidney Patients

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of diabetic kidney patients are receiving treatment; and whether any patients in this category have been refused care.

Mr. Dorrell: Information is not available in the form requested. According to information provided by the European Dialysis and Transplant Association, the number of diabetic patients receiving treatment in the United Kingdom for end stage renal failure at 31 December 1988 was approximately 800.

Romanian Orphans

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will issue guidance to local authorities on the charges to be levied on parents for documents required to adopt Romanian orphans; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Local authorities have been advised that they can charge prospective adopters to cover the costs of assessment and preparation of reports in connection with the adoption of children from overseas. The charges made are a matter for the authorities. The local authority associations are considering whether there is any advice which they can offer to authorities about the level of charges.

South-East Thames Region

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the figures for revenue and capital expended in the South East Thames region hospital service in each year on a comparable basis since 1974.

Mr. Dorrell: Information on the expenditure by the South East Thames regional health authority and the district health authorities (and their predecessor authorities) comprising the South East Thames region, derived from annual accounts submitted to the Department in cash and at constant prices, is shown in the table. Over such a long period the figures are not entirely comparable.

[1] Provisional figures—as yet subject to audit.

Notes:

1. The figures for earlier years have been expressed at 1989-90 prices by the use of the Gross Domestic Product deflator.
2. HCHS covers all health authorities' services including hospital, community health, patient transport (i.e., ambulance) and blood transfusion. Expenditure on family practitioner services is excluded. However, the figures prior to 1 April 1985 include small elements related to the administrative expenses of family practitioner committees (FPCs).
3. The figures from 1987-88 exclude an element for the costs of the London Ambulance Service which in earlier years was shared by all four Thames RHAs.
4. Capital expenditure for particular authorities and regions tends to fluctuate year on year mainly reflecting changes in the pattern of capital investment throughout the country.

HEALTH

Hospices

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospices there are in each of the counties of England; and what is his policy regarding the expansion of hospice provision in England.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not available in the form requested. The following table gives an analysis by health district. The Government value the contribution made by the hospice movement to improving services for people with a terminal illness and their families. We expect health authorities to take the lead in planning and co-ordinating such services, in consultation with hospices and other interested organisations.

Northern Region

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what total sum has been made available for the distinction awards to hospital consultants in the northern region in the financial year 1988-89 and in the current financial year; and how much will be available in the 1990-91 financial year.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No specific sum is allocated to authorities for the payment of distinction awards. Health authorities are expected to meet the cost of distinction awards from their own resources.

Health Education

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the funding of organisations working with elderly people to enable them to develop additional health education programmes.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department grant-aids a number of voluntary organisations under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968, several of which include a health education element in their programmes. The overall funding available through this source will be increased to £15,680,000 for the financial year 1991-92. We are currently receiving applications for funding, all of which will be carefully considered. It is too early to say at this stage what proportion of the overall funding will be allocated to organisations working with and for elderly people.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will be the total saving to the Health Education Authority arising from the ending of the health in old age programme.

Mr. Dorrell: During 1990-91 £106,000 will be spent by the Health Education Authority on its health in old age programme. The ending of the Programme is not intended to achieve a financial saving, but to enable the Authority to utilise its resources more effectively by addressing the health education needs of elderly people across the whole range of its activities rather than by being restricted to a specific programme. It is too early to say what resources the Authority will devote to the health education needs of elderly people in 1991-92 and beyond.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the future of the age well programme.

Mr. Dorrell: Officials are in discussion with Age Concern, who have responsibility for the age well programme, to discuss its future. We are not aware of any representations other than those made by the hon. Member.

Consultants

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the amount of distinction awards paid to consultants in each of the health authorities in the Northern region for the last five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information on the amount of distinction awards paid, as given in a footnote to the annual accounts of the Northern Regional Health Authority (RHA) and the district health authorities comprising the Northern region, is shown in the table.

[1] 1989-90 figures are "provisional" in that the annual accounts for that year are as yet subject to audit.
n/g—Not given.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the number of hospital consultants who received top-up bonuses in each health authority in the Northern region in the financial year 1988-89 and in the current financial year;

(2) what sums have been made available for top-up bonuses to hospital consultants in each health authority in the Northern region in the financial year 1988-89 and in the current financial year; and how much will be budgeted for each authority for the 1990-91 financial year.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: NHS hospital consultants do not receive "top-up bonuses".

Menopause Services

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes issued by his Department asking health authorities to balance the services provided by specialist clinics and those provided by general practitioners as they relate to the menopause.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The guidance referred to in my reply to my hon. Friend on 24 July at column 176, relates to family planning services. No specific guidance has been issued on menopause clinics. The provision of services for the women concerned is a matter for local health authorities to determine in the light of local needs and priorities.

Social Services (Unallocated Cases)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of unallocated cases for each social services area.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Members for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths), for Mid-Staffordshire (Mrs. Heal), for Renfrew, West and Inverclyde (Mr. Graham) and for Newcastle upon Tyne North (Mr. Henderson) on 3 July at column 535.

DES/Stilboestrol

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will meet the representatives of the DES/Stilboestrol Action Group in England;

(2) if his Department plans to examine the conclusions of the DES/Stilboestrol symposium held in Dublin on 14 September;

(3) if his Department will inquire into reports that the grandchildren of patients treated with the drug DES/Stilboestrol have suffered ill effects.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) carefully monitors all issues of drug safety. There is also a statutory obligation for pharmaceutical companies to provide details of any suspected adverse drug reactions which they may receive in relation to one of their products. Any new information relating to side effects from stilboestrol will be monitored in the usual way when it becomes available to the CSM. There are no plans to meet representatives of the DES Action Group.

Travellers

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is routinely collected by his Department about health authority plans, targets and services for traveller mothers and babies.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Routine information is not collected centrally. We recognise that meeting the health care needs of traveller families requires special attention from health authorities in areas with a significant traveller population. To help develop good practice the Department provides financial support to a travellers information and liaison unit run by the Save the Children Fund.

Tehidy Hospital, Cornwall

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce his decision on the future of Tehidy hospital, Cornwall.

Mr. Dorrell: South Western regional health authority will consider on 6 November a proposal by Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority to develop a community hospital at Barncoose, and to sell Tehidy hospital. If the regional health authority supports the proposal it will be referred to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the final decision.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what treatment is available for ME on the National Health Service.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department of health and the National Health Service recognise myalgic encephalomyelitis as a debilitating and distressing disease. Its causes are not yet fully understood, nor is there a generally agreed method of treatment. Treatment to alleviate the various symptoms is a matter for medical judgment in individual cases. A number of licensed medicines, prescribable under the NHS, have been found to bring relief to some patients.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been spent by his Department in funding research on myalgic encephalomyelitis for each year for the past three years.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department of Health is aware of several studies being conducted into myalgic encephalomyelitis although it has not sponsored this research. The main Government agency responsible for the promotion of biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science. I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Department of Education and Science gave my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 2 February at column 422.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total staff of the London ambulance service for each month since January 1989.

Mr. Dorrell: Data is not collected in the form requested but annual figures are available in a national ambulance survey prepared by York health authority. The total numbers of staff for the last two available financial years for the London ambulance service are given in the table. Total staffing figures include officers, operational staff and general staff such as mechanics and domestics.

The management of the London ambulance service is the responsibility of the London ambulance service board, chairman Mr. James Harris, to whom the hon. Member may wish to write for further information.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the average response time for the London ambulance service in emergencies for each week since January 1989.

Mr. Dorrell: Data are collected centrally only on a financial year basis. In both 1987-88 and 1988-89 the median response time to emergency calls was less then 10 minutes. The management of the London ambulance service is the responsibility of the London ambulance service board, chairman Mr. James Harris, to whom the hon. Member may wish to write for more detailed information.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the total number of vehicles and (b) vehicle miles covered by the London ambulance service for each week since January 1989.

Mr. Dorrell: Data is not collected in the form requested but annual figures are available in a national ambulance survey prepared by York health authority. The total numbers of vehicles and vehicle miles for the last 2 available financial years for the London ambulance service are given in the table. Vehicles included ambulance and other ambulance service vehicles such as major incident vehicles and recovery vehicles.

Birth Statistics

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will give for England and Wales for 1988, for births within marriage and jointly registered births outside marriage, the numbers of live births, still births, early neonatal deaths, late neonatal deaths and post-neonatal deaths of babies with mothers with occupations in: (a) social class I, (b) social class II, (c) social class III non-manual, (d) social class III manual, (e) social class IV, (f) social class V, (g) in other occupations and (h) with no stated occupation;

(2) if he will give for England and Wales for 1988 the numbers of live births, still births, early neonatal deaths, late neonatal deaths and post-neonatal deaths of babies with mothers with occupations in (a) social class I, (b) social class II, (c) social class III non-manual, (d) social class III manual, (e) social class IV, (f) social class V, (g) other occupations and (h) with no stated occupation.

Mr. Dorrell: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will give the numbers of women resident in (a) Dacorum local government district and (b) St. Albans local government district who gave birth in 1989 in (i) St. Albans City Hospital, (ii) Luton and Dunstable Hospital, (iii) Queen Elizabeth II Hospital, Welwyn Garden City, (iv) Watford general hospital, (v) Royal Bucks hospital, Aylesbury, (vi) RAF Halton maternity unit, (vii) other hospitals, (viii) at home and (ix) elsewhere.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is as follows:

	Dacorum	St. Albans
St. Albans City hospital	1,016	1,124
Luton and Dunstable hospital	39	51
Queen Elizabeth II hospital, Welwyn Garden City	8	145
Watford general hospital	279	77

[1]Figures for individual non-NHS hospitals are not available for 1989.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for England and Wales for 1983 and 1988 the estimated total numbers of live births within marriage and jointly registered births outside marriage of singleton babies weighing (i) under 1000g, (ii) 1000-1499g, (iii) 1500-1999g, (iv) 2000-2499g, (v) 2500g and over and (vi) with unstated birthweights for babies with fathers in (a) social class I, (b) social class II, (c) social class III non-manual, (d) social class III manual, (e) social class IV, (f) social class V, (g) other occupations and (h) with no stated occupation.

Mr. Dorrell: The information is shown in the table. The data on social class are derived from a 10 per cent. coding of occupation details, and weighting factors have been applied to this sample to give estimated data. It should also be noted that the two years are not exactly comparable in the "other occupations" and "no stated occupation" categories due to a change in coding practice.

Bloomsbury and Islington Health Authority

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements will be made to ensure adequate provisions of finance for the merged Bloomsbury and Islington health authority.

Mr. Dorrell: It is for North East Thames regional health authority to decide funding levels for the merged Bloomsbury and Islington health authority.

Friern Barnet Hospital (Closure)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision has been made by his Department for the effects of the closure of Friern Barnet hospital on the neighbouring health and local authorities.

Mr. Dorrell: This is a matter for the North East Thames regional health authority and for the health and local authorities concerned.

Peak Flow Meters

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the cost per unit of peak flow meters available at present to his Department; and what he treats as an acceptable cost;

(2) if he will now announce a date from which peak flow meters will become available on prescription to asthmatics; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what information he has on the reasons for the delay in implementation of his Department's earlier announcement that peak flow meters would be made available on prescription to asthmatics; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Peak flow meters were made available on prescription from 1 October 1990. Two brands of meter have been included in the prescribable list —the drug tariff—manufactured by Clement Clarke Limited and Vitalograph Limited.

Two models have been approved for each manufacturer: standard-range meters suitable for both adults and children and low-range meters for adults or children with serverely restricted air flow. Clement Clarke meters are priced in the drug tariff at £6·39 and Vitalograph meters at £5·99. These prices are both acceptable.

Recording charts in the form of a booklet are being issued free of charge via general practitioners for making a daily record of the user's peak expiratory flow rate. The booklet covers a year's usage and includes notes on the use and care of the meter.

I announced on 21 March 1990 that peak flow meters would become available on prescription. To be accepted for listing on the drug tariff, each company's meters had to conform to a Departmental specification, meet criteria of safety, efficacy and cost effectiveness, and be available in sufficient quantity to meet potential demand. Labelling, packaging, user instructions and prices were also the subject of consultation and negotiations.

Haemophiliacs (AIDS)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total cost to the Government to date of the legal case in which people with haemophilia, having been infected with the AIDS virus in the course of national health service treatment, are suing the Government.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The cost of the time spent by civil servants on this litigation and other administrative expenditure is not separately identified. So far, £25,961 has been paid in legal fees, and £10,495 in fees to expert witnesses. This does not include the costs of legal aid, which are a charge on the Lord Chancellor's Department.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will make a statement on his reaction to Mr. Justice Ognall's appeal to both sides in the legal case in which people with haemophilia, having been infected with the AIDS virus in the course of national health service treatment, are suing the Government, to give anxious consideration to a compromise solution and the judge's offer to arbitrate in a speedy settlement of the case.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have carefully considered the points put forward by Mr. Justice Ognall in his statement handed down on 26 June 1990. The text of the Department's response was as follows:

Thank you very much for providing me with a copy of the note handed down by Mr. Justice Ognall on 26 June 1990.

The Secretary of State has carefully considered the points put forward by the Judge, together with the advice given previously by Counsel in the light of the overall situation concerning the tragic effect on haemophiliacs of the use of Factor VIII containing the HIV virus.

The Government has recognised that the plight of haemophiliacs and the fact that the treatment which led to their infection was intended to help them to lead as near a normal life as possible, makes their case wholly exceptional. Accordingly, and in recognition of their unique position, the Macfarlane Trust was set up following an announcement by the Minister of Health in November 1987 and was provided with £10 million, to make payments on an ex-gratia basis to affected individuals and their families throughout the United Kingdom. Since then, many payments have been made out of the fund, on the basis of financial need, and this continues.

When announcing the establishment of the Macfarlane Trust, the Government made it clear that, while it considered the sum of £10 million to be appropriate at that time, it would nevertheless keep open to review the question of what funds were required. Following an announcement by the Secretary of State on 23 November 1989, a further sum of £24 million was made available for haemophiliacs. The aim was first, to make individual payments of £20,000 to each haemophiliac infected with AIDS virus as a result of treatment with blood products in the United Kingdom or the family of such a person who has died; and second, to enable the Macfarlane Trust to continue on a more generous scale to help families in particular need.

So the Government has already made available a total of £34 million to mitigate the effects of this tragedy on all haemophiliacs with HIV and their families and not just the litigants in this action. Some £24 million of this total has been distributed to individuals affected, irrespective of means, whilst the remainder has been and continues to be made available on the basis of need. None of these payments is taken into account for the purposes of social security or indeed of legal aid.

The Government proposes to keep the sums available to the Macfarlane Trust and the needs of haemophiliacs under regular review.

All these sums are of course paid on an ex-gratia basis. They are intended to provide the resources to respond positively to the particular needs of affected haemophiliacs and their families. They are not however intended to be a substitute for litigation of the issues presently before the Court.

Mr. Justice Ognall has suggested that there are actions which should perhaps be settled on the basis of moral obligation rather than on a strict assessment of legal liability. The Secretary of State has already recognised the moral argument and the strong compassionate arguments in favour of providing assistance to haemophiliacs affected by HIV in the setting up of the Macfarlane Trust and in providing resources for their treatment. In the Secretary of State's view, the fact that the affected haemophiliacs have chosen to pursue their legal claim does not raise any fresh moral obligation beyond that already recognised by the Government. And, of course, he has the general duty to weigh up the claims for assistance of this particular group as against the claims of other groups of sick or disabled people, within the resources voted by Parliament.

Ministers are always and understandably faced by an array of competing demands for highly desirable objectives within the inevitably finite resources available. Spending more on one group, whatever the reason for doing so, inevitably means spending less on others. The haemophiliacs with HIV infection have attracted public attention and quite rightly won the nation's sympathy, but there are many other examples of people suffering severe disability with the prospect of premature death also through no fault of their own—for example, patients with advanced cancer; patients with end-stage renal failure; or children born with severe congenital heart defects. It is the responsibility of Ministers and their advisers to weigh up these difficult choices and to arrive at a reasonable ordering of priorities.

Ministers are, of course, and rightly, accountable to Parliament for their decisions on policies and priorities. As you know it is the Secretary of State's case in this litigation that such decisions do not and should not give rise to a duty of care to individual members of the public such as to enable those individuals to bring a claim for damages. This is an important principle and one which would have far reaching repercussions if compromised. There are strong public policy reasons why this is so. First, it would make the process of policy formation very much less effective if every decision were subject to the risk of legal challenge in the courts. Second, if it were accepted in this particular action that Ministers did owe such a duty of care this would be likely to lead to very large numbers of costly and time-consuming claims against the Department, Licensing Authority and CSM. There is nothing unique about this aspect of the present claim.

The Secretary of State fully recognises the force of the argument that the resources likely to be taken up by this litigation would be better used to alleviate suffering. However, it would not achieve this purpose if the likely consequence of compromising these actions were to encourage other expensive litigation in future. The Secretary of State considers that the existence of this litigation on its own is not a sufficient reason to adopt different criteria from those which govern the decisions which regularly have to be made where the competing demands of many pressing and deserving causes have to be balanced in the light of the resources that are actually available.

The Secretary of State is satisfied that the best and indeed the proper way of meeting the need referred to by Mr. Justice Ognall is through the machinery of the Macfarlane Trust or similar means. The Government remains committed to pursuing that course and will ensure that the needs of all affected haemophiliacs and their families are kept under review. That resolve will not be affected by the progress or outcome of the litigation.

It is recognised that it would be in the interests of everyone that the present litigation should be brought to a speedy conclusion. Apart from the anguish which it inevitably causes to plaintiffs and their families, it has placed a heavy burden on the resources of the Legal Aid Fund and of the Department and Health Authorities. That inevitably involves the diversion of scarce resources from elsewhere. It must be a matter for individual Plaintiffs and their advisers as to whether they wish to continue to pursue their allegations against the Central Defendants in the expectation or hope that they will be able to establish liability. However, whilst the Secretary of State will continue to review the position from time to time, until or unless you advise that there is a real likelihood of the Plaintiffs or any of them succeeding in establishing liability, his view is that these actions should continue to be defended firmly. Meanwhile, I know that you and Counsel will do everything possible to adhere to the timetable set by the Court.

I would be grateful if you would express the Secretary of State's thanks to the Judge for his observations and make him aware of the matters set out in this letter. A copy of this letter may be provided to the Judge if you consider this appropriate.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why he withheld from the courts documents that are wanted by the legal representatives of people with haemophilia who contracted the AIDS virus in the course of National Health Service treatment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: A number of documents were withheld because the Department of Health considered that a claim for public interest immunity applied to them. This immunity cannot be waived by the Crown.

The documents in question related to the period of office of both the previous Labour Government and the present Conservative Government.

Public interest immunity is a principle of law that prevents the dislosure of documents on the grounds that production of those documents would be injurious to the public interest. The immunity prevents the disclosure of, for example, documents which concern the inner workings of the Government machine or policy making within Departments. In the course of his judgment in the Court of Appeal on 20 September 1990 Lord Justice Ralph Gibson said:

"The Department of Health has raised the matter of public interest immunity so as to prevent the disclosure of [certain documents]. The Department does not do that in order to put difficulty in the way of plaintiffs, or to withhold from the Court documents which might help the plaintiffs. The Department raises the matter because it is the duty of the Department in law to do so in support of the public interest and the proper functioning of the public service, that is the executive arm of the Government. . .It is not for the Department but for the Court to determine whether the documents should be produced. The plaintiffs acknowledge the validity of the claim to public interest immunity but ask the Court to order production notwithstanding the existence of a valid claim to immunity. It is essential that the aspect of these proceedings should be clearly understood.

The valid claim to immunity to be overridden by the order of the Court if the law requires that it should be overridden. The task of the Court is properly to balance the public interest in preserving the immunity on the one hand, and the public interest in the fair trial of the proceedings on the other".

Prescription Costs

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if his Department has considered research conducted by the Association of British Pharmaceutical Industries on estimated and actual prescription costs for the elderly; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received a copy of the ABPI briefing pamphlet "Trends in usage of prescription medicines by the elderly and the very elderly between 1977 and 1988". We agree with the general conclusion that the need for prescription medicines increases with aging population and progressively more so at the extreme end of the age spectrum. This will be reflected in the setting of indicative prescribing amounts for practices under the indicative prescribing scheme set out in "Improving Prescribing".

X-rays

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department considered research by the Royal College of Radiologists on effects of excessive X-ray treatment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: We are considering the document entitled "Patient Dose Reduction in Diagnostic Radiology" issued by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) on 5 September 1990. This document reports the findings of the joint working party of the Royal College of Radiologists and NRPB, and makes recommendations for the reduction of radiation doses to patients. Radiologists and other professionals who work in this field have a statutory obligation to keep the dose of ionising radiation to the patient as low as reasonably practicable in order to achieve the required diagnostic purpose, and we are considering what other assistance or advice can be offered by the Department of Health.

Intensive Care Cots

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will specify the number of intensive care cots (a) in each region and (b) in each district of the last five years.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 28 June 1990]: The tables showing the daily average numbers of neonatal cots which are not in a maternity unit for the period from 1985 to 1989-90 are as follows, although it should be noted that some health authorities also provide intensive care facilities within maternity units.

ENERGY

Uranium consumption

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish in the Official Report details of the United Kingdom uranium consumption for each year since 1960; and if he will set alongside this the level of world uranium consumption indicating the percentage annual growth in each case, and the predicted levels to be reached by the year 2000.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 25 January 1990 col. 817.

The OECD/IAEA publication referred to in that answer has been updated this year. Forecast requirements now relate to Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear.

British Nuclear Fuels

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish details of the expenditure on reprocessing and decommissioning undertaken by BNFL plc in each year since 1979.

Mr. Baldry: This is a commercial matter for British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Nuclear Incidents

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish in the Official Report information supplied to his Department through the incident reporting system of the International Atomic energy Agency about nuclear incidents reported to that agency by states participating in the incident reporting system.

Mr. Baldry: No. The International Atomic Energy Agency gives its incident reporting system reports restricted circulation because they may not be publicly available in their country of origin.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) pursuant to his statement of 23 July, Official Report, column 39, if he will make it his policy to negotiate with Hanson Trust plc maximum values for capital and tax allowances available to the parent company, in connection with the sale of PowerGen;

(2) what methods of advertisement to possible trade purchasers of PowerGen, other than Hanson Trust, he proposes, pursuant to his statement to the house of 23 July, Official Report, column 39.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the announcement that I made on 23 August 1990, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has had with the European Commission regarding the implications for European Community competition policy of the possible trade sale of PowerGen, pursuant to his statement to the House of 23 July, Official Report, column 39.

Mr. Baldry: The European Commission was kept fully informed about the Government's proposals.

Plutonium

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will publish details of the current location of separated plutonium arising out of reprocessing, but originating from Magnox reactors at Bradwell and Berkeley.

Mr. Baldry: The Magnox reactors at Bradwell and Berkeley have contributed, along with other civil nuclear installations, to the stocks of plutonium held by British Nuclear Fuels plc at Sellafield for Nuclear Electric plc and by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority. All this material is subject to Euratom safeguards and to the terms of the UK/Euratom/IAEA safeguards agreement. Details of the plutonium held at 31 March 1989 were given in the press release issued by my Department on 5 December 1989, copies of which were placed in the Library of the House. In addition, some separated plutonium from Bradwell and Berkeley was consigned to the United States before 1971 under the United States/United Kingdom mutual defence agreement. The United States authorities have confirmed subsequently that this material has been used for civil purposes.

Radioactive Material

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proportion of radioactive material produced at nuclear installations in the United Kingdom is not subject to the 1977 tripartite safeguards agreement between the United Kingdom, Euratom and the International Atomic Energy Agency in each year since 1983; and if he will publish in the Official Report details of the international export of plutonium from civil nuclear reactors in the United Kingdom to (a) European Community Countries and (b) third countries.

Mr. Baldry: All uranium and plutonium produced in civil nuclear installations is subject to Euratom safeguards and to the terms of the UK/Euratom/IAEA tripartite Agreement of 6 September 1976 (IAEA INFCIRC 263) at all times.

For information on exports of civil plutonium, including the recipient countries, I refer the hon. Member to the answer in Official Report, 17 January 1989, at column 157, and to the Department's annual press releases on plutonium production, (produced since the year 1986-87), which are available in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Power

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what funding the United Kingdom makes available to the International Atomic Energy Agency in respect of its safeguarding activities and if he will give a breakdown of that funding in each year since the United Kingdom first contributed.

Mr. Baldry: The United Kingdom contributes approximately five per cent. of the International Atomic Energy Agency's general funding through an annual membership subscription. It is a matter for the IAEA to decide, subject to the approval of the board of governors, as to how much of these funds are allocated to the activities of its safeguards department. In addition to this funding, the United Kingdom provides a sum annually to send IAEA inspectors on training courses arranged in the United Kingdom.

Gas Fields

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for energy whether any of the additional costs of taking the proposed central area transmission system pipeline to Teesside, rather than the shorter route to a landfall at St. Fergus, will be met from public funds by offsets against petroleum revenue tax, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The petroleum revenue tax liabilities and reliefs of companies participating in the proposed central area transmission system would fall to be assessed in due time by the oil taxation office in the light of the actual costs of the project and the revenues it earned. If the cost of the proposed pipeline is admissible for petroleum revenue tax relief, this would apply to a landfall at either Teesside or St. Fergus.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if there are any plans to develop the Drake, Maggie or Hawkins fields; and if he will give details;

(2) if he has had any discussions about, or received any applications under annex B, for the development of the Maggie, Drake or Hawkins fields.

Mr. Moynihan: No such plans or applications have yet been received by my Department; neither has the Department had recent discussions with any of the operators concerned about possible development of the fields.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will give details of any requirement upon companies developing gas fields to recover gas condensate and of any regulations relating to this; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will give details of any guidance issued to companies developing gas fields about or relating to the recovery of gas condensate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: In considering plans for the development of gas fields on the UKCS my Department seeks to ensure that, where it is economic to do so, all hydrocarbons, including condensate liquids, will be recovered to the maximum extent that is technically achievable. Since the optimum recovery procedure differs from field to field, the Department bases its discussions with operators on specific technical studies of the individual field concerned. In addition my officials have regularly participated in conferences and specialist seminars at which general guidance has been provided to the industry on the Department's criteria for the development of reservoirs containing condensate liquids.

Power Station, Teesside

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what involvement he has had with Northern Electric and the Neptune Group and their plans to locate a gas-fired power station in Teesside; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: My Department is aware of the Neptune Group's interest in constructing a 1,050 MW combined cycle gas turbine power station on Teesside. However my right hon. Friend has not yet received either an application under section 14 of the Energy Act 1976 for his agreement to use gas as the fuel in such a station or an application under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 for his consent to construct the station.

Foreign Magnox Fuel (Reprocessing)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what are the volumes of intermediate-level waste, low-level waste and high-level waste produced in the United Kingdom by the reprocessing of foreign magnox fuel that has been returned to the original owners of the fuel for each of the years from 1965 to 1990 inclusive; and what are the projected volumes to 1999;

(2) what are the volumes of intermediate-level waste, low-level waste, and high-level waste produced in the United Kingdom by the reprocessing of foreign magnox fuel that has not been returned to the original owners of the fuel, for each of the years 1965 to 1990, inclusive; and what are the projected volumes to 1989.

Mr. Baldry: Since 1976 all overseas reprocessing contracts have contained options for the return of wastes arising. For the Government's policy with regard to the return of such wastes, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 2 May 1986 at columns 500-01. No waste from the reprocessing of overseas magnox fuel has yet been returned. The total projected volumes of waste from reprocessing magnox fuel irradiated at overseas power stations are:

cubic metres

	Pre-76 contracts	Post-76 contracts
High-level waste	20	20
Intermediate-level waste	1,600	1,700
Low-level waste	44,000	[1]10,000

[1]Compacted.

From 1993 all low-level waste will be compacted, thus reducing its volume.

Neptune Project

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give details of the type and level of grant assistance or tax relief available for the Neptune project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: No formal proposals for the project have been submitted to my right hon. Friend, whose approval would be required before it could proceed. Teesside, the Neptune location, has development area status, and is thus an area where regional selective assistance applies. No application for assistance has been received by the Department of Trade and Industry. It would be for that Department to determine the eligibility of the project for such assistance. The implications of any capital expenditure on the project for the tax positions of the companies concerned are a matter for the company and the Inland Revenue in each case.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: I have reminded my officials of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received concerning the home energy efficiency scheme.

Mr. Baldry: My Department received a large number of responses to the consultation paper published earlier this year from both voluntary and commercial organisations. It also received a number of letters from interested individuals, including Members of Parliament, and my right hon. Friend the former Minister of State for Energy met the director of Neighbourhood Energy Action and representatives of relevant trade associations before details of the scheme were finalised.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps his Department will take to publicise the home energy efficiency scheme.

Mr. Baldry: The administering agency for the home energy efficiency scheme will agree arrangements for publicity on the scheme with my department. It is in that agency's own financial interests to ensure that take-up of the scheme fully utilises the resources available for grants.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, when he expects to be in a position to publish details of the home energy efficiency scheme.

Mr. Baldry: Regulations governing the operation of the home energy efficiency scheme were laid on 3 September 1990, and the award of the contract for the administration of the scheme to Neighbourhood Energy Action was announced on 1 October.

Petrol Prices

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1978 in terms of pence per gallon the fob export and cif import price of (a) crude oil and (b) petrol together with the United Kingdom ex-refinery price of petrol, excluding tax.

Mr. Moynihan: The figures requested are given in the following table:

Pence per gallon

	Crude oil		Petrol[1]		United Kingdom refinery petrol price[2] (premium leaded)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the average cif import price of a gallon of crude oil and the average fob export price of petrol for each month of 1990 to date, the corresponding United Kingdom ex-refinery price of petrol, excluding tax, and the current crude price at $25 and $30 a barrel, respectively, together with the current ex-refinery price of petrol.

Mr. Moynihan: The figures available, which are still provisional, are given in the table.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, what information he has on petrol prices per litre in Germany, France, Holland, Italy, Spain and the United States of America (a) in December 1989, (b) at the latest available date and (c) the percentage increase since 2 August.

Mr. Moynihan: The petrol prices are given in the table for the countries requested (a) in December 1989, (b) at 17 September, which is the latest available date. At (c) the percentage increase since 30 July is given, as this is the nearest date prior to 2 August for which the Department of Energy has prices. Prices are in pence per litre (including tax and duty) for premium petrol, except those for the USA which are for regular unleaded.

	(a) December 1989	(b) 17 September	(c) Percentage increase since 30 July
Germany	44.1	48.7	15.7
France	53.1	59.7	14.3
Holland	51.9	58.1	11.8
Italy	68.5	73.7	11.1
Spain	43.9	47.7	10.1
USA	16.2	17.6	15.6

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will seek powers to issue an order freezing petrol prices at the level which appertained prior to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and direct that oil companies must justify any application for a price rise with his Department.

Mr. Moynihan: No. Price controls below market levels stop the market working and affect availabilities. France has now abandoned the price controls it applied in August and September which restrained prices less well than the approach the United Kingdom and other countries have followed. The hon. Member may also be aware of the Director General of Fair Trading's conclusions about price control in his report published on 28 September.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how many meetings he has had with oil companies to discuss heating oil prices since 2 August;

(2) how many meetings he has had with oil companies to discuss petrol prices since 2 August.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friend and I regularly meet representatives of the oil companies and discuss a range of issues including oil product prices.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what value and quantity of oil was bought and sold by British companies on (a) the Rotterdam market and (b) long-term contracts in each year since 1980.

Mr. Moynihan: Data are not available to the Department in the precise form requested. Figures are available from the major importers of crude oil into the United Kingdom showing their purchases under continuing supply agreements (i.e., long-term agreements) and other purchases. The figures, which cover a majority of crude oil imports, are shown in the table below, but are available only from 1983 onwards:

	Continuing supply agreements		Non-continuing supply agreements
	Value US$ million	Quantity million barrels	Value US$ million	Quantity million barrels
1983	3,268	109	1,171	39
1984	2,251	79	1,350	47
1985	2,122	77	1,812	65
1986	1,740	123	892	64
1987	2,393	132	1,251	70
1988	2,259	150	720	50

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the refinery input cost in terms of a gallon of crude oil at $20 and $30 a barrel.

Mr. Moynihan: The input costs to a refinery are the cost of the crude oil plus any delivery costs to the refinery not included in that price. Delivery costs vary greatly, depending on the distance and the method of transport (ie pipeline, barges, tanker) and the going rate for transport at that time, and are not directly related to the price of the crude oil itself.

The Department does not collect information on delivery costs or delivered prices of crude oil.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for energy whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1978 and for the first six months of 1990 the average ex-refinery price of petrol less tax in the United Kingdom, Germany and Italy as well as the current price.

Mr. Moynihan: The Department has limited information on ex-refinery prices. The figures presented in the following table are for pump prices excluding tax for the countries and periods requested.

Petrol price less tax (pence/litre)

Oil Companies (Gifts)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what entertainment or gifts have been offered by the oil companies and accepted by civil servants in his Department in their official capacity in each of the past three years.

Mr. Moynihan: All gifts received by civil servants in their official capacity have to be reported and recorded. Excluding minor items of a seasonal or promotional nature, such as calendars or diaries, officials accepted, and were authorised to accept, from oil companies, one gift in 1987, two in 1988 and two in 1989. All were valued at less than £20.

It is frequently essential to the work of the Department for officials to attend working lunches and working dinners and to attend other functions which further the work of the Department. Some of these functions can be classified as entertainment because they are cultural or sporting events. Acceptance of invitations to these must be reported to senior officers, who will consider whether the work of the Department will be forwarded and whether the invitation is appropriate. The only full year for which my Department has records of such social invitations is 1989. In that year 239 of them were received from oil companies and 114 of them accepted.

Orimulsion Fuel

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what estimate he has made of the impact upon Snowdonia of the burning of orimulsion fuel at power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I understand that PowerGen is conducting orimulsion combustion trials which aim to assess the potential of orimulsion as a fuel, including environmental effects. The trials are being conducted in consultation with Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will meet Friends of the Earth Cymru to discuss the environment in Snowdonia consequent upon the burning of orimulsion fuel at Ince power station.

Mr. Baldry: I have had no request for a meeting from Friends of the Earth Cymru.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his policy concerning the burning of orimulsion fuel at Ince power station.

Mr. Baldry: It is an operational matter for the generating companies to decide which fuels to burn in their power stations.

Oil Supply

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, how many days' oil supply companies are required to maintain for emergency purposes.

Mr. Moynihan: Orders made under the Energy Act 1976 require contingency oil stocks to be held by all companies supplying petroleum products to the United Kingdom market if their total deliveries exceed 50,000 tonnes per annum. Refiners must hold stocks equivalent to 76.5 days of their previous calendar year deliveries; non-refiners must hold 66 days.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Trade Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his estimate of the increase between 1985 and May 1990 in United Kingdom production of intermediate goods for use in the United Kingdom; what was the corresponding increase in the volume of imports; and what is the implied increase in the import content of goods manufactured in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sainsbury: Information on the volume of imports of intermediate goods is published in the "Monthly Review of Overseas Trade Statistics" tables C9 and C14. Other information requested is not readily available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a list of finished capital goods whose exports have more than doubled since 1985, together with the percentage increase in imports and in United Kingdom output.

Mr. Sainsbury: On the basis of trade analysed in terms of the industries of which they are the principal product there are no capital goods industries whose exports have more than doubled in value since 1985.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the reasons why exports of intermediate goods have increased by less than 30 per cent. in volume since 1985; and if he will publish a list of the products for which there was no increase.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is not the policy of this Government to set targets for exports, which result from action by individual companies. In August the seasonally adjusted volume of exports of intermediate goods was 37 per cent. above the monthly average in 1985.

Estimates are not available of the volume of trade in individual products classified as intermediate goods. Trade in goods analysed in terms of the industries of which they are the principal products gives a rough indication of intermediate products where the volume of exports has not increased since 1985. The industries are:

AH 3410 Insulated wires and cables
AH 3434 Electrical equipment for motor vehicles
AH 3470 Electric lamps and lighting equipment
AH 3740 Watches, clocks and other timing devices

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many officials in his Department are employed in collecting and collating information and statistics concerning trade between the United Kingdom, other members of the European Economic Community and third countries, respectively; and if he envisages any change in their duties and the nature of published information from 1991 until the end of the decade.

Mr. Sainsbury: There are some 950 officials directly engaged on overseas trade matters, and the provision of advice and information about export opportunities, in the Department's overseas trade divisions and regional offices. Approximately 17 officials in the economics, market intelligence and statistics division work with published trade statistics. At present no significant changes in their duties are envisaged.

The collecting and collation of trade statistics is the responsibility of the Central Statistical Office and HM Customs and Excise.

Computers

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether United Kingdom exports of computers imported from non-European Economic Community countries have to be identified as such on export to other European Economic Community countries.

Mr. Sainsbury: No, unless individual contracts require it.

Company Directors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will introduce legislation to enable him to disqualify, as a director or a shareholder, any director or owner of a private company found guilty of criminal malpractice.

Mr. Redwood: No. The Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 already provides wide powers allowing the courts to disqualify, where appropriate, a person as director of a company and from being concerned, whether directly or indirectly, in management of a company, whether private of public.

Meat Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will extend export sales guarantees to the British meat export trade with France.

Mr. Sainsbury: ECGD facilities for the export of British meat to France are already available, subject to ECGD's normal terms and conditions.

Recycled Paper

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the rate of progress in using recycled paper by the paper and board industry; what percentage of United Kingdom production is now manufactured from recycled materials; and what is the value of this in terms of import saving.

Mr. Redwood: Use of recycled fibre by United Kingdom mills has set new records in each of the past three years. It is estimated that waste paper accounted for 53 per cent. of the total fibre used in making British paper and board in 1989. The cost of importing an equivalent quantity of new pulp is estimated at around £600 million.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am reminding my officials of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Beer

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's monitoring of the developing structure of the beer industry consequent upon the implementation of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission proposals.

Mr. Redwood: The Director General of Fair Trading is monitoring compliance with the measures we have adopted following the MMC report on beer, and will be carrying out a review of their overall effectiveness after they have come fully into effect in November 1992. The director general will advise the Secretary of State if he thinks action is necessary to modify the orders before the review. In the meantime the Department maintains close contact with the Office of Fair Trading on issues that arise. The director general also has the responsibility of keeping himself informed about developments in this or any other sector which may give rise to merger situations qualifying for investigation by the MMC, and of making recommendations to the Secretary of State concerning any action that may be appropriate.

Iraq

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many trade missions to Iraq have been sponsored by his Department for each year since 1979.

Mr. Sainsbury: The number of trade missions that have visited Iraq for each year since 1979 which have been sponsored by the Department of Trade and Industry is as follows:

	Number
1979-80	1
1980-81	4
1981-82	9
1982-83	4
1983-84	5
1984-85	2
1985-86	2
1986-87	2

	Number
1987-88	2
1988-89	2
1989-90	4
1990-91	1

Defence Equipment

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what actions have been taken by his Department concerning the sale of defence and defence-related equipment to Chile and the enforcement of the end user certificates system; and what evidence he has of the sale to Chile of such equipment.

Mr. Sainsbury: Defence and defence-related equipment for sale to Chile or elsewhere which is subject to export control under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1989 requires an export licence, for which my Department is the issuing authority.

Each application for a licence is considered on its merits in consultation with other Departments taking into account the type of equipment, its end use and end user. It would not be appropriate to disclose the nature of the end use checks made.

Under the EG(C)O there are penalties, enforceable through the courts, for any person who makes a false statement or provides information known to be false to obtain an export licence.

Over the past 12 months, 96 licences have been issued for defence and defence-related equipment exports to Chile, though not all cases in which a licence was issued would have resulted in a sale.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the number of export licences that have been (a) granted and (b) refused for the sale of defence equipment and defence-related equipment for each year since 1979.

Mr. Sainsbury: Figures for the number of export licences (a) granted and (b) refused for the sale of defence equipment and defence-related equipment cannot be provided for the years 1979 to 1986. The figures for the years 1987 to the end of September 1990 are as follows:

Year	Number of export licences issued	Refused
1987	16,745	113
1988	16,005	97
1989	13,584	167
[1]1990	10,269	117

[1]January to September

Approximately one third of the licences issued are for small arms including personal firearms and shotguns.

Timeshare Industry

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to regulate the timeshare industry.

Mr. Redwood: We are currently considering recommendations for new legislation made by the Director General of Fair Trading, Sir Gordon Borrie, in his recent report on timeshare.

House of Fraser

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make it his policy to ask the House of Fraser to pay for the report by his Department's inspectors into that company.

Mr. Redwood: No. Provision for the recovery of the expenses of and incidental to Companies Act inspections is contained in section 439 of the Companies Act 1985, as amended by section 59 of the Companies Act 1989. These provisions are not applicable in the case of House of Fraser Holdings plc.

Reverse Charge Calls

Sir Alan Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will discuss with the chairman of British Telecom methods of blocking reverse charge calls from overseas so that they are not debited to the renter of private call boxes.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This is a matter for the Director General of Telecommunications to consider. My hon. Friend may wish to write to the director general with details of any problems of which he is aware that have arisen in this area.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what were the annual exports from the United Kingdom of chlorofluorocarbons for each year from 1979 to 1989; what is the figure for 1990 to the most recent practicable date; and what estimate he has made of the quantities which will be exported in 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Redwood: [pursuant to the reply by my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Mr Forth), 20 July 1990, c. 753-54]: Information is available only in respect of exports since 1 January 1989. Exports were 37,044 tonnes in 1989, valued at £32·278 million. Exports for the first five months of 1990 were 17,811 tonnes valued at £18·309 million. Further small quantities may have been exported in mixtures with other chemicals but these cannot be identified. My right hon. Friend has made no estimate of exports in 1991 or 1992.

CIVIL SERVICE

Agencies

Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what changes in accountability have taken place in the relationship between agencies and non-departmental public bodies in those instances where an agency has replaced the Department as the sponsoring body.

Mr. Mellor: The position on ministerial accountability to Parliament remains unchanged: Ministers remain accountable to Parliament for non-departmental public bodies which are sponsored by an agency.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will make a statement on the criteria used to decide whether a unit of central Government is suitable for agency status under the "next steps" programme.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made to the House by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 18 February 1988 at col. 1149. There are currently 34 Next Steps agencies, and the identification of further candidates among the executive functions of Government will continue.

Recruitment (Salaries)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list (a) those Departments offering above the adult minimum starting salaries to executive officer recruits, (b) the numbers involved in each Department, (c) the spine point that is offered in each case and (d) whether in (i) London and the south-east or (ii) elsewhere.

Mr. Mellor: The required information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

Mid-air Collision, Northumberland

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the report to be published on the inquiry into the mid-air collision between two Royal Air Force jets near Riding hill in Northumberland on 9 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The military aircraft accident summary was published on 9 October.

Military Lands Acts (Byelaws)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of any new byelaws that he makes under the Military Lands Acts 1892.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: My officials are aware of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Greenham and Crookham Commons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current situation regarding rights of common at Greenham and Crookham commons.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: An application has recently been made for a judicial review of the decision to extinguish the rights of common over our land at Greenham and Crookham commons. In the circumstances, we do not intend to proceed with the extinguishment process until the outcome of this application, and any subsequent judicial review, is known.

Middle East

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the projected costs of the deployment of troops in the middle east, arising out of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and associated costs (a) to the present time and (b) to the end of the financial year, assuming that full-scale war has not taken place or an early resolution of the dispute has been reached; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The full costs to date of the operation in the middle east, arising out of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, including commitments for equipment purchases, is estimated to be £300 million. On the assumption that the operation continues at the present level, without hostilities, the full cost to the end of the financial year is expected to exceed £600 million.

Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements he has made to inform British service men serving in the current operations in the Gulf of the circumstances in which they will be exempt from paying poll tax.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information about the community charge has already been made known to all members of the armed forces and covers the circumstances under which they may apply for deregistration. Individuals should therefore, have sufficient information to enable them to make appropriate arrangements, although they can seek advice on specific points from administration officers at the main locations and on board ships. The guidance will, however, be repeated in financial instructions being produced for Army units and personnel who may deploy in future.

Morocco

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military information was made available to Prince Mohammed when he visited Britain as a guest of the Government in June.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A range of matters of mutual defence interest were discussed during the visit by Crown Prince Mohammed of Morocco to the United Kingdom in June this year.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give any details of British Government military trade with Morocco including present uncompleted contracts.

Mr. Alan Clark: It has been the policy of this and previous Administrations not to comment on matters of this kind.

North Sea (Submarines)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what statements have been made by officers of his Department about submarine activity in the North sea on 4 October at the time of an incident involving the fishing vessel Moray Adventurer.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Statements were made both to Her Majesty's Coastguard and to the media that no Royal Navy or NATO submarine was operating in the vicinity of the Moray Adventurer at the time of the incident.

South-east Asia

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to which Governments and forces in south-east Asia military training assistance has been supplied by Her Majesty's Government over the past 12 months.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In the 12 months to 1 October 1990, the following countries in south-east Asia have received assistance in the form of military training courses in the United Kingdom or training from British service personnel overseas:

Brunei
Indonesia
Malaysia
Philippines
Singapore
Thailand

Details about training provided are generally confidential between Her Majesty's Government and the Government concerned.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Schools

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the estimated cost per pupil for each of the grammar schools in each education and library board's area for the last five years;

(2) what is the average cost per pupil in each of the maintained schools in each of the education and library board areas in Northern Ireland over the last five years;

(3) what is the annual cost per pupil in each of the secondary schools in each education and library board's area over the last five years in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many grade 2 pupils were denied grammar schools places in each of the education and library board areas in Northern Ireland in 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information in the form requested is not readily available. In this year's transfer procedure tests 2,789 pupils were awarded grade 2 of whom 2,008 have been admitted to grammar schools. This includes pupils awarded places as a result of directions given by appeal tribunals. Not all pupils with a grade 2 applied for admission to grammar schools.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many grade 3 and 4 pupils, including preparatory department pupils, were accepted into grammar schools in each of the education and library board areas in 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

	Grade 3	Grade 4
Belfast	109	34
Western	17	1
North-Eastern	152	4
South-Eastern	28	3
Southern	105	43

These figures include pupils who were awarded places as a result of directions given by appeal tribunals.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the average cost per pupil in each of the voluntary grammar schools in each education and library board's area in Northern Ireland for each of the last five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

Strangford Lough

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what way the residents around and users of Strangford Lough are involved in its management; what proposals he has to increase local participation in the management of the lough; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The management of the lands around Strangford Lough is in the hands of individual owners and occupiers. Where the lands comprise or contain foreshore designated as Strangford Lough area of special scientific interest co-operation between the owners and occupiers and the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland is required. The users of the lough can make their views on or proposals for the management of the lough known to the relevant Government Department (Department of the Environment or Department of Agriculture) at any time, either individually or through one of the bodies which represent various interests.

The Council for Nature Conservation and the Countryside will advise the Department of the Environment regarding management structures.

The Department will consult widely during the formulation stage of management plans for Strangford Lough in the context of the proposed marine nature reserve.

Roads

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when road traffic conditions on the main Belfast/Ballygowan road in the vicinity of Ryan Park in the borough of Castlereagh were last examined; and what proposals he has to improve road safety at this location.

Mr. Needham: Traffic conditions were last examined in June this year.

It is planned to provide a double line along the centre of the road to deter excess speed and overtaking and to enhance road safety.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for road improvement schemes in the next 12 months in the locality of Donaghadee and district.

Mr. Needham: The only road improvement scheme planned in the next 12 months is a sight-line improvement at the junction of the Windmill road and Killaughy road, Donaghadee.

Drainage Costs

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made with regard to the recovery of costs from developers of off-site drainage work where building developments have taken place.

Mr. Needham: The Planning and Building Regulations (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 1990, which came into operation on 24 September 1990 contains, inter alia, provision for the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland to enter into agreements with developers to recoup the cost of off-site infrastructure improvement works.

The Department is currently considering with the Department of Agriculture how best to administer these agreements in relation to off-site drainage works.

European Community

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the whole of Northern Ireland will qualify under the new European Community Interreg initiative.

Mr. Cope: The whole of Northern Ireland will qualify, apart from the city of Belfast.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what way he has brought to the attention of the public in Northern Ireland the eligible measures under the European Community Interreg initiative; what is the closing date for the submission of proposals to the Government; what is the closing date for submission of proposals to the European Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: Officials from the Department of Finance and Personnel wrote to a large number of local bodies and organisations in Northern Ireland in August and September advising them about the Interreg initiative enclosing a set of guidelines on the Initiative issued by the Commission. Recipients were asked to forward preliminary proposals for consideration. A number of presentations, to which local bodies and organisations were invited, are taking place during this month to explain the initiative further and answer any queries. In addition, a conference, organised jointly by the Belfast and Dublin European Commission Offices, will be held in November at which interested parties, north and south of the border, can obtain further information and put forward their ideas.

The Government wrote to ask local bodies and organisations in September to put forward their preliminary ideas by the middle of this month in order that work can proceed in preparing a Northern Ireland/Republic of Ireland submission detailing the aims, objectives and measures of a joint programme for submission to the European Commission by the due date. That date is at the end of February 1991—six months from the date of publication of the European Commission guidelines on the initiative. However, it should be noted, that provided projects fall within the scope of the measures under the programme they can be submitted and considered at any time during its lifetime, that is, to the end of 1993.

Louis Robinson

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will arrange for a judicial inquiry into the events prior to and at the time of the IRA ambush and murder of Louis Robinson of the Royal Ulster Constabulary on the border with the Republic of Ireland on 15 and 16 September; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: No. The murder of Detective Constable Louis Robinson is already the subject of a full RUC investigation.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, which Minister will now carry out the duties allocated to the hon. Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley) in the last Cabinet Office document intituled, "A List of Ministerial Responsibilities."

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply of 26 July 1990, Official Report, col 570]: After further consideration, there have been some minor adjustments to the allocation of responsibilities given in my answer of 26 July.

The main differences are that my hon. Friend the Member for Wiltshire, North (Mr. Needham) will now take responsibility for water and transport while my hon. Friend the Member for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney) will take over responsibility for works service and the public record office. I will retain responsibility for decisions relating to certain planning applications.

Industrial Development Board

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many jobs were created by the Industrial Development Board in each district council area in Northern Ireland in each of the years from 1 April 1985 to 31 March 1990.

Mr. Needham: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of the companies assisted by the Industrial Development Board who located factories in each of the district council areas in Northern Ireland from 1 April 1985 to 31 March 1990.

Mr. Needham: The following table shows, by district council area, those new inward investment projects for which letters of offer were accepted in the period from 1 April 1985 to 31 March 1990:

SCOTLAND

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary for Scotland what was the incidence of calling in of fishing vessels for (a) June 1989 and (b) June in the current year, by length band.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett) on 24 July.

Capital Expenditure

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will published the capital expenditure in Scotland on (a) vehicles, ships and aircraft, (b) plants and machinery, (c) private dwellings, (d) public dwellings and (e) other new buildings and works for the year 1974 and for every year since 1979, at 1985 prices.

Mr. Lang: The table gives the total gross domestic fixed capital formation GDFCF in Scotland in current prices for selected industries and dwellings for each of the years for which the information is requested. Estimates for other industries are not available. Estimates of GDFCF in private and public dwellings are given, but further analysis by asset type could be provided only at disproportionate cost. There are no separate Scottish deflators from which to construct constant price estimates.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage collection rate for each local authority for the poll tax (a) in 1989 and (b) in 1990; what was the shortfall in revenue in 1989 in each case; and by how much poll tax rates would have to be increased to compensate for the loss of revenue from non-payment.

Mr. Lang: The collection of community charges is the responsibility of individual local authorities and the information requested is not held centrally. I understand that in respect of 1989-90 most levying authorities now expect to collect 90 per cent. or more of the total billed revenue from the community charge, which is over 95 per cent. of their budget estimates. Final collection figures will not be known until local authorities have completed their recovery procedures, which may not be for some time. I understand also that collection for 1990-91 is proceeding generally at a similar rate to last year. It is not possible to estimate the effect of community charge non-payment upon future community charge levels. Any shortfall on budgeted revenue is unlikely to be more than 1 per cent. of local authorities' overall income, and may be less. We have made it clear that local authorities faced with such a shortfall should be able to adjust their expenditure, for example by making efficiency savings, without materially affecting services and that the shortfall should not be seen as a pretext for increasing charges.

Drift Nets

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many English fishing vessels have been prosecuted for carrying drift nets in Scottish waters.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There have been no prosecutions of English vessels for carriage of drift nets in any of the past four years.

Output

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the annual index of (a) gross domestic product (output) and (b) manufacturing output for Scotland in each year from 1970 to the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: The table gives the latest figures for gross domestic product (output) and manufacturing output. These figures are at constant prices and indexed to 1985 = 100.

Fishery Enforcement Officers

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many enforcement officers from his Department are permanently stationed in each Scottish fishing port; and where none are resident, how many landing days per annum are supervised by his officials.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland has 59 permanent staff based at 20 coastal offices. The normal deployment of these staff is shown in the table.

No records are maintained of the frequency of inspections at other ports, but they are visited regularly having regard to the level of fishing activity in each area.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what checks are made by his officials to see that fish listed as caught in a specified area were actually caught there.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Log books are examined each time a fishing vessel lands a catch or is boarded at sea. Confirmation of the reported areas of fishing activity is sought by comparing the log book entries with surveillance data provided by fishery protection vessels and aircraft.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the gross domestic fixed capital formation for manufacturing industry in Scotland in real terms in each year since 1970.

Mr. Rifkind: The information is not available in the form requested. The table gives the gross domestic fixed capital formation at current prices from 1971 to 1987.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the annual index of gross domestic capital formation at factor cost in manufacturing industry in Scotland in each year from 1970 to the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: Information in the form requested is not available.

Fish Quotas

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of prosecutions for fish caught over quota by Scottish fishing boats in (a) 1988, (b) 1989 and (c) 1990 to date.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The number of successful prosecutions for breach of quotas by Scottish vessels is set out in the table.

1988—three cases
1989—Nil
1990—Nil to date; four cases are pending.

A1

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library all the data on which he bases his figures and projections for traffic flows on the A1 road.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The projections for future traffic on the A1 formed part of the work carried out by the consultants commissioned to undertake the Scottish Development Department's major "Routes South of Edinburgh" trunk road study. It is not our practice to place copies of detailed technical reports on road studies in the Library. I did however lodge copies of the consultation document in the Library, together with a series of short technical papers which provide further details on specific aspects of the study.

Hospital Casualty Services, East Lothian

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the provision of hospital casualty services in East Lothian following his announcement on 6 September about the Lothian health board's proposal to close the unit at Roodlands hospital in Haddington.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Lothian health board is currently developing, in consultation with general practitioners in Haddington and relevant nursing staff, the proposals for a minor casualty service at Roodlands hospital.

College Students

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the reduction in the numbers of students attending colleges of education in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The numbers of full-time students attending colleges of education in Scotland have risen from 4,300 in 1984-85 to 5,150 in 1989-90, a rise of 20 per cent. Student rolls in the colleges are expected to increase further in the years ahead as the demand for newly trained teachers expands.

University Students

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the reduction in the numbers of Scottish students gaining entry to Scottish universities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on the numbers of Scottish students entering Scottish universities was published by the Scottish Education Department in its statistical bulletin "University Students (No 10/H1/1990)" which is available in the Library. I am pleased to say that the numbers of Scottish undergraduates in full-time higher education rose from 53,400 in 1980-81 to 60,300 in 1988-89, a rise of 13 per cent.

Health Visiting Diploma

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many National Health Service staff in Scotland have been seconded to take the one-year diploma in health visiting during the periods (a) 1989 to 1990 and (b) 1990 to 1991.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The number of student health visitors in Scotland was 85 at 31 March 1989 and 109 at 31 March 1990, the latest date for which information is available centrally.

RECHAR Programme

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how European Community grant aid under the RECHAR programme is being administered and distributed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Proposals for RECHAR programmes in Eastern and Western Scotland were submitted by the Government to the European Commission on 27 July. Its decision is awaited.

Community Care

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department has considered research conducted by the Scottish Council of Voluntary Organisations into the effects of recent legislation on availability of funding for voluntary organisations involved in community care; and if he will consider a review of funding provision and collaborative arrangements.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend will reach conclusions on the report, which was funded by the Scottish Office, in the light of discussions which are due to be held shortly between officials and the Scottish Council for Voluntary Organisations. The provision of grant assistance to voluntary organisations in the social work field is reviewed annually. The funding of services in the community care field in 1991-92 will receive careful consideration in this context.

Asthma

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department will take steps to promote and assist the national asthma survey, organised by Action Asthma; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I understand that the survey was launched on 3 September with the aim of assessing the extent to which people in the United Kingdom are affected by asthma, thus enabling improvements in asthma management to be considered. The Scottish Home and Health Department is obtaining from Action Asthma information about its work.

Junior Doctors (Working Hours)

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications for variation orders on working hours per week of junior doctors have been made by Greater Glasgow health board during 1990; and, of these, how many (a) have been refused and (b) are currently under consideration.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many variation orders on working hours per week of junior doctors have been issued during 1990; and how many are currently in force, for each health board area in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: One variation order has been issued in 1990 to permit a junior doctor to be regularly rostered for duty in excess of the limit permitted under the hospital, medical and dental staff terms and conditions of service.

Health Visitors

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to ensure that no newly qualified health visitor in Scotland is unable to find a job; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The responsibility for reviewing manpower requirements lies with health boards and it is for each health board to determine the number of students to be trained in accordance with identified manpower needs. While most newly qualified health visitors should find employment on completion of their training, it is impossible to guarantee the employment of all such health visitors and students are made aware of this when they enrol.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many vacancies for health visitors currently exist in each health board area in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not held centrally.

Community Charge

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department has considered research conducted by the Scottish Foundation for Economic Research for Strathclyde regional council into the effects of the community charge upon the poor; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has noted the findings of this research.

Old People's Homes

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to implement in Scotland arrangements under the Registered Houses Act 1984 to ensure that local authorities may satisfy themselves that a person applying for registration to run a small home for old people is a fit person and that they may visit any such home as necessary.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The 1984 Act provisions do not apply in Scotland. Local authorities' statutory responsibilities for the registration and inspection of residential establishments provided under the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 apply as matters stand to all homes irrespective of size.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail the nature and locations of therapeutic services currently available within the National Health Service in Scotland for sufferers from multiple sclerosis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not held centrally.

WALES

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: My officials are aware of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of the inward investment projects secured for Wales during 1988 and 1989.

Mr. David Hunt: In 1988, Wales secured 97 inward investment projects and in 1989, 100 projects were secured. A list of the companies concerned, except where they have requested confidentiality, has been placed in the Library of the House.

Teaching Posts

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list showing the latest figures for (a) the total number of applications, (b) the total number of teaching posts and (c) the ratio of applications to teaching posts at secondary school level in Wales; and if he will include a breakdown for each county and for each subject taught.

Sir Wyn Roberts: No information is available centrally on the number of teaching posts by subject. This, together with applications for appointment, is a matter for local education authorities.

General information about the numbers of subject teachers is available from the secondary school staffing survey, which was published in July, and is in the Library of the House.

Water and Sewerage (Security Measures)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if, for each water and sewerage undertaker, he will list the dates on which the undertakers submitted their plans pursuant to paragraph 2(2) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989;

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of the plans submitted to him by each water and sewerage undertaker pursuant to paragraph 2(2) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989;

(3) if for each water and sewerage undertaker, he will state which plans he has approved with modification pursuant to paragraph 2(2) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989;

(4) if, for each water and sewerage undertaker, he will state the form in which he has prescribed the reports shall be submitted pursuant to paragraph 2(2) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989;

(5) if, for each water and sewerage undertaker, he will state which plans he has approved without modifications pursuant to paragraph 2(2) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989.

Mr. Grist: The former Welsh water authority prepared and submitted plans progressively, under letters of direction issued in 1983 and 1986. Undertakers are currently reviewing these plans, following the 1989 direction. In addition, plans for expenditure each year on the provision or purchase of facilities and equipment are submitted to the Department for approval, with modifications if necessary. It is neither in the interests of national security nor commercial confidentiality to provide the further information requested.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if, for each water and sewerage undertaker, he will list the number of employees he has required to be made available (a) as regional co-ordinators and (b) in such other capacity as he has required and in what capacity, pursuant to paragraph 5(2) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage undertakers) Direction 1989.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has appointed a chief regional water co-ordinator, a deputy chief regional water co-ordinator and regional water co-ordinators. Seven employees have been made available by Dwr Cymru Cyfyngedig to fulfil these roles.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if, for each water and sewerage undertaker, he will give the losses which it has sustained by reason of compliance with the direction, pursuant to paragraph 6(2) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989;

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of the reports submitted to him on or before 1 April 1990 pursuant to paragraph 6(1) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989;

(3) if, for each water and sewerage undertaker, he will state the form in which he has prescribed the reports shall be submitted pursuant to paragraph 6(2) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989;

(4) if, for each water and sewerage undertaker, he will list the dates on which the undertakers reported to him pursuant to paragraph 6(1) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989.

Mr. Grist: It is not in the interest of national security to provide details. Information on the losses sustained by each undertaker in complying with the direction is subject to the normal rules of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) whether, having regard to the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1983 and section 3 of "Emergency Planning Guidance to Local Authorities", the duty to consult other water and sewerage undertakers pursuant to paragraph 5(1) of the Security Measures (Water Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989 is to be extended to local authorities with civil defence functions under regulation 4 of the 1983 regulations; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if, for each water and sewerage undertaker, he will state the extent to which he has required their plans, operations, facilities and services to be complementary and co-ordinated pursuant to paragraph 5(1) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989;

(3) whether, having regard to the Civil Defence (Fire Services) (Water) Regulations 1956, the duty to consult other water and sewerage undertakers pursuant to paragraph 5(1) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989 is to be extended to fire authorities; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what guidance, procedures and requirements have been notified to the water sewerage undertakers by him pursuant to paragraph 2(1)(b) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989; and if he will place copies in the Library;

(5) what general policy in respect of civil defence he has notified to the water and sewerage undertakers pursuant to paragraph 2(1)(a) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment on 23 July 1990.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if, for each water and sewerage undertaker, he will list the land he has specified pursuant to paragraph 3(1) of the Security Measures (Water and Sewerage Undertakers) Direction 1989.

Mr. Grist: It would not be in the interests of national security to give the information requested.

Milford Haven (Fishing)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial support has been given for fish processing in Milford Haven since 1979.

Mr. David Hunt: Since 1979 regional selective assistance of £40,000 has been provided for two fish processing projects in Milford Haven.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial support has been given to individual trawler companies and combines operating from Milford Haven since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Since 1979, grants totalling £489,000 have been provided by the Welsh Office and the European Commission for six commercial fishing projects in Milford Haven. In addition the Sea Fish Industry Authority, acting on behalf of the Government, provides grants and loans for the construction of new fishing vessels and improvements to existing vessels. For Wales as a whole, the authority has since 1979 provided £1,653,000 in grants and loans for 251 projects.

I place a great deal of importance on the need to sustain and develop a successful sea fishing industry in Wales, and am pleased that practical support is being provided to commercial fishermen.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about the fishing industry in Milford Haven since June 1987.

Mr. David Hunt: During the period in question, Welsh Office Ministers and officials have received numerous representations on a wide range of issues relating to the fishing industry in Milford Haven. My hon. Friend did bring in to see me on 20 September senior representatives of the industry and I am carefully considering the arguments he and they put forward.

Laura Ashley

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit the Leeswood, Clwyd, Laura Ashley factory now proposed for closure.

Mr. David Hunt: I have no present plans to do so.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the Clwyd, Delyn and Alyn and Deeside councils to discuss the job losses associated with the Laura Ashley company.

Mr. David Hunt: I very much regret the job losses recently announced by Laura Ashley Holdings Ltd. I, my officials, the WDA and DBRW are in close touch with the company and are exploring what might be done to off-set the job losses. The local authorities involved will have a part to play and I will not hesitate to contact them if necessary.

Gwynedd Health Services

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the £8 million to be provided to the Gwynedd health authority to transform the provision of health services in the county will be wholly or partly by way of loan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: On the basis of the Gwynedd health authority's plan to rationalise health services within the district, as outlined in its pathfinder business plan, my right hon. Friend has offered, in principle, a loan of up to £8 million toward the capital cost of the implementation of this strategy. As currently envisaged, the loan would amount to £3.5 million in 1991-92 and £4.5 million in 1992-93; and, under existing arrangements, the expectation would be for this finance to be repaid subsequently from revenue savings. However, as a result of the reforms arising from the National Health Service and Community Care Act, resource allocation arrangements are currently under review. Authorities were recently consulted on proposed changes which would re-establish a central funding mechanism for capital schemes of strategic importance as from 1 April 1992. If these proposals are implemented, it is likely that the funding of major schemes in progress at that time—which would, of course, include those which are in prospect in Gwynedd—will be subsumed within transitional arrangements that accord with the new allocation mechanisms. In such circumstances, the strategic capital brokerage made available to Gwynedd to enable the authority to proceed with these schemes would cease to be regarded as a loan and would instead be redefined as central funding of those schemes under the transitional arrangements. My right hon. Friend intends to make an announcement on new resource allocation arrangements and transitional arrangements to apply from 1 April 1991 in January when consultations on new revenue allocation mechanisms have also been completed.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Diesel Duty

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the special rate of duty charged on diesel used by agriculture; what is the purpose of this provision; and what is the differential between this rate and that for diesel used by industry.

Mr. Ryder: The special rate of duty charged on diesel —gas oil—used by agriculture is 1.18p per litre. Its purpose is to raise revenue but at a rate significantly lower than that chargeable on diesel—gas oil—used as road fuel. Both industry and agriculture pay duty at the rebated rate; the full rate of 19.02p per litre is paid only on fuel used in road vehicles.

European Monetary System

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his assessment as to whether the conditions for entry into the exchange rate mechanism of the EMS have been met; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The conditions have now been substantially met, and accordingly the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced the Government's decision to join the exchange rate mechanism of the EMS on 5 October.

Money Supply

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the increase in the money supply since 1 January 1988; and how much of the total is accounted for by the funding of the trade deficit.

Mr. Maples: There is no simple connection between the money supply and the trade deficit. Figures for the monetary aggregates are published in table 11.1 of "Financial Statistics". Information on the trade balance is published in table 27 of "Economic Trends".

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many subject access requests under the terms of the Data Protection Act his Department has received; what was his estimate of the number of requests that would be received; what consideration he is giving to the subject access fee charged by his Department as a result; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: No subject access requests have been received by the Treasury since the Act came into effect. Initial estimates of likely volume, based on discussions with the Data Protection Registrar and examination of the experience of other European countries, were that the number would probably be low. Departments agreed that civil servants would not be charged for reasonable access to their records, but that non civil-servants—with legitimate access—would be charged the guideline £10. That is still the Treasury view.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: I am reminding my officials of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has discussed his concerns about the direct marketing exploits of financial institutions that promote the uptake of credit with the Data Protection Registrar; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: No.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the extent to which the deterioration in the trade balance since 1975 is due to lack of productive capacity in British industry; and if he will name the sectors in which British suppliers have been unable to meet demand for this reason.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The rise in the United Kingdom trade deficit in 1988 and 1989 reflected very strong growth of domestic demand from both companies and the personal sector, which outstripped industry's capacity to meet it. Strong growth in investment has begun to produce additional capacity which will enable British industry to meet more of the demands made on it. Industry has already exploited export opportunities. In 1989, exports of manufactures, excluding erratics, increased by 10½ per cent., the fastest growth rate since 1973. Manufactured exports, excluding erratics, in the current year to date are 10¾ per cent. higher than in the corresponding period last year.

CBI surveys suggest that an historically high proportion of firms across all sectors experienced capacity constraints during 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the annual index of (a) total industrial production and construction and (b) manufacturing industry for the United Kingdom in each year from 1970 to the most recent year for which figures are available;

(2) what was the annual index of (a) gross domestic product (output) and (b) manufacturing output for the United Kingdom in each year from 1970 to the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Norman Lamont: For the answers to these questions I refer the hon. Member to table 1.5 of "United Kingdom National Accounts", 1990 edition, otherwise known as the CSO Blue Book and to the Scottish Office news release 0801 of 15 May 1990. The former gives separate annual output index numbers for the years 1968 to 1989, for each of construction, manufacturing, and total production as well as the output based gross domestic product index. The latter includes the available figures for an index of construction and production for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has made to Chancellor Kohl concerning the adverse effect on other countries of the German surplus on visible trade; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the amount of that surplus in terms of dollars for (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the United States of America and (c) Japan in 1979, 1985, 1989 and the current year to date.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor has made no such representations. The information for 1989 and the current year is available in recent editions of "IMF Directions of Trade Statistics". Figures for 1985 and 1979 are available in the "IMF Direction of Trade Statistics Yearbook" for 1989 and 1986 respectively.

Mortgages

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are taken to assess the number of cases on which interest relief is being given on mortgages taken out for purposes other than home purchase.

Mr. Maude: For loans taken out from 6 April, 1988, mortgage interest relief is given only where the loan is applied to the purchase of a person's sole or main residence or for the purchase of life annuities by people aged 65 or over.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what representations he has received calling for abolition of mortgage interest tax relief.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer receives a variety of representations about mortgage interest relief, ranging from extension to abolition.

Import Levies

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the import levy imposed at the last convenient date on imports from (a) African, Caribbean and Pacific countries and (b) other countries of (i) paddy rice round grain, (ii) paddy rice long grain, (iii) husked rice round grain, (iv) husked rice long grain, (v) semi-milled round grain, (vi) semi-milled long grain, (vii) wholly-milled rice round grain, (viii) wholly-milled rice long grain and (ix) broken rice.

Mr. Ryder: The import levy per tonne on rice at 1 October 1990 falling within the stated descriptions was:

	States associated with the Community[1] £	Other Countries £
Paddy rice round grain (CN Code 100610 92 0 00)	121·8837	249·5501
Paddy rice long grain (CN Code 100610 96 0 90)	123·6322	253·0389
Husked rice round grain (CN Code 100620 92 0 00)	153·0825	311·9396
Husked rice long grain (CN Code 100620 96 0 90)	155·2560	316·2946
Semi-milled round grain (CN Code 100630 42 0 00)	189·8393	398·8069
Semi-milled long grain (CN Code 100630 48 0 90)	230·0609	479·1939
Wholly-milled round grain (CN Code 100630 92 0 00)	202·4552	424·7284
Wholly-milled long grain (CN Code 100630 96 0 90)	246·9435	513·6970
Broken rice (CN Code 100640 00 0 00)	73·8906	152·6000

[1] African, Caribbean and Pacific Countries; and Overseas Countries and Territories of member States associated with the Community.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the present import levy on duty on cheese from Canada.

Mr. Ryder: The present import levy, effective from 16 September 1990, on cheese from Canada (CN Code 040690 21 0 10) is £178·8483 per 100 kg. Consignments accompanied by a valid IMA 1 certificate, issued by exporting countries having special agreements with the European Community may be admitted at a reduced rate of £9·1665. No duty is payable in either case.

Manufacturing Exports

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the growth of manufacturing exports since 1983.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Manufacturing exports have grown on average by 7·1 per cent. a year since 1983 and in 1989 by 10·5 per cent.—the fastest growth in any year since 1973. Supply side reforms have transformed industry's ability to compete on world markets, and allowed manufacturers to maintain their share of world trade after decades of decline.

Exchange Rates

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the percentage increases to date in the trade-weighted real exchange for the £ sterling at current nominal rates of exchange, against the Deutschmark, dollar and yen since (a) the fourth quarter of 1976 and (b) the first quarter of 1987, measured in terms of relative export prices for manufacturers, taking into account: (i) the increase in the nominal rate of exchange and (ii) the difference in the rate of inflation since the fourth quarter of 1989, as shown in table F8 of the monthly "Review of External Trade Statistics"; and if he will add a figure for the exchange rate mechanism countries combined in so far as these are available.

Mr. Maples: Table F8 of the monthly "Review of External Trade Statistics" is compiled using information from the IMF, and will be updated in due course.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the percentage increases in the trade-weighted real exchange for sterling at current nominal rates of exchange compared to the D-mark, dollar and yen between the fourth quarter of 1976 and the first quarter of 1990 measured in terms of relative export prices for manufacturers and the increase since then in the nominal rates of exchange; what effect the increase to the first quarter of 1990 had on the balance of trade in manufacturers; and what is his estimate of the effect which the increase since the first quarter will have on that balance in the next 12 months.

Mr. Maples: Figures for nominal and real exchange rates are available in "IMF International Financial Statistics". Recent movements in nominal and real exchange rates will be among the many factors taken into account in the revised forecast for visible trade to be published in the "Autumn Statement".

Public Expenditure

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state in percentage terms the increase or decrease in expenditure since 1979 of each of the 17 programmes of public expenditure.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information requested can be derived from table 21.2.10—General Government expenditure by function, 1978-79 to 1989-90—in chapter 21 of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93", Cm. 1021.

Inflation

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the current inflation rates in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other Group of Seven countries.

Mr. Maples: Excluding mortgage interest payments and community charge, UK inflation was 8·3 per cent. in September 1990. The latest, more comparable inflation rate for other G7 countries was 3·4 per cent. in August.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the rate of inflation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maples: The all-times RPI inflation rate was 10·9 per cent. in September. Underlying inflation, as measured by the RPI, excluding mortgage interest payments and the community charge, was 8·3 per cent.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chanbcellor of the Exchequer what is the underlying rate of inflation.

Mr. Maples: There are a number of ways of estimating the underlying rate of inflation. As measured by the RPI, excluding mortgage interest payments and the community charge, it was 8·3 per cent. in September.

Taxpayers' Charter

Mr. Stern: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a charter for taxpayers in relation to their rights under investigation by either the Inland Revenue or Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Mr. Maude: The Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise jointly published a taxpayer's charter in July 1986. It sets out the principles and standards of service which both departments aim to achieve in handling taxpayers' affairs; and what people can do if they wish to appeal or complain.

In addition, a number of leaflets are published for people involved in investigations:

IR71 PAYE: Inspection of Employers' and Contractors Records.
IR72 Inland Revenue Investigations: The examination of business accounts; and IR73 Inland Revenue Investigations: How settlements are negotiated.
Visits by VAT officers.

Copies of the taxpayer's charter and of the leaflets have been placed in the Library of the House.

Criminal investigations carried out by both departments are conducted under the codes of practice of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984.

Interest Rates

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current level of interest rates.

Mr. Maples: Bank base rates are 14 per cent.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received in relation to the impact of interest rates on Welsh economic performance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maples: My right hon. Friend has received a number of such representations.

Environmental Improvement

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for using the taxation system to improve the environment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The White Paper on the environment set out the Government's view that market-based instruments, such as tax measures, are often an effective way of achieving environmental goals. But the Government must consider a whole range of factors in determining the right response to environmental problems.

Bank of England

Mr. Watson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss Britain's economic performance.

Mr. Maples: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer meets the Governor of the Bank of England from time to time to discuss a variety of matters.

Child Tax Allowance

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the benefits which would be given to families on low incomes or on income support by a child tax allowance.

Mr. Maude: Child tax allowances would not benefit families who do not pay tax and some families with relatively small taxable incomes would only be able to take partial advantage of them. This is so whether or not a family is on income support.

Oil

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of (a) the current yield in tax on indigenous oil production of an increase of one dollar per barrel and (b) the increase in cost to the United Kingdom economy as a result of that increase.

Mr. Maples: It is estimated that the extra North sea tax receipts from a sustained increase in the oil price of 1 dollar per barrel would yield about £0·2 billion in a full year assuming no change in the exchange rate or in company spending in the North sea. A rise in the price of oil can be expected to lead to somewhat higher inflation and slower growth, in the short term. However, sound fiscal and monetary policies should help guard against any sustained adverse effect on inflation or economic growth.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the yield from a tax of 1p per litre on all oil fuels and of an additional 20p on a gallon of (a) petrol and (b) diesel on top of the present price.

Mr. Ryder: The yield from a tax change on road fuels can be calculated from the tax revenue ready reckoner table published in chapter 4 of the "Autumn Statement".

Civil Service Pensions

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the non-payment of civil service widows' pensions to the widows of post-retirement marriages with civil servants who retired before 6 April 1978.

Mr Ryder: A number of representations have been received about the arrangements made by the civil service pension scheme for the payment of pensions to the widows of post-retirement marriages. These seek an extension of those arrangements to include those widows of post-retirement marriages whose husbands retired before 6 April 1978. The Government have no plans to extend the present arrangements.

Ronson Group

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Inland Revenue will investigate the tax affairs of the Ronson group of companies.

Mr. Maude: Such information is confidential.

Manufacturing

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the gross domestic fixed capital formation for manufacturing industry in the United Kingdom in real terms in each year since 1970.

Mr. Norman Lamont: This information may be obtained from the CSO database, which is accessible through the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the annual index of gross domestic capital formation at factor cost in manufacturing industry in the United Kingdom in each year from 1970 to the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Information in the form requested is not available.

Mr. Austin Michell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the increase in the volume of exports of manufactured goods since 1985 in terms of 1990 prices.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Information relating to volumes of manufactured goods is only calculated at 1985 prices. This can be found in table A10 of the monthly "Review of External Trade Statistics" which is available in the Library of the House, or on the Central Statistical Office database which may be accessed through the Library.

Middle East (Expenditure)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer from which budget headings the expenditure now being undertaken in the middle east, arising out of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, is to be drawn; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Most of the present expenditure in the middle east arising from Iraq's invasion of Kuwait falls to the defence budget. Assistance to refugees displaced by the invasion is being drawn from the aid budget.

New Coins

Mr. Speller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new coins he intends to approve before December 1992; and what estimate he has of the cost involved in adapting, replacing or scrapping coin-operated machines.

Mr. Maples: The Royal Mint has recently consulted the vending industry about proposals to issue United Kingdom 1p and 2p coins in copper-plated steel rather than bronze, as at present, because the cost of producing the coins now exceeds their face value.

After careful consideration of the industry's response, my right hon. Friend has decided that copper-plated coins should be introduced from September 1992. The plated 1p and 2p coins will have the same weight, diameter and design as the existing coins and will circulate alongside them. I am placing an assessment of the cost to the industry in the library.

Following the consultation exercise carried out by the Royal Mint in 1987, the then Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that a smaller 10p coin would be introduced in 1992. The Chancellor has decided that this coin should also be introduced in September 1992, at the same time as the copper plated 1p and 2p coins, to minimise the cost to the vending industry.

NHS Contracts (VAT)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what refunds of value added tax on national health service contracts have been made to health boards in Scotland since 16 October 1989; where refunds of value added tax are made; and what arrangements there are for that portion of such value added tax which requires to be paid to the European Community.

Mr. Ryder: A total of £24.3 million VAT has been refunded in respect of Scottish health boards' contracts since 16 October 1989. This sum includes refunds in respect of contracts where the special provisions of section 27(2A) of the VAT Act 1983 apply. Such refunds are included in the calculations necessary to establish our "own resources" payments to the European Community.

European Community

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement concerning Councils of Finance Ministers of the European Communities, both formal and informal, he has attended since 1 September.

Mr. Major: Members of the Economic and Finance Council met informally on 7 and 8 September in Rome and formally in Luxembourg on 8 October. On both occasions I represented the United Kingdom with the assistance of the Financial Secretary at the October meeting.

The September meeting concentrated on a discussion of economic and monetary union during which I gave a full explanation of the British proposals for a gradual evolutionary approach through the establishment of a common currency, known as the "hard ecu", and a European monetary fund. A majority of member states shared our view that much greater economic convergence in the Community was a necessary condition for further monetary integration, and that it was therefore undesirable to set a premature date for moving beyond stage one of EMU. I stressed the importance of ensuring that all member states could move forward together. I explained that our proposals would allow for that while providing a strong anti-inflationary discipline and giving people and businesses the opportunity to choose which currency they wished to use. It was agreed that there was a need for further analysis of our proposals both before and during the forthcoming intergovernmental conference.

The consequences of the Gulf crisis were also discussed and the Commission put forward proposals for aid to those front-line states which were suffering as a result of the crisis. No decision was reached. It was agreed, however, that the resulting rise in oil prices should not be accommodated either by relaxing monetary or budgetary policies and that the increase in oil costs should not lead to higher wage settlements or product prices.

At the October meeting, the entry of the United Kingdom into the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system was widely welcomed. Economic and monetary union was again discussed both during the Council and at an inter-institutional meeting beforehand with the European Parliament. There was a growing consensus that more economic convergence was indeed needed before the Community moved beyond stage one and that objective criteria to determine the timing of such a move should be considered. The presidency will be reporting on progress with preparatory work on EMU to the European Council on 27 and 28 October. I expect discussions in ECOFIN and the Monetary Committee to continue.

There was a brief discussion of the Commission's proposals for VAT and excise systems after 1992 and for raising travellers' allowances on duty-paid goods in preparation for the single market. The consequences for the financial perspectives of German unification and the Gulf crisis were also considered. The money laundering directive was discussed. The majority of member states shared our concerns that the present draft appeared to extend the competence of the Community into the field of criminal law, but it was hoped that this problem could be resolved so that the directive could be agreed before the end of the year.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library any document or proposal sent to the Council or Commission of the European Community concerning implementation of economic and monetary union.

Mr. Maude: The Commission's report of 21 August entitled "Economic and Monetary Union", which was discussed at the informal Council of Economic and Finance Ministers in Rome on 7 and 8 September, was deposited in the House on 12 October; and I have today placed in the Vote Office copies of an explanatory memorandum about it.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, when he deposited in the Vote Office the communication of the Commission of the European Community to member Governments, dated 21 August, concerning implementation of economic and monetary union and the related Government memorandum; and what other steps he has taken to publicise the contents of each document.

Mr. Maude: The Commission report to which the hon. Member refers was deposited in the House on 12 October and copies of an explanatory memorandum have today been placed in the Vote Office.

Liquid Petroleum Gas

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he plans to review the taxation of liquid petroleum gas used for automotive propulsion purposes.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer will carefully consider the taxation of all forms of road fuel in the course of preparing his Budget.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Convicted Persons (New Evidence)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the machinery by which the Court of Appeal deals with new evidence on convicted persons.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of representations from Members of both Houses of Parliament, and from members of the public, about the role of the Court of Appeal in considering such cases.

World Cup (Deportations)

Mr. Denis Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to seek the destruction of all photographs and records of the English football supporters deported from Italy following the decision of the Italian Government to withdraw restrictions upon them returning to Italy and acceptance of their innocence.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In the absence of any other football-related information on them, the national football intelligence unit will destroy by the end of the year the records it holds of all those who were removed from Italy during the World cup without having been convicted of an offence. Any person who wishes to see his record may apply to do so under the Data Protection Act 1984.

Birmingham Pub Bombings

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the name, ranks and forces of those who attended the meeting at Scotland Yard on Friday 29 November 1974 to co-ordinate action for gathering intelligence against suspected members of the IRA in England, in connection with the Birmingham pub bombings.

Mr. Waddington: I understand that a number of conferences were held following the Birmingham pub bombings and that these were attended by members of police forces which were engaged in the investigations. Records relating to these conferences have since been destroyed, and the Metropolitan police are unable to say which forces attended which conferences or on what dates the conferences took place.

Wyndham Burnett

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement concerning the release on parole of Wyndham Burnett a prisoner at Wayland prison, Norfolk, sentenced in December 1986.

Mrs. Rumbold: I wrote to the hon. Member on 17 September.

Police Cells

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were still in police cells in Greater Manchester on 12 October.

Mrs. Rumbold: On Friday 12 October, there were 269 prisoners in Greater Manchester police cells.

Sports Events

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans for the future of the national football intelligence unit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The purpose of the national football intelligence unit is to counteract serious and persistent football hooligans by co-ordinating police intelligence in this country and by improving liaison with police forces abroad. Its aims were more fully explained in Home Office circular 30/1990, a copy of which is in the Library. We shall continue to support the unit in its important work.

Sports Events

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his undertaking to look carefully and quickly at the recommendation in Lord Justice Taylor's final report into the Hillsborough tragedy that it be made a specific offence to chant obscene or racialist abuse at designated sports grounds, 29 January, Official Report, column 21, what plans he has for implementing this recommendation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We hope to announce shortly our conclusions on whether to create this offence and the others recommended by Lord Justice Taylor.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to prevent broadcasters giving prominence through coverage of motor sports events to brewing companies' names and advertising.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have no plans to do so. I understand, however, that the Brewer's Society has advised its members not to become involved in the sponsorship of motor sports events.

Special Constabulary

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how funding is distributed for the special constabulary in England and Wales; and whether he has any plans to increase this funding in the near future.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Expenditure on the special constabulary is a matter for police authorities; all expenditure qualifies for 51 per cent. police grant from the Government.

The Government are also financing a three-year national publicity campaign to aid recruitment. This will start in 1991 at an estimated cost of around £1.5 million a year.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I am reminding officials of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the Government reserved the right to comply, or not, with principles 2.2 and 2.4 (collection of data) of the recommendation NO R (87) 15 of the Committee of Ministers to member states regulating the use of personal data in the public sector; whether these principles are complied with in respect of the information held on the police national computer; whether these principles are complied with in respect of personal information held on computer by the special branch; and whether it is the Government's intention to rescind the reservation entered to these principles.

Mr. Lloyd: The Government reserved their position on principles 2.2 and 2.4 after consultation with the Association of Chief Police Officers. Principle 2.2 requires the police to inform individuals, where practicable, that data have been collected about them without their knowledge. It was felt that occasions would arise when although it would be practicable to disclose such information, it would be undesirable to do so; for example, where an individual might inform an associate that he had been under suspicion. The proviso that information need be disclosed only when the object of the police activities was no longer likely to be prejudiced was regarded as unrealistic and impractical in the context of police work.

Principle 2.4, which restricts police activities in collecting data on particular groups such as suspected paedophiles, could seriously inhibit the police in preventing and detecting crime. The Government therefore entered reservations on both these principles. That remains the position.

In collecting and storing data, the police national computer and computer systems in police forces comply with the ACPO code of practice for police computer systems. The code establishes procedures and safeguards to promote the maintenance of good practice and compliance with the Data Protection Act 1984. A copy of the code is in the Library.

Iraqi Nationals

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Iraqi nationals are at present in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is estimated from the labour force surveys that some 5,000 Iraqi nationals, including students, are usually resident in the United Kingdom. Information on the number of Iraqi nationals currently in this country as visitors is not available.

May Inquiry

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make arrangements for those classified documents which Sir John May's inquiry into the Guildford and Maguire cases deems necessary for the purposes of that inquiry, to be made available to that inquiry;

(2) if he will make arrangements so that Sir John May's inquiry into the Guildford and Maguire cases is not constrained by the convention that police reports are not customarily allowed to enter the public domain;

(3) if he will waive public interest immunity in respect of documents which Sir John May's inquiry into the Guildford and Maguire cases deems necessary for the purposes of that inquiry.

Mr. John Patten: We have no reason to believe that the present arrangements make unavailable to Sir John May the documents he needs to carry out his inquiry satisfactorily, and therefore see no need at present to change those arrangements.

Security Checks

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many security check inquiries were made of the National Identification Bureau on individuals by (a) Government departments and (b) other approved bodies in the years 1986, 1987 and 1988; and if he will list the names of the approved bodies who may undertake such inquiries;

(2) if he will list the areas of employment which require security checks; and if he will list the areas of employment of those individuals who were the subject of a security check in 1989;

(3) what was the cost of making security check inquiries on individuals in 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Details of criminal records are not released to bodies outside the criminal justice system except where disclosure is clearly in the public interest. Information may be provided by the National Identification Bureau to Government Departments and other bodies, direct or through the police, for purposes such as the protection of national security, the protection of children and other vulnerable members of society and ensuring probity of justice. This covers a wide range of areas of employment but detailed records of these are not kept.

Under the terms of the data protection registration for the police, information may be released to the following:

Central Government Departments
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority
Gaming Board for Great Britain
Office of Fair Trading
Local Authorities
Foreign Governments
Police Forces
Prosecuting Authorities
Courts
Judges
Magistrates
Probation Service
Hospitals, nursing homes
Banks
Lawyers
Research Organisations
British Telecom
British Broadcasting Corporation
Civil Aviation Authority

Post Office
Police Complaints Authority
General Medical Council and other similar professional organisations
Official Receiver
Traffic Commissioners
Criminal Injury Compensation Board
Crown Agents
Crown Estate Commissioners
National Museums and Galleries
Royal Mint
United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority
Securities and Investments Board

The purposes of criminal record checks by the police, Government Departments or approved bodies are not recorded centrally and the number and cost of those for security vetting cannot be identified. The number of checks undertaken by the Government searches section of the National Identification Bureau for vetting and other purposes was as follows:

	Number
1986	384,595
1987	348,901
1988	385,308

These figures represent the number of transactions undertaken and not the number of individuals on whom checks were made. The same individual may have been checked more than once.

The estimated cost of the Government searches section in 1989 was about £500,000.

Police Computer

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which Government Departments (a) presently have access to the police national computer and (b) will have access to the new police computer.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In addition to the Home Office, HM Customs and Excise investigation division and the Drivers and Vehicles Licensing Agency have terminals giving them direct access to some of the information on the police national computer.

Consideration is being given to a proposal to allow a number of other Government Departments to have direct access to the criminal names index on the new police national computer. This would enable Departments to undertake their own preliminary inquiries, thus reducing the work load of the National Identification Bureau. In cases where this preliminary inquiry indicates that the subject might have a criminal record, the Department would ask the NIB to undertake a detailed check of the records.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether a date has been set for the new police computer (PNC2) to become fully operational; what is its potential full capacity; and approximately how many individual records are likely to be held on the PNC2 at the date when it becomes fully operational.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A firm date has not yet been set for the "cut over" from the present PNC system to PNC2. It will be set only after all the components of the new system have been delivered and fully tested.

As the hon. Member was told in reply to his question on 24 July at column 132, the PNC2 system will be capable of handling 62 million instructions per second, its main memory will be capable of storing 190 million bytes of data and it will have sufficient disk capacity to store 80,000 million bytes of data.

PNC2 is expected to hold records on about 45 million vehicles, 6 million persons and 4 million fingerprints.

Criminal Records

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether there are plans to establish an agency independent of the police to maintain the national collection of criminal records;

(2) whether a decision has been taken on transferring those criminal records presently held on microfiche to the new police computer.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As stated in the Governments' response to the Home Affairs Select Committee's report on criminal records (Cm. 1163), a study is to be undertaken to examine the most appropriate arrangements for the maintenance of, and disclosure from, the national collection of criminal records. In the light of the findings of this study, the Government will consider where responsibility for this work should lie.

The response also makes clear the Government's intention to computerise the national collection of criminal records, which is currently held on microfiche, as and when resources permit.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there are plans to update and amend Home Offices circular No. 45/1986 or to lay down statutory principles to govern the disclosure of criminal records as recommended by the Home Affairs Committee's report on criminal records.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 24 July 1990 at column 132.

As stated in the Government's response to the Home Affairs Select Committee's report on criminal records (Cm. 1163), a study is to be undertaken to examine, among other things, the most appropriate arrangements for disclosure from the national collection of criminal records.

Guinness Trial

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether those convicted in the Guinness trial will be allowed to carry on their private business directly or indirectly during their imprisonment.

Mrs. Rumbold: Restrictions on business activities that apply to all prisoners have been published in prison standing order 1C, a copy of which is in the Library. Convicted prisoners are not allowed to conduct any business activity from prison, other than to wind up a business or to make arrangements for it to be managed in their absence.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there are plans to include the new police computer into the Government data network.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There are no such plans.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the kind of information presently held on the police national computer under the data class of warning signals.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Warning signals are intended to alert officers to potential difficulties or risks in dealing with the individual. They may be used only in cases where there is supporting evidence of the need for them to be included in the record. Their inclusion and removal is at the discretion of the force which enters the record on the police national computer.

The information held under the data class of warning signals is intended to indicate individuals who may possess firearms, may possess weapons, may resort to violent behaviour, may attempt to escape, may suffer from mental disorder, may possess explosives, may make false allegations against the police, may be a hazard to others as a carrier of contagious diseases (e.g., hepatitis), may suffer from a medical condition and/or require medication, e.g., heart condition, claustrophobia, epilepsy, alcoholism, may attempt suicide, may be in unlawful possession of controlled drugs, may impersonate male or female.

Overseas Voters

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he has taken to monitor the use by political parties of the provision for registration of overseas voters for proxy vote of the Representation of the People Act 1989; (2) what guidance has been issued to groups seeking to register overseas voters as to how under the Representation of the People Act 1989 it is permissible to choose proxy voters for any particular constituency.

Mrs. Rumbold: There is no reason for the Home Office to monitor the activities of the political parties in encouraging eligible expatriates to register as overseas electors, or in assisting them to appoint proxies to vote on their behalf. A proxy appointed to vote on behalf of an overseas elector can do so only in the constituency for which the elector is registered. Political parties are, we believe, well aware of the legal requirements for appointing a proxy, and we see no need to issue special guidance on the subject.

Visas

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes there have been in entry requirements for citizens of east European countries; and what information he has that relates to changes between those countries of the European Community.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: During the summer, my right hon. and learned Friend introduced an immigration rules change removing the former German Democratic Republic from the list of countries whose nationals require a visa for admission to the United Kingdom. Following a further change last month, Czechoslovakia and Hungary were removed from the visa list with effect from 1 October. Most of our European Community partners have taken similar steps in relation to these countries.

Drugs

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proportion of those convicted of drug offences offend again within three years of (a) release from imprisonment or (b) the pronouncement of a non-custodial sentence;

(2) what are the comparative success ratios, measured by reoffending rates, of the various types of sentence passed upon those convicted of drug-related offences.

Mrs. Rumbold: The only readily available information is about drugs offenders discharged from custody in 1984 who were reconvicted within two years. This was published in table 8(c) of prison statistics for England and Wales 1987 (Cm 547) a copy of which is in the Library.

Philippine Citizens (Employment)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what conditions Philippine citizens are admitted into the United Kingdom for employment by (a) public bodies, (b) registered businesses, (c) United Kingdom citizens and (d) non-United Kingdom citizens; and what steps he takes to ensure equitable conditions and contracts of employment and registration of any change of employer.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Overseas nationals seeking admission to the United Kingdom must qualify under the relevant provisions of the immigration rules (currently HC 251 as amended). As non-EC nationals, Philippine citizens wishing to work here generally require work permits. However, as I explained in a reply to a question from the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 22 February 1990 at columns 917-8, there are exceptional arrangements outside the immigration rules and the work permit scheme under which a domestic servant who has worked abroad for an employer who comes to the United Kingdom can be admitted to continue working for him here. We have recently reviewed these arrangements in view of the concern about the possible exploitation of domestics and the outcome of that review was announced in another place by my noble Friend Lord Ferrers in reply to a question from Lord Hylton on 24 July 1990 at columns 1449-50. Whatever the provisions under which overseas nationals are admitted for work, they are entitled to the normal protection of our law. Their ability to change employers will, however, depend on the conditions on which they have been granted leave to enter or stay in the United Kingdom.

Operation Carnaby

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for an interim report from the Metropolitan Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the investigation operation Carnaby, outlining its terms of reference, manpower utilisation, and budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Operation Carnaby is a criminal investigation by the Metropolitan police. I have no plans to ask the Commissioner for a report on that investigation.

Research Contracts

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the research contracts awarded by his Department to academic institutions, and their cost, since 1985.

Mr. Waddington [holding answer 10 July 1990]: Information on the cost and nature of each research contract awarded by my Department to academic and research institutions since 1985 is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Total estimated Home Office expenditure on assignments awarded to academic institutions for the period January 1985 to April 1990 is £6,725,271, and is represented as follows:

Oxford Centre for Criminological Research/Oxford University	799,309
New Mexico Engineering Research Institute	605,195
University of East Anglia	572,500
Institute of Criminology/Cambridge University	564,250
University of London	510,788
Policy Studies Institute	299,000
University of Birmingham	294,330
NACRO	252,000
VERA Institute of Justice	250,532
University of Manchester	210,839
University of Surrey	165,981
University of Bath	165,400
Tavistock Institute	164,000
London School of Economics	141,662
University of Swansea	140,685
University of Essex	138,000
University of Leeds	128,123
University of Bristol	118,650
University of Liverpool	118,000

SOCIAL SECURITY

Maintenance

4. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on his proposals to ensure that fathers pay maintenance.

25. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on his proposals to ensure that fathers pay maintenance.

45. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on his proposals to ensure that fathers pay maintenance.

Mr. Newton: I have received correspondence on this subject from one of the major lone parent organisations, members of the public and other interested parties. We will be publishing full details of our proposals in a White Paper shortly.

Personal Pensions

11. Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the numbers who have taken out personal pensions.

27. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the numbers who will have taken out personal pensions.

44. Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the numbers who have taken out personal pensions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Calder Valley (Mr. Thompson) earlier today.

Family Credit

21. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families are now in receipt of family credit.

30. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families are now in receipt of family credit.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families are now in receipt of family credit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friends to my reply to the hon. Member for Wanstead and Woodford (Mr. Arbuthnot) earlier today.

Computerisation

22. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received regarding computerisation of the social security system.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Various inquiries have been received, both from members of the public and a number of outside organisations regarding the effectiveness of the Department's strategy systems, for which I have been able to provide comprehensive replies.

Disabled People

23. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about spending on disabled people since 1979.

33. Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about spending on disabled people since 1979.

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the increase in spending by the Government in support of disabled people since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friends to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastleigh (Sir David Price) earlier today.

24. Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the numbers of people who will benefit from the measures outlined in "The Way Ahead".

29. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the numbers of people who will benefit from the measures outlined in "The Way Ahead".

32. Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the numbers of people who will benefit from the measures outlined in "The Way Ahead".

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friends to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, South-East (Mr. Paice) earlier today.

34. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultations he has had with disability organisations on his proposals outlined in "The Way Ahead-Benefits for Disabled People".

Mr. Scott: We regularly meet the disability organisations to discuss a wide range of issues. I met the Disability Benefits Consortium—an umbrella group representing over 250 disability organisations—on 5 April in the second of a series of meetings to discuss their views on "The Way Ahead". On 1 August we issued a consultation document, "Disability Allowance: Assessment and Adjudication" building on the proposals set out in "The Way Ahead" and inviting comments. Copies of the paper have been sent to over 125 disability organisations and a number of these have sent constructive and interesting replies. A copy of the paper has been placed in the Library.

Income Support

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many deductions are now taking place from people on income support to cover debts arising from the poll tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Just over 9,000 deductions for community charge arrears were being made at 31 August 1990.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the level of supplementary benefit and income support scale rates for (a) a single person householder aged over 25 years and (b) married couples, each year since 1970; and what these amounts were as a percentage of national average earnings for each of these years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is available in tables 6.4b and 6.5b of the Abstract of Statistics for index of retail prices, Average Earnings, Social Security Benefits and Contributions published August 1989. A copy of this is in the Library.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the numbers of (i) men and (ii) women pensioners on income support by duration of time on benefit.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what number and proportion of pensioners were receiving (i) income support only, (ii) retirement pensions only and (iii) income support and retirement pension, broken down by sex in each case.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information to show whether pensioners in receipt of Income Support also receive the state retirement pension is not available. The remainder of the information requested is available in tables 12.2A, 12.2B and 12.2C of the Income Support Statistics Annual Enquiry. This was published in July 1990 and a copy is in the Library.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what number and proportion of unemployed people were receiving (i) income support only, (ii) unemployment benefit only and (iii) income support and unemployment benefit, broken down by sex in each case.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information as at May 1990 is contained in part (1) of table 1.1 of "Unemployment Benefit Statistics—Quarterly Analysis of Unemployed Claimants", a copy of which is in the Library.

Community Care

28. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will direct social fund officers to consider applications for community care grants from persons leaving institutional care and entitled to invalidity benefit, whose weekly income is not more than £10 above income support level.

37. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will direct social fund officers to consider applications for community care grants from persons leaving institutional care and entitled to invalidity benefit, whose weekly income is not more than £10 above income support level.

41. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will direct social fund officers to consider applications for community care grants from persons leaving institutional care and entitled to invalidity benefit, whose weekly income is not more than £10 above income support level.

Mr. Scott: My hon. Friend the Member for Ealing Acton (Sir George Young) asked me if I would look at extending eligibility for community care grants on 2 July 1990, and I am doing so.

339. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of applications for community care grants were refused in 1988-89, 1989-90 and the first half of 1990-91.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon) earlier today.

Pensioners' Incomes

31. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the latest trend in pensioners' real incomes since 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Hughes) earlier today.

Social Security Applications

35. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has regarding the percentage of errors made by his Department in calculating social security applications.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department has a well established management information system which includes a range of output measures and performance indicators covering the adminsitration of all the major benefits. One performance indicator provides a measure of how accurately claims are handled, based on the percentage of payments which are incorrect. The figures are published in table 14.31 in the Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93 (Cm 1014) a copy of which is in the Library.

Contributions (Earnings Limit)

36. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received about the upper earnings limit for social security contributions.

38. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received about the upper earnings limit for social security contributions.

43. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received about the upper earnings limit for social security contributions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We received representations from the Institute of Directors on this subject early this year.

40. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the value of child benefit in real terms and as a percentage of average earnings in 1980, 1985 and 1990, respectively.

42. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the value of child benefit in real terms and as a percentage of average earnings in 1980, 1985 and 1990, respectively.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is as follows:

Date	Weekly rate of child benefit (£)	Equivalent value at April 1990 price[1] (£)	Rate as a percentage of average male gross earnings
November 1980	4·75	8·55	3·5
November 1985	7·00	9·13	3·5
April 1990	7·25	7·25	2·5

[1]Based on the movement in the general index of retail prices between the date in the first column and April 1990.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his plans for child benefit in 1991.

50. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his plans for child benefit in 1991.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government's position on child benefit remains as set out in our last manifesto. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will continue therefore to review its level each year in accordance with existing law.

National Insurance

47. Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the number of standard rate taxpayers who would be affected by the abolition of the upper earnings limit on national insurance contributions.

48. Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the numbers of standard rate taxpayers who would be affected by the abolition of the upper earnings limit on national insurance contributions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) earlier today.

Lone-parent Families

49. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest figure he has for the number of lone-parent families in receipt of income support; and how many such families were receiving supplementary benefit five years ago.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In 1989 there were 767,000 lone-parent families in receipt of income support; the corresponding figure for supplementary benefit for 1984 was 500,000. The figures do not include prisoners' partners.

Source: Annual Statistical Enquiries for the relevant years.

Mobility Allowance

51. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review the criteria governing the award of mobility allowance so that dependent blind persons who are unable to enjoy any mobility may qualify.

Mr. Scott: In April this year we extended mobility allowance to people who are both deaf and blind. Our proposals set out in "The Way Ahead: benefits for disabled people" (Cm. 917) will extend help to less severely disabled people of working age and below and will benefit many people with sight disabilities who are not independently mobile.

Departmental Manuals

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) the titles of guidance and procedural manuals produced for his Department's offices which are not available to the public and (b) in each case, the reason for them not being available publicly.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The table shows the titles of Departmental guidance and procedural manuals which are not available to the public. They contain administrative and procedural instructions for staff which would be of little value to the general public, and also prescribe checks and controls which must remain confidential.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether students who will remain entitled to housing benefit and non-student partners in receipt of housing benefit will receive a £10 disregard for income from top-up loans.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Yes. The disregard, which will be subject to the overriding disregard of £10 on all income other than earnings, will apply for as long as the loan recipient remains a student.

Correspondence

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when his Department intends to reply to the letter sent by Merseyside Welfare Rights Resource Centre on 25 April regarding an apparent contradiction between practices within his Department and a written reply given by the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We are unable to trace this letter. If the hon. member could provide a copy, I will look into the matter.

Family Benefits

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the relative benefits given to a family with children (a) in the higher tax range and (b) below the tax threshold of child benefit or a general equivalent child tax allowance.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Child benefit provides virtually all families with a contribution towards the costs of bringing up their children, irrespective of their tax liability, though the total family income of those receiving income support or family credit is not normally affected by the level of child benefit. A child tax allowance whose value to the basic rate taxpayer was equivalent to the level of child benefit would be worth more to families with incomes liable to tax at the higher rate. Child tax allowances would not benefit families who do not pay tax, and some families with relatively small taxable incomes would be able to take only partial advantage of them.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar, all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We are reminding our officials of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Review Applications

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for review were received during the period (a) April 1988 to March 1989 and (b) April 1989 to March 1990 in respect of (i) community care grants, (ii) budgeting loans and (iii) crisis loans by each of the local offices in Leeds; and how many of these applications for review resulted in revised decisions.

Mr. Scott: The table shows the number of applications for review received by the Department's offices in Leeds and the number of revised decisions subsequently made by the social fund officers, senior officers and the social fund inspectors.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the financing and future of the Independent Living Fund.

Mr. Scott: Our plans for the future of the Independent Living Fund are still under consideration following the decision to phase the implementation of community care. The level of funding for the ILF in 1991-92 will be announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in his usual statement on the uprating of benefits.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State of Social Security what plans he has to incorporate the Independent Living Fund into the social security system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to incorporate the Independent Living Fund into the social security system.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications to the Independent Living Fund have been submitted since 1 August.

Mr. Scott: At 10 October the Independent Living Fund had received 1,233 applications since 1 August.

Crisis Loans

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of the budgeting loans budget was spent on crisis loans for those making an initial claim for income support and awaiting payment in arrears for the years (a) April 1988 to March 1989 and (b) April 1989 to March 1990 in (i) the local offices within the Leeds metropolitan area and (ii) nationally as (1) an actual figure and (2) a percentage.

Mr. Scott: The tables show the crisis loan expenditure by the Department's offices nationally and in Leeds arising from applications for applicants awaiting an initial payment of benefit.

Social Fund

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for review of social fund decisions were received by the office of the social fund inspectors during the periods (a) April 1988 to March 1989 and (b) April 1989 to March 1990 in respect of (i) community care grants, (ii) budgeting loans and (iii) crisis loans, relating to decisions made by each of the local offices in Leeds; and how many of these applications for social fund inspectors' review resulted in (1) decisions substituted by the social fund inspectors, (2) decisions referred back to the social fund office and (3) decisions confirmed by the social fund inspector.

Mr. Scott: I am advised by the Social Fund Commissioner that the table represents the total number of applications for review received at the office of the social fund inspectors from the Department's offices in Leeds. The social fund inspectors have reached decisions in 27 cases for the first year and 79 cases for the second year.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if his Department has considered research conducted by the university of Lancaster for the Social Security Research Consortium on the effects of the social fund in responding to the needs of claimants in Strathclyde; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Yes. The research was based on a small localised sample that only reflects the first year of the scheme. The conclusions it reaches are unlikely to be typical of the current operation of the social fund.

We have commissioned major independent research which is being conducted by the university of York's social policy research unit, to examine whether the social fund is meeting its objectives.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what extra social fund resources have been available to each social security office in Glasgow since 1 July.

Mr Scott: Details of all additional allocations to local offices since 1 July 1990 were placed in the Library on 3 September. There have been no further allocations since 3 September.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each social security office in Glasgow the numbers of social fund applications (a) submitted and (b) rejected on grounds of insufficient priority, since 1 July in each of the categories (i) grants, (ii) budget loans and (iii) crisis loans.

Mr. Scott: The information given in the table represents the number of applications and the number which were refused on grounds of insufficient priority, within each category, since 1 July 1990.

Note: The figures given relate to the period 1 July to 30 September 1990 only.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he is considering to establish a departmental or private agency for the pursuit and recovery of social fund loans and income support overpayments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans for the establishment of a separate agency for the pursuit and recovery of social fund loans and income support overpayments. Such work will become a responsibility of the Benefits Agency after its inception in April 1991.

Social Security Commissioners

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average cost to his Department of an appeal to the social security commissioners.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The office of the chief adjudication officer, which is funded by the Department of Social Security, is responsible for processing appeals to the Commissioners. The most recent estimate of the total average cost of the work involved, which has been provided by the chief adjudication officer, is about £2,000. However, the cost is being recalculated and I will write to the hon. Member again when this information becomes available.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has to why the necessary claims forms and assessment forms were not available on 1 October for obtaining attendance allowance under the new rules for people who are terminally ill; how many persons he estimates experienced delays as a result; who was responsible for the failure to provide the necessary forms on time; and what actions he has taken to remedy these problems.

Mr. Scott: The new forms for use by people claiming attendance allowance on grounds of terminal illness were distributed to local offices on 11 September. Supplies were also sent to carers' organisations and welfare rights groups by 22 September. The report forms for use by doctors were distributed during September and all GPs and other doctors likely to need them should have had access to one by 1 October.

Some delays in the distribution of these forms did occur due to a breakdown in communication between the Department and HMSO. Special arrangements were made to enable people to get supplies urgently and to ensure that claimants do not lose benefit due to delay in obtaining a form.

Pensions

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would have been the value of the state retirement pension for (i) a single person and (ii) a married couple for each of the years 1980 to 1990, if it had been uprated in line with average earnings or increase in prices, whichever was the higher.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is set out in the table.

It should be noted that such a link would attract a consequent increase in the national insurance contribution. It is estimated that the necessary increase in the contribution rate to support the additional cost in 1990 would be 1·25 per cent. and 1·45 per cent. on the basic rate of employees and employers contributions respectively; increasing them to 10·25 per cent. and 11·9 per cent. respectively. This would have meant for example a contribution increase for an employee on average earnings of £3·18 per week, together with an additional contribution of £4·35 per week for his employer.

Standard rate RP increased by RPI or earnings since 1980

Uprating date	Single person	Married couple
November 1980	27·45	44·00
November 1981	30·75	49·30
November 1982	33·30	53·40
November 1983	36·20	58·05
November 1984	38·05	61·00
November 1985	41·40	66·35
July 1986	43·70	70·05
April 1987	45·60	73·15
April 1988	49·20	78·95
April 1989	53·45	85·75
April 1990	58·65	94·05

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average weekly amount received, by quintile groups, by retirement pensioners from occupational pensions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 25 July at columns 305-10.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Sri Lanka

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will make representations to the Government of Sri Lanka to accept an immediate ceasefire in the civil war and a return to negotiations with mediation by the United Nations Secretary General.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Since the latest outbreak of fighting the Sri Lankan Government have twice proposed a ceasefire. The Tamil terrorists "Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam" have rejected these proposals on both occasions. In the circumstances, representations would not be appropriate.

Antarctica

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what activities are currently banned by the Antarctic treaty; and what information he has in respect of breaches of banned practices by any of the treaty parties since 1961.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Under the Antarctic treaty the following are prohibited:

> any measure of a military nature, such as the establishment of military bases and fortifications, the carrying out of military manoeuvres, as well as the testing of any type of weapon;
> any nuclear explosions and the disposal there of radioactive waste material.

None of the inspections carried out in accordance with article VII of the Antarctic treaty has indicated that there have been any breaches of these provisions of the treaty.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from Greenpeace concerning the 1989-90 Greenpeace Antarctic expedition to the abandoned British bases B and G and to Rothera base; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have received from Greenpeace a copy of its report on its Antarctic expedition between September 1989 and March 1990, which included visits to the British bases mentioned.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what total number of representations his Department has received from hon. Members and the public regarding Antarctic conservation.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have received more than 1,400.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the activities which are regulated by the Antarctic treaty system.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Antarctic treaty system has adopted 186 recommendations, the agreed measures for the conservation of Antarctic flora and fauna, plus three separate conventions:

> The convention for the conservation of Antarctic seals, the convention for the conservation of Antarctic marine living resources and the convention for the regulation of Antarctic mineral resource activities.

The specific activities which are regulated are set out in those documents, copies of which I have placed in the Library of the House. To list those activities separately would involve disproportionate cost.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what documents he has received from Wildlife Link regarding the conservation of the Antarctic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have received a Wildlife Link draft report dated 18 July entitled "Comments on the various proposals for improved Antarctic environmental protection".

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which government departments are to be represented on the delegation to the consultative meeting of Antarctic treaty parties in November.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Present intentions are that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Departments of Energy, Environment and Trade and Industry will be represented.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the agreements, conventions and recommendations agreed by the Antarctic treaty parties since 1961.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Apart from the Antarctic treaty itself, three Conventions have been concluded and form part of the Antarctic treaty system: the convention for the Conservation of Antarctic seals of 1972 (Cmnd. 7209), the convention on the conservation of Antarctic marine living resources of 1980 (Cmnd. 8714), and the convention on the regulation of Antarctic mineral resource activities of 1988 (Cm. 634). In addition, in pursuance of the Antarctic treaty, the parties thereto have concluded the agreed measures for the conservation of Antarctic fauna and flora (set out in schedule 2 to the Antarctic Treaty Act 1967) as well as 186 recommendations. A list of the recommendations has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the statutes, statutory instruments and the statutory rules and orders which implement the United Kingdom's obligations arising from the Antarctic treaty and the consultative meetings of the parties to the treaty.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The relevant statutes and statutory instruments currently in force are the following:

Antarctic Treaty Act 1967
The Antarctic Treaty Order in Council 1962 (SI 1962/401)
The Antarctic Treaty (Specially Protected Areas) Order 1968 (SI 1968/889)
The Antarctic Treaty (Specially Protected Species) Order 1968 (SI 1968/889)
The Antarctic Treaty (Specially Protected Area) Order 1971 (SI 1971/1236)
The Conservation of Antarctic Mammals and Birds (High Seas) Order 1973 (SI 1973/1755)
The Antarctic Treaty Act 1967 (Isle of Man) Order 1970 (SI 1970/1436)
The Antarctic Treaty Act 1967 (Channel Islands) Order 1974 (SI 1974/1109)
The Antarctic Treaty (Specially Protected Areas) Order 1977 (SI 1977/1235)
The Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (Immunities and Privileges) Order 1981 (SI 1981/1108)
The Antarctic Treaty (Agreed Measures) Order 1988 (SI 1988/586)
The Antarctic Treaty (Specially Protected Areas) Order 1988 (SI 1988/587)
The Antarctic Treaty (Agreed Measures) (No. 2) Order 1988 (SI 1988/1296)
The Antarctic Treaty (Amendment) Order 1989 (SI 1989/841)
The Antarctic Treaty (Contracting Parties) Order 1990 (SI 1990/989)
The Antarctic Treaty Act 1967 (Isle of Man) (Variation) Order 1990 (SI 1990/1198)

Nuclear Power

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what extra expenditure has been incurred by his Department in 1990-91 following the assumption of responsibility for that part of the United Kingdom mission in Vienna which deals with the International Atomic Energy Agency; and what changes to his Department's cash limits have been made in consequence of the change in responsibilities.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The estimated cost to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office of assuming responsibility for that part of the United Kingdom mission in Vienna which deals with the International Atomic Energy Agency in 1990-91 is £200,000. Subject to parliamentary approval, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office cash limits for class 2 vote 1 and its running cost limits will be increased in due course.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any discussions have taken place with his counterpart in the People's Republic of China on the provision of radioactive waste management technology from the United Kingdom to the Daya Bay nuclear installation in the People's Republic of China.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No such discussions have taken place.

Nuclear Weapons

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his counterparts in the United States and the USSR about the developing of nuclear weapons by the Democratic Republic of North Korea.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not personally discussed North Korea's nuclear programme with his American or Russian counterparts. However, as I made clear in my speech to the non-proliferation treaty (NPT) review conference, we are concerned at North Korea's failure to conclude a safeguards agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency, pursuant to her obligations under article III of the NPT. British officials have raised this subject on several occasions in the appropriate fora.

Brazil

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Brazilian Government; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Garel-Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs last met a representative of the Brazilian Government in the course of the meeting between European Community Foreign Ministers and representatives of the Rio Group in New York on 27 September, when discussion concentrated on measures to strengthen relations between the two regions.

Italy

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met his Italian counterpart; what discussion took place relating to the Italian presidency of the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met the Italian Foreign Minister during the informal meeting of EC Foreign Ministers on 6-7 October in Asolo, Italy. They had discussions on a wide range of European Community issues. They meet frequently and shall do so again shortly during the President of Italy's state visit later this month.

Hong Kong

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the decision to prosecute demonstrators in Hong Kong for using loud hailers without prior permission.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The cases in question are still sub judice, pending the hearing of an appeal lodged by the five convicted persons. The charges were brought under Hong Kong laws and at the decision of the Hong Kong Attorney-General. It is for the Hong Kong Government to handle these cases in accordance with Hong Kong law.

British Embassy, Washington

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff from the Civil Aviation Authority are attached to the embassy in Washington; and what are their grades and functions.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: A member of the staff of the Civil Aviation Authority serves on secondment to the embassy as civil air attaché. This post is graded at DS4 (equivalent to HCS5). The civil air attachés functions are as follows:

(i) to ensure that CAA senior management is kept aware of FAA policy and technological developments in respect of air traffic services, aviation safety regulation and related research and development
(ii) to foster and develop further an harmonious relationship between the CAA and FAA based on mutual respect;
(iii) to provide technical information to the CAA on FAA intentions and programmes, to ensure compatibility on subsequent international approaches, and to minimise nugatory effort by the CAA;
(iv) to ensure that the CAA and FAA are each aware of any potential interactions of their policy decisions;
(v) to advise FAA of CAA interests and to ensure these are adequately considered in the formation of FAA policy;
(vi) to act as a focal point for CAA enquiries on technical issues at the working level; and
(vii) to advise HM Ambassador on matters relating to air traffic services and the safety regulation of civil aviation operations.

Middle East

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role Her Majesty's Government are playing in the middle east peace process.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary is making clear during his present visit to Egypt, Israel and the Occupied Territories our strong support for new efforts to relaunch the middle east peace process, once the Gulf crisis is over. The recent killings in Jerusalem have tragically underlined the need to find a just and lasting solution which combines Palestinian self-determination and secure borders for the state of Israel.

Afghanistan

Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about diplomatic links with Afghanistan, particularly in regard to staffing arrangements in Kabul.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: British diplomats were withdrawn from Kabul in February 1989. It is too early to say when they will return. The Afghan Embassy in London continues to operate under a chargé d'affaires.

Toxic Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs when he last met his European Community colleagues to discuss the export, movement and disposal of toxic wastes to and from third countries, including developing countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The EC Environment Council will consider a proposal for Community and member states' ratification of the convention on the control of transboundary movements of hazardous wastes and their disposal (known as the Basel convention), under which parties to the convention shall not permit the export of toxic waste to parties which have prohibited the import of such waste. The fourth Lomé convention signed in December 1989 (and currently in the process of being ratified) has provisions prohibiting the direct or indirect export of Community waste to ACP states.

Members of Parliament (Assize)

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what status will be given to any resolutions proposed or made at the forthcoming assize between Members of the European Parliament and Members of the United Kingdom Parliament.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We understand that the parliamentary conference of the European Community (as the assizes are now called) will probably conclude with a communiqué. This will not be binding on the inter-governmental conference. We will follow the proceedings with interest.

Gulf Energy Resources

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on (a) the productive capacity of the oilfields in (i) Kuwait and (ii) Iraq and (b) the proven reserves of petroleum and natural gas in both Iraq and Kuwait.

Mr. Waldegrave: Crude oil production capacities are estimated to be as follows: Kuwait 2.3 million barrels a day; Iraq 3.5 million barrels a day. Proven reserves of oil as at 31 December 1989 were as follows: Kuwait 94,500 million barrels; Iraq 100,000 million barrels. Proven reserves of natural gas as at 31 December 1989 were as follows: Kuwait 1.4 trillion (million million) cubic metres; Iraq 2.7 trillion cubic metres.

Kuwait Oil

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the output of Kuwait oil refineries and the export of petroleum products prior to the invasion on an annual basis.

Mr. Waldegrave: Kuwait oil refinery production and exports 1984-88 (the most recent available figures) were as follows (all figures in thousands of barrels per day):

	1984	1985	1986	1987	1988
Production	478·9	566·5	599·0	619·0	653·1
Exports	394·9	492·9	525·0	553·0	635·0

In 1987, the latest year for which detailed figures are available, the breakdown of production by product was as follows:

	Barrels[1]
Gasoline	34.0
Kerosene	68.1
Distillate fuels	132.5

	Barrels[1]
Residual fuels	2[redacted]6.7
Others	107.7

[1]All figures in thousands of barrels per day.

Kuwait (Desalination Plants)

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about the impact on the operation of desalination plants in Kuwait as a result of reduced gas availability in the current crisis.

Mr. Waldegrave: Unfortunately, we have no authoritative information available on this point.

Iraq (Sanctions)

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to ensure that sanctions against Iraq are not breached by the maintenance of air transport links.

Mr. Waldegrave: Security Council resolution 670, adopted on 25 September, is designed to ensure that the embargo against Iraq is not breached by means of air transport. The resolution confirms that Security Council resolution 661 applies to all means of transport, including aircraft; requires all [redacted]tes to deny take-off rights to any aircraft carrying cargo other than food in humanitarian circumstances or medical supplies; and requires all States to deny overflight rights to aircraft destined for Iraq or Kuwait unless such aircraft land for inspection, have been approved by the sanctions committee, or are carrying supplies intended for UN forces. A number of aircraft have already landed for inspection under the terms of the resolution.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Gulf (UN Resolutions)

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the resolutions of the Security Council 660 to 665 with a brief analysis of the purpose of each, indicating how many of the resolutions were unanimous and upon which the Yemen and Cuba abstained.

Mr. Waldegrave: The table shows the voting on each of the Security Council resolutions so far adopted on Iraq and Kuwait:

Resolution No.	Subject	Voting
SCR 660 (adopted 2 August)	Condemned invasion and called for immediate and unconditional Iraqi withdrawal.	14 votes for: 0 abstentions: 0 against. Yemen absent.
SCR 661 (6 August)	Imposed sanctions.	13: 2: 0. Yemen and Cuba abstained.
SCR 662 (9 August)	Decided annexation of Kuwait by Iraq null and void.	15: 0: 0.
SCR 664 (18 August)	Reaffirmed rights of third state nationals, including the right to leave.	15: 0: 0.
SCR 665 (25 August)	Authorised measures to halt shipping in order to inspect and verify cargoes.	13: 2: 0. Yemen and Cuba abstained.
SCR 666 (13 September)	Established system to permit food imports to Iraq and Kuwait in humanitarian circumstances.	13: 0: 2. Yemen and Cuba voted against.
SCR 667 (16 September)	Condemned Iraqi attacks against diplomatic premises and personnel.	15: 0: 0.
SCR 669 (24 September)	Called on Sanctions Committee to consider requests for economic assistance under article 50 of UN charter.	15: 0: 0.
SCR 670 (25 September)	Measures to tighten air embargo and detain or deny entry to Iraqi-registered ships breaching sanctions.	14: 0: 1. Cuba voted against.

EC Programmes

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will tabulate in the Official Report in alphabetical or topic sequence the past or current programmes of the European Community, denoted by acronyms where applicable, showing for each (a) its approved cost, (b) its period of operation, (c) the approximate contribution of the United Kingdom and (d) the category and number of bodies or institutions in the United Kingdom participating.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The information requested is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. Most of the information sought by the hon. Member is available in the Official Journal of the European Communities.

Hungary

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made by Her Majesty's Government in helping Hungary's economic and political development.

Mr. Waldegrave: The know-how fund for Hungary started in April. It is already running some 60 projects on the basis of priorities agreed with the Hungarians. We are involved in nine projects under the EC PHARE Programme and have taken a lead in promoting the speedy negotiation of an EC/Hungary Association agreement. The United Kingdom also participates in international financial assistance to Hungary.

European Political Union

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress he is making in preparation for the intergovernmental conferences in December, with particular reference to the issue of political union.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what progress he is making in preparation for the intergovernmental conferences in December, with particular reference to the issue of political union.

Mr. Garel-Jones: EC Foreign and Finance Ministers discussed preparations for the intergovernmental conferences at their recent meetings and will report to the Special European Council in Rome on 27 and 28 October.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress he is making in preparation for the inter-governmental conferences in December, with particular reference to the issue of political union.

Mr. Garel-Jones: EC Foreign and Finance Ministers discussed preparations for the inter-governmental conferences at their recent meetings and will report to the Special European Council in Rome on 27-28 October.

Kashmir

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Kashmir.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We remain concerned about the situation in Kashmir and welcome the discussions between India and Pakistan on ways of reducing tension. We hope these will result in progress on confidence building measures, and allow the wider issues involved to be tackled in the spirit of the 1972 Simla agreement on bilateral relations between India and Pakistan.

Central and Eastern Europe (Visas)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning the easing of visa restrictions between the United Kingdom and the states of eastern and central Europe.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have received many such representations from hon. Members and members of the public. I am glad to say that visa abolition agreements have been concluded with Czechoslovakia and Hungary, and took effect on 1 October 1990. We are keeping the situation regarding the other countries of eastern and central Europe under review. There are no plans at present for further visa abolition agreements, but where possible requirements have been eased, for example by extending the validity of multiple entry visas.

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in improving the service provided to visa applicants by the British Embassy in Warsaw.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The visa section in Warsaw has now succeeded in clearing the backlog that arose from the surge in applications this summer (about 30 per cent. higher than last year). Applicants are normally seen on their day of arrival and, provided they meet the requirements of the immigration rules, receive their visas that day.

Procedures have been streamlined. Greater authority has been delegated to issue visas without reference to London. The period within which single entry visas may be used has been extended from three to six months. Multiple entry visas have been extended in validity from six months to two years, and are now available to businessmen and other travellers with a genuine need to visit the United Kingdom frequently.

The Polish authorities have been asked to help in an urgent search for more adequate premises. Meanwhile plans are under way to install a temporary waiting room and expand interview facilities to improve comfort and speed processing of applicants. This will also enable us to reinforce the visa section further.

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the length of time taken to process a visa application for entry into the United Kingdom for short-term visits from (a) Hungary, (b) Romania, (c) Poland and (d) Czechoslavakia; if he has any proposals to improve this performance; and what are the comparable times for the processing of visa applications from these countries to other members of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Since 1 October 1990, Czechoslovak and Hungarian nationals visiting the United Kingdom no longer require visas. There are intergovernmental arrangements with Poland and Romania laying down target processing times for visas. For short visits the timescales are 14 working days for Poland (seven working days for officially sponsored applicants) and seven working days for Romania. We normally meet those targets. The great majority of applicants at both embassies now receive their visas within 24 hours and many on the day of application. We have sent additional staff to Warsaw and Bucharest and introduced new procedures to streamline visa issuing. Comparable times (where available) for processing applications from Polish and Romanian nationals visiting other European Community countries are: Belgium one to two weeks; Denmark 15 days; France 21 days (but 24 hours for Poles under 25 years); Germany 24 hours; Greece one week; Italy 15-30 days; Netherlands about five days to one month; Spain two weeks.

Romania

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to meet his Romanian counterpart to discuss the plight of Romanian orphans.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met the Romanian Foreign Minister in New York on 1 October and has no further plans to meet him in the near future. However, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is organising and partly funding a visit to Romania by Department of Health and Home Office officials to discuss how the situation can be improved.

British Hostages (Beirut)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards the release of British hostages held in Beirut.

Mr. Waldegrave: We resumed diplomatic relations with Iran on 27 September. Both sides felt that our outstanding bilateral problems, including that of the British hostages in Lebanon, would be more easily resolved with diplomatic relations. Iran, which played a decisive and helpful role in the release of Mr. Brian Keenan in August, has undertaken publicly to use her humanitarian influence to achieve the release of hostages in Lebanon. We shall urge the Iranian Government to persevere in their efforts until the British hostages, Mr. Jack Mann, Mr. John McCarthy and Mr. Terry Waite, are freed.

Viraj Mendis

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department has made any representations to the West German Government following their decision to allow Viraj Mendis to settle in the Federal Republic.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have made no such representations.

Fishing (South Atlantic)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the approach of the Falkland Islands Government to the Japanese Government over fishing in the south Atlantic.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he is making about squid fishing and related fishing matters in the south Atlantic, to the Governments of Korea and Japan, as a result of the recent Falkland Islands Government delegation to Tokyo.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Following a visit by a Falkland Islands Government (FIG) delegation to Tokyo to meet far eastern fishing associations, we reinforced to the Japanese and Korean authorities the delegation's message abut the importance of fisheries conservation in the south west Atlantic. Such Government to Government contacts are properly a matter for Her Majesty's Government rather than FIG, although the latter are fully consulted about such contacts.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar, all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Our officials are being reminded of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

USSR (Visas)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Russians on behalf of Leonid Belopolsky of Kiev and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa.

Mr. Waldegrave: We can certainly raise the case of Leonid Belopolsky and his family with the Soviet authorities, but in order to make our representations as effective as possible we shall need further details.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Russians on behalf of Anatoly Butov of Bendery and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa.

Mr. Waldegrave: We can certainly raise the case of Anatoly Butov and his family with the Soviet authorities, but in order to make our representations as effective as possible we shall need further details.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Russians on behalf of Alexander Borodyansky of Kiev and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have made numerous representations to the Soviet authorites about this case, most recently during the CSCE conference on the human dimension in Copenhagen in June. We shall continue to press until it is satisfactorily resolved.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Boris Zolotarevsky and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa.

Mr. Waldegrave: These cases have now been added to the list of those on which we make regular representations to the Soviet authorities. We shall not let up until there is a satisfactory outcome.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Irina Voronkevich, a pensioner from Moscow, in her efforts to obtain an exit visa.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have raised the case of Mrs Voronkevich with the Soviet authorities on a number of occasions. I understand that she has recently been granted permission to visit her family in Israel, she has not yet been given permission to emigrate.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Liev Frenklakh and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

(2) representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Rosa Frelikh and her family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

(3) what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Leonid Chulsky of Moscow and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

(4) what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Anatoly Brenner of Moscow and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

(5) what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Raisa Tarasova of Moscow and her family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

Mr. Waldegrave: We can certainly raise these cases with the Soviet authorities, but in order to make our representations most effective we shall need further details.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Vladimir Tsivkin of Leningrad and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

Mr. Waldegrave: We raised Mr Tsivkin's case on a number of occasions with the Soviet authorities. I understand that he has now left Leningrad to join his wife and daughter in the United States.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Lev Milman and Lia Krichman and their family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

(2) what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Boris Tsireleson and his mother Esther in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

(3) what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Anatoly Gennis and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

(4) what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Irina Sokolova and Mikhail Lidsky and their family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

(5) what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Roman Bekker of Lvov and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa;

(6) what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Evgeny Pizarevsky of Leningrad and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa.

Mr. Waldegrave: These cases are all among those on which we regularly press the Soviet authorities, most recently when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs visited the Soviet Union from 11-14 September. We shall not let up until there is a satisfactory outcome.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Emil Kunin and his family in their efforts to obtain an exit visa.

Mr. Waldegrave: These cases have now been added to the list of those on which we make regular representations to the Soviet authorities. We shall not let up until there is a satisfactory outcome.

Bophuthatswana

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any of his officials have visited Bophuthatswana in the last year.

Mr. Waldegrave: Staff from our diplomatic Posts in South Africa pay regular visits to all parts of the country, including Bophuthatswana.

Vietnam

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is he will list those EEC countries which support British objections to diplomatic relations between Vietnam and the EEC.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Following agreement by the Vietnamese Government to accept back those Vietnamese who have not been accorded refugee status in other countries, we have informed our Community partners that we would welcome the renewal of formal diplomatic relations between the Community and Vietnam.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about Vietnamese money blocked in British bank accounts; and what are the obstacles to its release.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 23 July 1990]: According to the Bank of England's Quarterly Bulletin of May 1990, at 29 December 1989 Vietnamese deposits with banks and other financial institutions in the United Kingdom stood at US$18 million. The Government have not imposed a freeze on Vietnamese assets in the United Kingdom.

Live Animals (Burning)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what diplomatic representations have been made in respect of the burning of live animals in transit in France from the United Kingdom; and what responses he has received.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Both my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs have taken this up with our French counterparts. The French authorities have condemned the use of violence, initiated legal proceedings and are taking necessary police action. They have also undertaken to secure compensation.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what investigations the Embassy in Paris has instigated into the burning of live animals from the United Kingdom while in transit in France; and what information he now has available.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Her Majesty's embassy in Paris had repeatedly made clear the concern of the British authorities about all recent incidents affecting British exporters and hauliers. It will remain in the closest touch with the French authorities.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Minister of Agirculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what investigations he has instigated into the burning of live animals from the United Kingdom while in transit in France; and what information he now has available;

(2) what representations he has made in respect of the burning of live animals in transit in France from the United Kingdom; and what response he has received.

Mr. Curry: My colleagues and I have made it clear to the French Government that we thoroughly deplore all recent incidents in France involving attacks on imported lamb, beef and live sheep.

I have also raised the matter in the Council of Agriculture Ministers. The incident involving the burning of live animals was particularly abhorrent. The French Government, who are responsible for investigating these incidents, have emphasised their determination to maintain law and order, to take action against those concerned, and to compensate for damages sustained. I understand that a number of people have been charged in respect of the incident involving the burning of live sheep at Thouars.

Western Sahara

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the United Kingdom's role in resolving the western Saharan conflict.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have no direct role to play in resolving the dispute over the western Sahara. However as one of the five permanent members of the Security Council we have consistently supported the UN Secretary General in his efforts to arrange a free and fair referendum to determine the territory's future.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations Her Majesty's Government has made to the Moroccan government on the subject of Moroccan abuses of human rights in the occupied territories of the western Sahara.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Moroccan authorities are well aware of our condemnation of human rights abuses, no matter where they occur.

Iraq and Kuwait (Telephone Inquiries)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many calls have been made on the premium-rate telephone system set up for families to make inquiries about relatives trapped in Iraq and Kuwait; how much in total has been received at the latest available date from British Telecom as the Foreign Office's share of the premium tariff; and how much British Telecom receives as its share of the agreement.

Mr. Waldegrave: A total of 38,699 calls were received between 8 August, when the system was introduced, and 3 October when it was discontinued and replaced by a freefone facility. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's share of the premium tariff was £8,136, of which so far £4,000 has been given to the Gulf Support Group for accommodation costs.

It is not the policy of British Telecom to divulge details of their share of revenue accruing from individual agreements.

Live Animals (Export)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list his Department's responsibilities in relation to the export of live animals purely for slaughter.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Responsibility for controls on the export of live animals, including those exported for slaughter, rests with my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

EC Presidency (Speech)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state the dates on which and means used whereby a full transcript of the speech of the Italian Foreign Minister, President of the Foreign Affairs and General Council of the European Community outlining the programme and policies of the Italian presidency of the European Parliament in Strasbourg on 11 July was made available in the United Kingdom (a) in Italian and (b) in English; and what steps were taken to circulate and publicise either.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Italian Foreign Minister's speech, with an English summary, was passed to the Select Committee for European Legislation on 16 July, and was discussed fully when my hon. Friend the then Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs appeared before the Committee on 18 July. It is not the responsibility of the British Government to publicise speeches made by representatives of other member states in Strasbourg.

Iraq

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library details of official responses by Her Majesty's Government to (a) the use of Iraqi troops of chemical weapons against their own citizens and (b) the Iraqi invasion of Iran.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions, and when, since 1979 Her Majesty's Government has protested at the use by Iraq of chemical weapons (a) internally and (b) in the war between Iran and Iraq.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have repeatedly condemned in the strongest possible terms the use of chemical weapons by Iraq both during the Iran-Iraq war and against their own Kurdish population. As an illustration, I would refer the hon. Member to the following Hansard references:

Date of protest (if known)	Hansard reference
5 April 1984	HC 30 April 1984, Vol. 59 col. 43
29 March 1985	HC 24 April 1985, Vol. 77 col. 442
24 September 1986	HC 3 December 1986, Vol. 106 col. 928-9
"Recently" (October 1987)	HC 28 October 1987, Vol. 121 col. 265
2 September 1988 21 September 1988	HC 27 October 1988, Vol. 139 col. 410
4-8 November 1988	HC 10 November 1988, Vol. 140 col. 268-69
"Recent" (February 1989)	HC 20 February 1989, Vol. 147 col. 368-69

In particular, we sponsored United Nations Security Council resolution 620 in August 1988 condemning the use of chemical weapons in the Iran-Iraq conflict. At the Paris conference on chemical weapons 7-11 January 1989 I specifically referred to the full horror of the use of chemical weapons in the Iran/Iraq war and the compelling evidence of the use of chemical weapons against the Kurds. Following Iraq's right of reply we made public the evidence on which this was based.

In response to Iraq's invasion of Iran, the United Kingdom voted in favour of Security Council resolution 479, which was adopted unanimously on 28 September 1980. A copy of the resolution is available in the Library of the House.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to inform all relations of hostages of the telephone and telex numbers of the British embassy in Baghdad.

Mr. Waldegrave: The British embassy's telephone and telex numbers are (Baghdad code: 010 964 1) 5372121 and 213414 respectively. This information is published in standard reference works available in most public libraries. It is also available by telephone inquiry to the FCO Helpline on 071-430-9920/21.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what class of post is used for forwarding hostages' mail to their families when it arrives in London.

Mr. Waldegrave: Mail forwarded by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is sent by first class post.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Iraqi Government about their continued refusal to release Mr. Alistair Ross of 19 Lidfield road, Stoke Newington N16 9NA; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The plight of those detained in Iraq is a matter of great concern to us. Representations are continuously being made in Baghdad and in London.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what he is doing to ensure Red Cross or Red Crescent access to the British hostages in Iraq.

Mr. Waldegrave: Iraq has a clear obligation under international law to allow the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) to exercise its humanitarian mandate. The ICRC continues to seek access to foreign nationals in Iraq and Kuwait but Iraq has denied this. We continue to give the ICRC our full support.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what he is doing to ensure diplomatic access to the hostages in Iraq.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have made and will continue to make frequent and vigorous representations in Baghdad and London for access to British nationals held in Iraq. The Iraqis have rejected all such applications.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what he is doing to ensure continued (a) postal, (b) telephonic and (c) telex contact between British hostages in Iraq and their friends and relatives in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We and our Embassy in Baghdad are doing everything possible to ensure that British nationals detained in Iraq can remain in contact with their relatives and friends here.

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the economic measures that have now been taken by each of the member states of the Council of Europe to enforce effective sanctions against Iraq.

Mr. Waldegrave: The 33 members of the Council of Europe which are also members of the United Nations are required to comply with the terms of Security Council resolutions 661, 665 and 670 which impose sanctions against Iraq. All except Liechtenstein have notified the Security Council of measures taken to implement SCR 661. Of the remaining two countries, Switzerland and San Marino, Switzerland has undertaken to observe sanctions and has notified the Security Council of measures taken.

Nigeria

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Nigerian Government for assistance in training police or military personnel.

Mr. Waldegrave: At the request of the Federal Government of Nigeria, the United Kingdom has agreed to provide assistance in the training of Nigerian police officers. A joint project is currently being put together, supported by funds from the Overseas Development Administration's technical co-operation programme. The project involves the provision of a team of five British police officers as advisers to the Nigerian police force for two years. Nigerians have for many years attended a variety of military training courses in the United Kingdom. Training assistance is also provided in Nigeria.

Kurdish People

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with representatives of the Kurdish people of (a) Iraq, (b) Iran, (c) Syria and (d) the Soviet Union since 1979.

Mr. Waldegrave: There have been no formal discussions with any Kurdish groups or their representatives.

Gulf (Human Rights)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Governments of (a) Kuwait, (b) Saudi Arabia and (c) the United Arab Emirates concerning the level of democracy and respect for human rights that pertain in those countries.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Governments of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates are well aware of the importance we attach to the observance of international human rights standards.

Fiji

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has taken any recent steps to persuade the present Fijian Government to adopt a democratic constitution.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My noble Friend the then Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs made our view known to the interim Government of Fiji when he was there for an international meeting in March. We wish to see an early return to parliamentary democracy in Fiji under a constitution acceptable to all its peoples.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the present position with regard to the development of tourism in the Falklands; and what part the new airport at Mount Pleasant has played in that development.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Falkland Islands Government are at present diversifying their current economic base of agriculture and fisheries into other areas such as tourism. The Falkland Islands Government have close links with United Kingdom based tour operators to encourage tourist groups to visit the Islands. Links are also being developed with Chile and Uruguay. The opening of the airport at Mount Pleasant has facilitated visits by land-based groups who previously could not have visited the Falklands.

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the position with regard to the purchase of large land holdings in the Falklands and their subsequent resale in smaller lots to owner occupiers.

Mr. Garel-Jones: As recommended by Lord Shackleton's report in September 1982, the Falklands Islands Government have followed in recent years a policy of subdivision of large farms into smaller units. A total of 13 large farms have been divided to create 38 new farms. In eight years the number of individual farms has increased from 36 to 92. Further subdivision has been halted until the results of the previous subdivisions have been assessed fully.

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals put forward by Lord Shackleton in 1982 have been implemented in the Falklands Islands and with what results.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Most of the recommendations made by Lord Shackleton and his team in September 1982 have been implemented, such as the establishment of a Falkland Islands Development Corporation, the subdivision of large farms, the development of agriculture and tourism industries, the establishment of a fisheries zone (of 150 miles but not the 200 recommended in the report) and the employment of a chief executive. Others, such as the provision of camp roads are in the process of being implemented. All the recommendations which have been implemented have had a positive effect on the islands' economy.

Major Herbert Harwood (Arrest)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs what representations he has made to the Government in the Greek sector of Cyprus about the arrest of Major (Retd.) Herbert Norton Harwood; what age is the prisoner; what is the state of his health; whether he has been charged with any offence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Mr. Herbert Norton Harwood, a 77-year-old British national resident in Kyrenia, was arrested in Nicosia on 11 September 1990 and charged with photographing National Guard positions without permission. On 4 October 1990 he was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. In consultation with his lawyer he is considering an appeal.

He has received regular consular visits, most recently on 5 October 1990. He did not mention any health problems and appeared fit for his age. Nevertheless, the prison authorities have been reminded of the need to provide him with prompt medical treatment should he require it.

We have made no representations to the Cyprus Government about Mr. Harwood.

St. Helena (Airstrip)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether there has been any progress in the establishment of an airstrip on St. Helena; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We understand that the private company planning to build an airstrip on St. Helena is currently seeking financial backing for the project. We welcome all measures which will improve St. Helena's transport links with the outside world. We have already financed the construction of a replacement ship which from later this year will continue to operate the Island's only regular link with the outside world, and we are considering other measures to reduce St. Helena's isolation.

Cyprus

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the application by Cyprus to join the European Community relates to the whole island of Cyprus; whether he has spoken to the Government in the Greek sector about this application; whether he has spoken to the Government in the Turkish sector about this application; whether the United Kingdom supported this application at the Council of Ministers' meeting in Brussels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The application for European Community membership was submitted by the Government of the Republic of Cyprus. The United Kingdom received representations from both the Government of Cyprus and the leaders of the Turkish Cypriot community. On 17 September, the Council referred the application to the Commission for its Opinion, a purely procedural act, in accordance with Article 237 of the EEC Treaties. In doing so, the Council reaffirmed its longstanding view that the benefits of relations with the European Community should extend to the whole population of the island.

Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council on 17 and 18 September.

Mr. Hurd: The Foreign Affairs Council met in Brussels on 17 September. My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I represented the United Kingdom.

Ministers discussed the Iraq-Kuwait crisis. They reiterated their condemnation of Iraqi policies of aggression. In response to illegal acts against certain EC embassies in Kuwait, they decided to expel military personnel attached to Iraqi embassies and to limit the freedom of movement of other members of their staff. They reaffirmed their commitment to reinforcing United Nations sanctions against Iraq.

The Council discussed provision of short-term economic assistance to the countries most seriously affected by the strict implementation of the sanctions against Iraq, notably Egypt, Jordan and Turkey.

The Council also approved 30 mecu additional emergency aid for the region and agreed that negotiations for an EC/GCC free trade agreement should start as soon as possible and that the Commission should start negotiations with Syria for a third financial protocol.

The Council approved a regulation to extend economic aid to Czechoslovakia, GDR, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia in addition to Poland and Hungary. The Council also decided to remove quantitative restrictions on exports to the EC from Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, GDR, Yugoslavia and Romania. The Council asked the Commission to make preparations for the signature of the Community's Trade and Co-operation Agreement with Romania. The Council had a preliminary discussion of the Commission's paper on association agreements with east European countries and invited the Commission to conduct exploratory talks with Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

Ministers welcomed the continued progress towards German unification and the signature of the two-plus-four settlement. The Council considered the Commission's proposals for the integration of the former GDR territory into the Community, and adopted two interim measures governing the short period between unification and final adoption of the overall package.

The Council confirmed the need to accelerate consideration of Commission proposals to strengthen the Community's Mediterranean policy. The United Kingdom encouraged a greater emphasis on reform of EC trade with the Mediterranean countries. The Council also had a first discussion of the proposed declaration on transatlantic relations. The Council received a progress report from the Commission on the negotiations between the EC and EFTA for the creation of the European Economic Area.

In accordance with article 237 of the treaty of Rome, the Council referred the applications for EC membership received from Cyprus and Malta to the Commission for an Opinion. In the case of Cyprus, the Council reaffirmed its consistent position that the advantages of relations between the EC and the Republic of Cyprus should benefit the whole population of the island and its full support for the independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and unity of Cyprus.

Meetings of the EC-Israel and EC-Algeria co-operation councils were held in the margins of the Council.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Forestry

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether, following the European Community report on forest damage in Europe, his Department intends to raise in the European Community the issue of forestry policy in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland on 26 July at column 599.

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to forestry to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have been asked to reply.

I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Services Committee, arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 12 November to Friday 16 November.

Aflatoxin

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer in the Official Report, 18 July, column 612, if the consideration being given by the Food Advisory Committee to statutory limits of aflatoxin in nuts and nut products extends to nuts and nut products intended for consumption by wild birds.

Mr. Maclean: There are at present no plans to introduce statutory limits of aflatoxin in nuts and nut products for wild birds. My Department, along with that of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, which has responsibility for the general protection of wild birds, is keeping the matter under close review.

Equine Exports

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on how the United Kingdom laws restricting the export of horses and ponies are affected by current discussions in the Council of Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: This subject has not yet been discussed in the Council of Ministers. As explained in the reply given to my hon. Friend on 26 June, we will be pressing to maintain controls on the export of horses and ponies.

EC Budget

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest figure for the provision which has been made for expenditure relating to agriculture in the 1991 EEC Budget; and what was the estimate for 1990.

Mr. Curry: The provisions for expendure relating to agriculture in the European Community's 1990 budget and 1991 draft budget are 30.3 billion ecu (£21.4 billion) and 33.4 billion ecu (£23.9 billion) respectively. In addition there is provision in each year for a monetary reserve of a further 1 billion ecu (£0.7 billion), which may be drawn on if unfavourable movements in the ecu : US dollar exchange rate cause an increase in expenditure on agricultural price support of more than 400 mecu (£286 million).

Surplus Produce

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provision has been made in the 1991 EEC budget for the dumping and destruction of surplus food and wine.

Mr. Curry: The 1991 European Community draft budget provides for 854 million ecu (£610 million) of expenditure on the withdrawal of agricultural produce, not all of which is destroyed.

Sheep

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much additional aid to farmers has been announced by the French Government following incidents involving British sheep and if this additional aid is subject to EEC approval.

Mr. Curry: On 31 August the French Government announced a package of national aid, costing some £120 million, giving immediate help to livestock farmers affected by the drought. A further package of aid to these farmers was announced on 26 September. This involves a three-year restructuring programme; the cost in the first year (1991) will be around £35 million. All national aids must be approved by the European Commission.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the price support system for sheep in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) France; how much is spent on such protection; and what price is guaranteed per pound for producers.

Mr. Curry: The sheep industry in the United Kingdom currently benefits under various support schemes, including particularly the sheep annual premium and the sheep variable premium: sheep producers in less-favoured areas also benefit from hill livestock compensatory allowances. These support payments are made under European Community schemes and, with the exception of sheep variable premium which is payable in Great Britain only and is to be phased out by the end of 1992 at the latest, are available in all member states. In 1989, sheep annual premium and sheep variable premium expenditure amounted to 423 million ecu in the United Kingdom and 196 million ecu in France. The 1990 basic price under the sheepmeat regime is 303.6p/kg (137.7p/lb), but this is subject to seasonal adjustment and the operation of the stabiliser mechanism.

Expenditure

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what provision has been made for expenditure by his Department relating to agriculture in the current financial year; and if he will publish a table showing the actual spending in each of the previous 10 years.

Mr. Curry: Provision for expenditure relating to agriculture in the current year is contained in the Supply estimates. Figures for the previous 10 years are available in the publication "Agriculture in the United Kingdom 1989" and in the annual review of agriculture White Papers. These publications are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Moate: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the level of direct expenditure in support of United Kingdom agriculture not extended via the European Community, in each of the last 20 years.

Mr. Curry: Details of agricultural support in the United Kingdom for the years 1985-86 to 1989-90 (forecast) are set out in the publication "Agriculture in the United Kingdom 1989". Figures for preceding years are contained in the annual review of agriculture White Papers. These publications are available in the Library of the House.

Sheep Farmers

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what actions he proposes to take to safeguard the interests of British sheep farmers in the context of (a) falling prices for lamb, (b) threats of dumping from Ireland and (c) attacks on British lamb exports in France; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I fully appreciate the difficulties faced by sheepmeat producers in this country as a result of a number of factors currently affecting the market. The Government already provide very substantial support to the sheep sector, and have been in constant touch with the French authorities to ensure that our exports flow freely and safely. I shall continue to watch the situation very carefully.

Fishing (North-east)

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in respect of the review of the north-east coast salmon fishery; and when he expects the conclusions of the review to be published.

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has published the results of the inquiry into the north-east coast drift net policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Under the terms of section 39 of the Salmon Act 1986, Ministers are required to carry out a review of salmon fishing on the east coast of Scotland and the north-east coast of England and to lay a report before Parliament as soon as practicable after November last year. The report, incorporating background information collected by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland and the Department will be submitted to Parliament as soon as possible.

Dairy Products

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the relationship between Dairy Crest and the Milk Marketing Board.

Mr. Curry: We receive representations on this subject from organisations and individuals from time to time. The Department monitors the relationship between the Milk Marketing Board and its subsidiary Dairy Crest to ensure that the latter operates on an equal footing with independent dairy companies.

Agricultural Exports (France)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he has taken in respect of French attacks on agricultural exports from the United Kingdom; what further proposals he has to support the United Kingdom farming industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: My colleagues and I have taken every opportunity to make clear to the French authorities that everything possible should be done to ensure the safety of British drivers, livestock and vehicles, allowing our exports to flow freely and safely. The Government already provide very significant support for farmers, both nationally and through our membership of the European Community. I will continue to keep the situation of the agricultural industry under review.

Livestock Industry

Mr. Moate: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to assist the livestock industry to encourage beef consumption; and what are the latest trends and figures.

Mr. Maclean: The Meat and Livestock Commission, which is financed by a statutory levy on the meat industry, is charged, among other tasks, with the promotion of the meat and livestock industry. The latest figure of beef consumption from the national food survey (which does not include beef consumed in restaurants or as processed products) covers the period from April to June 1990. In that period the average person in the United Kingdom consumed 5·13 ounces of beef and veal a week. This compares with 5·62 ounces a week in the same period last year.

Mineral Hydrocarbons

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to introduce further controls on the use of mineral hydrocarbons in veterinary medicines, pesticides or food additives.

Mr. Maclean: Our intention to prohibit the remaining uses of mineral hydrocarbons in food following the advice of the Food Advisory Committee and the Committee on Toxicity was announced to the House on 9 February 1989, at column 781. Proposals to amend the Mineral Hydrocarbons in Food Regulations 1966 were subsequently issued for public comment. The comments received are currently under consideration and I shall make a further announcement on the outcome as soon as possible.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library the report of the committee on toxicology on mineral hydrocarbons.

Mr. Maclean: In this instance the Committee on the Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT) did not produce a report. Its findings were passed directly to the Food Advisory Committee, which in turn advised me of its recommendations. However, the considerations on which the COT based its advice were published in a consultation letter to interested parties on 9 February 1989. I have arranged for a copy of this letter to be lodged in the Library.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: My Department will take all necessary steps to ensure that new legislation or major computer applications wherein personal data, as defined by the Act, are used, will be drawn to the attention of the Data Protection Registrar, and his views sought, before the introduction of such legislation.

The hon. Member will no doubt be aware that the Home Office is currently considering a system to cover the notification by Government Departments of any legislation likely to be sensitive in the area of personal data. My Department will comply fully with its instructions.

Eastern Europe (Imports)

Mr. Moate: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the level of soft fruit imports from eastern Europe; what steps are being taken to monitor quantities and prices; and what is his assessment of whether the European Economic Community and the United Kingdom have the necessary information and power to ensure that such imports are unsubsidised.

Mr. Curry: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have received numerous representations from growers and their representatives about the instability in the Community market for semi-processed soft fruit in recent months. This market is significantly influenced by substantial imports from Poland and Yugoslavia, with which the EC Commission makes annual agreements involving monitoring of quantities and prices of imports. Subsidies on imports from third countries generally are a matter for the EC Commission which has the necessary power to take any appropriate action. Following a request from the United Kingdom, the Commission has now introduced minimum import prices in the face of a disturbed market.

I have continued to press the Commission to implement the undertaking it gave last year when substantial tariff concessions were granted on Polish imports of the products in question. These involved the strengthening of the agreements with suppliers, notably by the introduction of different prices for the different qualities of products involved.

Fur Farms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what agricultural grants are available for fur farms; whether there are grants which apply specifically to fur farms; and what has been the level of agricultural grant uptake by fur farms in the past three years.

Mr. Maclean: Fur farmers are eligible for the same grants under the farm and conservation grant scheme and the farm diversification grant scheme as other farmers. No agricultural grants are targeted specifically to fur farms. Figures indicating the level of grant uptake by farmers do not allow for separate identification of fur farmers.

Live Animals (Export)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list his responsibilities in relation to the export of live animals purely for slaughter.

Mr. Maclean: The Minister has licensing responsibilities for the export of farm livestock from Great Britain under the Export of Animals (Protection) Order 1981. Under the requirements all animals destined for slaughter must be rested for a minimum of 10 hours at an approved export lairage near the port, and be offered food and water. They receive a veterinary inspection for fitness to travel and their loading is supervised. Other orders made under the Animal Health Act 1981 lay down requirements for welfare conditions during export journeys.

There are also responsibilities under sections 40 to 49 of the 1981 Act which were designed to prevent the export of horses and ponies for slaughter.

The Minister is responsible for the issue of health certification for exported cattle and pigs in accordance with the requirements of EC directive 64/432.

Written Answers to Questions

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Advisory Committee on Education and Conduct

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Attorney-General whether the Lord Chancellor has decided whom he proposes to appoint as chairman of the Lord Chancellor's advisory committee on education and conduct.

The Attorney-General: I am pleased to say that, subject to the Courts and Legal Services Bill receiving Parliament's approval, the right hon. the Lord Griffiths MC has accepted the Lord Chancellor's invitation to serve as chairman of the Lord Chancellor's advisory committee on legal education and conduct.

TRANSPORT

A249

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the date for the public inquiry into the dualling of the A249.

Mr. Chope: A public inquiry into my Department's proposals for the A249 Iwade bypass—Bobbing to Kingsferry Bridge—is to start at 10 am on 20 November at Kemsley concert hall, Ridham avenue, Kemsley, near Sittingbourne. A pre-inquiry meeting is fixed for 23 October at the same venue. All those who have expressed an interest will receive personal notification.

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to publish the draft orders for the dualling of the A249 from the M2 Stockbury viaduct to the A2 at Bobbing.

Mr. Chope: My Department hopes to publish formal proposals for the A249—M20 to Bobbing improvement —on 19 October 1990.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Department's officials are aware of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

British Rail

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many British Rail trains operated by fuel-burning locomotives use each day on average the railway systems of (a) the north London link line, (b) Greater Glasgow and (c) the Strathclyde region.

Mr. Freeman: This is an operational matter for British Rail.

Waterloo—Exeter Line

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about progress in re-equipping the Waterloo-Exeter line.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that British Rail is considering the use of some of the class 158 vehicles currently in production, with suitable modifications, for this line in order to replace the present rolling stock as quickly as possible. It might thus be possible to have vehicles in service in about 18 months' time.

A13 (Newham Intersection)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by what date he expects to publish one or more plans for public consultation for a grade intersection between Prince Regents lane and Newham way (A13); and from what date he expects to be able to purchase affected property by voluntary agreement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 15 October 1990]: A public consultation on options for placing Newham way in an underpass beneath Prince Regents lane was held at Newham leisure centre on 12 and 13 October. A questionnaire was available there, and from Newham council offices and the borough library. Respondents have been asked to comment by 9 November. A preferred option will be selected in the light of these comments and it is hoped to publish draft orders by the autumn of next year.

Any requests to purchase property in cases involving hardship will be considered by the Department.

Holloway Road, London

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to introduce red routes to the A1 Holloway road; and what has been the response to his consultation exercise on this.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 15 October 1990]: The consultation exercise brought helpful responses from many individuals, businesses, interested groups, and organisations, and they are now being considered. I hope to make an announcement shortly.

ENVIRONMENT

Chemical Industry

Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition in the Upper Waiting Hall in the Palace of Westminster relating to "The Chemical Industry: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow".

Mr. Trippier: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Services Committee, arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 15 to 19 October.

Sport and Recreation

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish a draft planning policy guidance note on sport and recreation.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State for Wales have today published a planning policy guidance note on sport and recreation in draft for public consultation.

The Government attach great importance to the retention of adequate recreational open space in urban areas. The planning system needs to ensure that adequate land is and continues to be allocated for organised sport and informal recreation. The draft PPG asks local planning authorities to ensure that their policies address local needs, protect valuable sites and identify suitable sites for new provision.

It is particularly important to retain sufficient recreational open space in urban areas to avoid "town cramming". The draft advises local authorities about means of safeguarding open spaces while providing for necessary development.

The PPG also addresses the issues raised by Lord Justice Taylor in his report on the Hillsborough stadium disaster. It is the Government's intention that all first and second division grounds shall be all-seated by the 1994-95 season and third and fourth division grounds by the 1999-2000 season. The draft requests local planning authorities to give sympathetic consideration to development proposals designed to meet these objectives.

Tree Preservation

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a statement on the review of tree preservation policies and legislation.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: On 2 October we published a report by Mr. James Batho commissioned by us as part of that review. I have arranged for copies of the report to be placed in the Library of the House, together with my statement which accompanied its issue.

The Government accept that the tree preservation order system should be maintained in broadly its present form. We plan to issue a consultation paper later this year with detailed proposals to clarify and streamline current procedures, aimed at enhancing their general effectiveness. We also welcome the report's recommendation that local authorities should have a new power to make hedgerow management orders to protect important hedgerows in their areas, with payments to owners to assist upkeep. Further details will be given in the forthcoming consultation paper.

Oxides of Nitrogen

Mr Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the United Kingdom will ratify the Sofia protocol on emission of oxides of nitrogen.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have today ratified the NOx protocol. This commits the United Kingdom to return overall emissions of oxides of nitrogen to 1987 levels by 1994 from all sources. It also commits us to develop further programmes for longer-term reductions based on critical loads. This important step emphasises our determination to deal with both acid rain and ground-level ozone.

Museums and Galleries (Property Transfer)

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why a Treasury minute was not laid before Parliament before the transfer of freehold and leasehold property to the trustees of certain museums and galleries took place.

Mr. Key: In 1986 the Office of Arts and Libraries conducted a review into the relationship between the Property Services Agency and certain museums and galleries. This concluded that these organisations should be untied from PSA for their works services. When the recommendations of this report were being implemented it was decided that the most logical way forward would be for transfers to be made to the trustees of these organisations of the freehold and leasehold properties that they were then occupying rent free. This would remove any remaining element of PSA control. Ministers agreed that these transfers should take place at nil charge as the trustees were not being presented with any assets that they did not already have the use of. The trustees' powers to dispose of property are of course subject to legislative and other constraints.

During 1988-89 and 1989-90, 16 such properties were transferred. The value of 13 of these is approximately £53 million; the other three properties have not yet been valued. Two further properties have been transferred in the current financial year. However, under established procedures, transfers at less than market value, which technically constitute gifts, should be notified to Parliament before they are made. It is normal practice in such cases for the Department proposing to make the gift to arrange with the Treasury for a minute to be presented to the House of Commons giving the particulars of the gift and explaining the circumstances in which it is being made and for the Treasury's assent to the gift to be withheld for 14 days, excluding Saturdays and Sundays, after the issue of the minute except in cases of special urgency.

I very much regret that the correct procedures were not observed in making the transfers of these properties. A further 40 or so properties remain to be transferred to the relevant trustees. Since 1 April 1990 these transfers have become the responsibility of the Office of Arts and Libraries which will arrange for the Treasury minutes to be presented to the House before any further transfers are made.

WALES

Mid-Wales Development

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning his policies for mid-Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: Government policies are directed towards the establishment of a thriving and self-sustaining economy in mid-Wales. The Development Board for Rural Wales has the principal responsibility for the economic regeneration of the area, and its "Strategy for the 1990s" sets out the board's future intentions for mid-Wales. Apart from the DBRW, other sources of economic and industrial assistance are available to mid-Wales through the WDA, WTB and central Government.

Laura Ashley

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the Development Board for Rural Wales concerning the proposed job losses at the Laura Ashley company.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave him on 15 October.

Job Losses (Clwyd)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he will take in Clwyd to counteract the loss of jobs at Brymbo steelworks, Corning at Wrexham and Laura Ashley at Leeswood; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The WDA will take these job losses in Clwyd into account in planning its future activities. We are in close and regular touch with the chairman of the agency on this and other matters.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Tibet

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to assist environmental protection in Tibet.

Mrs. Chalker: To date the Government have received no official request for assistance with environmental protection in Tibet.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Peacetime Emergencies

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received the report from the civil emergencies adviser, Mr David Brook, on the role of local authorities in planning for peacetime emergencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I have received Mr Brook's advice and will be considering it in conjunction with the review I have initiated of the options for the future of civil defence arrangements in the light of developments in east-west relations. This will enable me to consider whether a more coherent approach to emergency planning for the protection of the public in both peace and war can be achieved. I shall—together with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, who has also received Mr Brook's report—announce proposals in due course.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Trade Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a list of finished consumer goods whose exports have more than doubled since 1985, together with the percentage increase in imports and in United Kingdom output.

Mr. Sainsbury: On the basis of trade analysed in terms of the industries of which they are the principal product, consumer goods industries whose exports have more than doubled in value since 1985 are shown in the table, together with the corresponding percentage increase in imports and output.

Industry	Exports	Percentage Increase Imports	Output
Gramophone records and tapes	108	159	90
Electronic consumer goods	128	33	130
Domestic electric appliances	116	22	50
Caravans	183	57	130

Vietnam

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the quotas on the import of goods from Vietnam.

Mr. Sainsbury: The import of those goods, which are normally restricted from state trading countries, are totally restricted from Vietnam. The products covered by the embargo are matches, footwear, TV sets, gloves, headgear, some agricultural products and a wide range of textile products.

The United Kingdom has however quotas on imports on a number of products as shown in the table.

The import of any other goods from Vietnam is not restricted.

Product	Quota Level (1990)
Tableware of porcelain, china or pottery; ornaments or statuettes	£23,100
Bedlinen, tablelinen, curtains; synthetic yarn and woven fabrics of synthetic yarn (MFA categories: 20, 23, 34, 35, 36, 39, 40)	7 tonnes

Rover Group

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has yet replied to the Commission's decision of 17 July on the terms of the sale of Rover Group to British Aerospace.

Mr. Lilley: A reply was sent to the Commission on 14 September setting out the measures taken by the Government to comply with the Commission's decision. The Commission had earlier agreed to extend the deadline for reply by one month to 17 September 1990. The Government informed the Commission that they had issued demands for payment by 17 August 1990 of £42·9 million by BAe and £1·5 million by Rover Group and that, as no payment had been made, they had served writs on both companies to enforce repayment of the principal sums and payment of interest from 18 August 1990. The formal demands for payment were dated 16 August 1990 and the writs were issued and served on 10 September 1990.

The Government then went on to reply to the other points raised by the Commission by giving the specific assurances requested. In particular, the Government assured the Commission that no tax concessions had been given and:

(i) that the tax treatment of BAe and the Rover Group was strictly in accordance with United Kingdom tax law;

(ii) that the statement made by the then Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 4 May 1988 about the operation of the on-sale penalty was now superseded and that the penalty would not be set aside in any circumstances except by a subsequent decision of the Commission;

(iii) that there was no question of BAe having any preferential access to Government assistance and that it would be treated as would any other applicant.

Next Steps

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the progress of the "next steps" initiative in his Department.

Mr. Lilley: On 5 October, I launched the national engineering laboratory as the ninth executive agency within the DTI. The launch of NEL means that more than half my Department's staff now work in executive agencies. As a result, the DTI is able to improve further its ability to deliver cost-effective services.

I am placing a copy of the NEL framework document in the Library. The document explains that the primary aim for NEL is to attain commercial viability by 1994-95. I have also set NEL a number of efficiency targets as follows:

to recover its full economic costs through arm's-length contracts from customers by 1994-95.

non-DTI income as a proportion of full economic cost to grow by 12 per cent. in 1991-92 compared with 1990-91, and to continue to grow so that by 1994-95 two thirds of NEL's total income is non-DTI.

fee-earning hours on arm's-length contracts as a proportion of all hours to increase by 10 per cent. in 1991-92 compared with 1990-91.

5 per cent. increase in average fee-earning hours on arm's-length contracts as a proportion of engineer hours possibly available in 1991-92 compared with 1990-91. Ratio to reach 80 per cent. by 1994-95.

to reduce average per capita office space occupied by 25 per cent. in 1991-92 compared with 1990-91.

to complete development of a commercial accounting system by 1 October 1991.

Hawk Aircraft (Kenya)

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether Export Credits Guarantee Department cover will be provided for the sale by British Aerospace of Hawk aircraft to Kenya.

Mr. Lilley: In view of the importance that the Government attach to this contract, I have instructed ECGD to provide cover under the provisions of section 2(1) of the Export Guarantees and Overseas Investment Act 1978 and under the procedures set out in the answer given by the then Minister for Trade, my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mr. Clark) on 28 June 1988 at columns 164-65.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish a table showing the import penetration and export performance ratios for the electrical and electronic engineering industry as a group in 1968, 1973, 1977, 1985 and 1989 together with the import/export ratios by value and volume for the European Economic Community and for the rest of the world based on 1973 = 100.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 15 October 1990]: The available information is in the table. The figures in the table are based on the NACE (1970) class 34. No information is available for years before 1975 for the European Community.

In 1987, the equivalent ratios for import penetration, export performance and import/export for the current membership of the EC were 16·4 per cent., 16·5 per cent. and 105·4 per cent. respectively.

No information is available for "the rest of the world". The figures in the table are based on current price data. There are no constant price data available.

Iraq

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his estimate of the scale of export guarantee losses arising from the invasion of Kuwait by Iraq.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 15 October 1990]: It has not been the policy of this or previous Governments to disclose the details of ECGD's claims experience with individual countries. It would not in any case be possible at this time to estimate the Department's loss on Iraq and Kuwait, since the full extent of insured costs of manufacture in respect of frustrated contracts will not be known for some time. Claims payments will be made over a number of years, and the eventual loss will be reduced by any recoveries made under arrangements which might follow if and when Iraq eventually seeks to restore normal international relations. For these reasons, the eventual loss which ECGD might face should not be deduced from the value of credits made available to Iraq under the various financial protocols.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Yanomami People

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent contacts he had with the leaders of the Yanomami people; and what support Her Majesty's Government are giving to them (a) aimed at the protection of their environment and traditions and (b) otherwise.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Overseas Development Administration officials met Chief Davi Yanomami, a Yanomami leader, in December 1989 and April 1990. The ODA last month granted £88,000 to Oxfam for a health care project for the Yanomami in the state of Roraima. This project should provide medical benefits and help the Yanomami to care for themselves in future.

Iran

Mr. Nelson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Iran.

Mr. Waldegrave: Diplomatic relations with Iran were resumed on 27 September on the basis of mutual respect and non-interference in each other's internal affairs. We and the Iranians will re-open our embassies in Tehran and London by 27 October. There will be further discussion of the outstanding problems between the two countries. It is the Government's view that these problems will more easily be resolved with diplomatic relations than without them.

BA Flight (Kuwait)

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts were made to contact the passengers of flight BA 199 immediately after their detention on 2 August; and when the ambassador in Kuwait first visited them.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 15 October 1990]: Although the embassy telephones were cut following the Iraqi invasion and movement around town was difficult for several days, the embassy made contact with British Airways shortly after the flight was detained and was able to establish that all the BA 149 passengers were fit and well. As soon as freedom of movement was restored the passengers were visited regularly in their hotels by consular staff.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps were taken to inform British Airways of the situation in Kuwait immediately prior to the landing of flight BA 199 on 2 August.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 15 October 1990]: The captain of BA 149 checked the position with BA staff in Kuwait, who in turn checked with the British embassy, before take-off from Heathrow on 1 August. Three hours before landing he was told by the pilot of a BA plane which had just left Kuwait that all was well there. The aircraft landed without incident, well before Kuwait airport was closed as a result of the invasion.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: I am reminding officials in the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will make a statement on progress made to date by the Fair Employment Commission towards achievement of fair employment as between Protestants and Roman Catholics within its own organisation.

Mr. Needham: I have placed in the Library a copy of a press release issued on 16 October by the Fair Employment Commission which deals with the religious composition of its staff.

Drainage Costs

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the estimated cost to the Department of Agriculture of drainage works arising from new building developments in 1989-90.

Mr. Brooke: A total of £1·8 million.

Meat Industry

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what examination he has made of the implications for the Northern Ireland beef and meat industry of the recent changes in the circumstances of Goodman International; what proposals he has to safeguard Ulster beef producers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 15 October 1990]: The Goodman slaughter plants in Northern Ireland are continuing to trade normally and producers who sell to these plants are not experiencing difficulties. Should there be any disruption or discontinuation of trading by these plants the Government believe that sufficient alternative outlets in Northern Ireland are available to handle all the stock to be slaughtered. I do not anticipate, therefore, the need for any Government action to protect the interests of producers.

Students

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland from what date income support for students was withdrawn; when local social security offices were advised of this date, in what manner students were advised in advance of this date; whether the students who applied before this date will continue to receive this benefit after this date until they resume their studies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 15 October 1990]: Most students ceased to be eligible for income support from 1 September 1990. However, any student who was entitled before 1 September 1990 did not lose entitlement until the resumption of his course of study. Initial guidance was issued to social security offices on 20 August 1990. Information about the new arrangements for student support was contained in a leaflet, copies of which were issued in June 1990 to universities, colleges of education, further education colleges and secondary schools. I have placed copies of the leaflet in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to uprate child benefit annually in line with inflation.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace) on 15 October at columns 920-21.

Resettlement Units

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether the current business plan of the resettlement units executive agency, and the accounts of its first year of operation, are yet available.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The current business plan has been placed in the Library today and it is proposed to place the agency's accounts there on 31 October, once audit is complete.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Football Clubs (Safety)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when his Department will make the necessary changes in taxation regulations to ensure that capital expenditure incurred by football clubs on safety improvement work on football stands in complying with the recommendations of Lord Justice Taylor's report into the Hillsborough disaster becomes eligible for tax relief.

Mr. Maude: Expenditure incurred by clubs to comply with the requirements of a safety certificate already attracts tax relief. The Government do not consider it right to single out football stands for a specific relief when other commercial premises do not generally qualify. Moreover, such a relief would not help the large majority of clubs which are not profitable and do not pay tax. The Government believe that the cash injection of £100 million over five years from the reduction in pool betting duty is a better way of helping league football clubs carry out the improvements recommended by Lord Justice Taylor.

Exchange Rates

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms exist for revaluing or devaluing currencies in the ERM; and when such a mechanism was last used.

Mr. Maude: The central exchange rates of currencies in the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system may be changed by agreement of the members. The last realignment of central rates took place on 8 January this year when the lira moved from wide to narrow bands in the system.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of when the Madrid conditions originally laid down for entry into the ERM will be met.

Mr. Maude: The conditions for entry into the ERM have been met.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the reasons it was decided to modify the Madrid conditions for entry into the exchange rate mechanism.

Mr. Maude: The Madrid conditions have not been modified.

European Community

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his current policy on European monetary union.

Mr. Maude: The Government are fully committed to stage 1 of the Delors report recommendations; a commitment underlined by our decision to enter the exchange rate mechanism. We remain opposed to the imposition of a single currency as prescribed in stage 3 of the Delors report. On 20 June my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer set out alternative proposals for a "hard ecu" and a European monetary fund. We shall be arguing forcefully for our approach in and during the intergovernmental conference on EMU which opens on 13 December.

Interest Rates

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state his current policy on interest rates.

Mr. Maples: Interest rates will continue to be set at an appropriate level in order to bear down on inflation.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 July, Official Report, column 655, what assessment he has made of the implications for the Treasury's policies of the book "End of the Cycle", by Morgan Stanley; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maples: This report is an informative assessment of the economic situations and investment opportunities within the countries of western and eastern Europe. The analyses of these countries show a great deal of insight.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Speller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when his Department first used the Laspeyres-based formula for the retail prices index.

Mr. Maples [holding answer 15 October 1990]: The retail prices index and its predecessor, the cost of living index, have always been based on the Laspeyres formula. These figures were first compiled in 1914. Since 1962 a variant known as the "chain Laspeyres" formula has been used, whereby the weights, while remaining fixed for 12 months at a time, are brought up to date at the beginning of each calendar year.

DEFENCE

Housing Statistics

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Government-owned empty dwellings of (a) one, (b) two, (c) three and (d) four or more bedrooms there are in (i) Glasgow, (ii) Strathclyde region and (iii) Scotland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As at 30 June 1990, the latest date for which figures are available, 1,576 MOD-owned dwellings were vacant in Scotland, of which seven were in Glasgow and 388 were in the Strathclyde region. Many of these properties were either undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work or modernisation, some were already allotted to service families who were due to move in shortly and others were in the process of disposal. A breakdown according to the number of bedrooms could be obtained only with disproportionate effort.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Plum Orchards

Mr. Moate: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about serious frost damage suffered by United Kingdom plum orchards; if he has received representations for maintenance aid to help growers who have modernised orchards and marketing and who are now at risk; and if there is any European Economic Community assistance in this respect.

Mr. Curry: I have received representations from the NFU and individual growers on the possibility of aid for plum producers affected by severe frosts earlier this year. I naturally sympathise with the difficulties experienced by some producers but the Government do not normally offer compensation for the effects of adverse weather. EC assistance is not available for growers in these circumstances.

Farm Incomes

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the cost of supporting existing farm incomes by a system of guaranteed prices instead of import levies.

Mr. Curry: The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development has estimated the value of total transfers to European Community farmers to be some 48 billion ecu in 1989: this gives an indication of the cost of administering all forms of support, including border protection, through a guaranteed price-deficiency payment system. This estimate covers the main products, which account for 75 per cent. of agricultural output, and is based on many assumptions, notably about "world" prices. Details are set out in "Agricultural Policies, Markets and Trade: Monitoring and Outlook 1990": OECD, Paris 1990.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

German Unification

Mr. Page: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the documents relevant to the debate on Friday 19 October on the transitional measures relating to the EC consequences of German unification.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: European Community documents Nos. Com(90)400 on transitional measures consequent upon German unification and 8782/90 on revision of the Community's financial perspective in the light of German unification, the fourth report from the Foreign Affairs Committee on "German Unification: Some Immediate Issues"—House of Commons paper No. 335, the observations by the Government on the report—Cm. 1246—and the seventh report from the Treasury and Civil Service Committee on "International Monetary Arrangements: Eastern Europe"—House of Commons paper No. 431—so far as it relates to German economic and monetary union.

HEALTH

Land Sales

11. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of reduced receipts from land sales on the national health service capital programme.

53. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of reduced receipts from land sales on the national health service capital programme.

91. Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of reduced receipts from land sales on the national health service capital programme.

102. Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of reduced receipts from land sales on the national health service capital programme.

Mr. Dorrell: The state of the property market is one of the many factors that health authorities have to take into account in managing their capital programmes.

Nursing Staff

13. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the Royal College of Nursing to discuss recruitment and levels of nursing staff.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the Royal College of Nursing to discuss recruitment and levels of nursing staff.

52. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the Royal College of Nursing to discuss recruitment and levels of nursing staff.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We attach great importance to the need to recruit and retain sufficient numbers of nursing staff. A wide range of issues relating to this objective are discussed in the various meetings which Ministers and officials regularly hold with representatives of the Royal College of Nursing.

Health Care

17. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to achieve a reduction in inequalities in access to health care between regions and socio-economic groups.

46. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to achieve a reduction in inequalities in access to health care between regions and socio-economic groups.

71. Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to achieve a reduction in inequalities in access to health care between regions and socio-economic groups.

Mr. Dorrell: We are committed to providing a national health service, free at the point of access, that is geographically comprehensive. The NHSCC Act provides the machinery to improve the targeting of NHS resources towards identified needs.

District Health Authorities

18. Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest estimate of the likely cumulative deficit levels for district health authorities in England during the current financial year.

75. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest estimate of the likely cumulative deficit levels for district health authorities in England during the current financial year.

84. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest estimate of the likely cumulative deficit levels for district health authorities in England during the current financial year.

100. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest estimate of the likely cumulative deficit levels for district health authorities in England during the current financial year.

Mr. Dorrell: The NHS management executive is engaged in continuing discussions with regional health authorities. It is not yet possible to identify the number of district health authorities that will have an underlying deficit in 1990-91.

NHS Hospitals

19. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were treated in national health service hospitals in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures for 1978.

Mr. Dorrell: Provisional figures for 1989-90 show almost 7.5 million in-patient cases were treated as compared with some 6 million in 1978—a rise of 23 per cent. Day cases rose even more sharply by 103 per cent. from 562,000 to over 1 million. Over the same period there has been a 10 per cent. rise in new out-patient attendances and a 7 per cent. rise in total out-patient attendances.

Capital Charges

20. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of capital charges on long-stay hospital provision.

59. Mr. Lambie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of capital charges on long-stay hospital provision.

65. Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of capital charges on long-stay hospital provision.

80. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of capital charges on long-stay hospital provision.

Mr. Dorrell: The introduction of capital charges will give managers of long-stay units, as with all other health service hospitals, information which will help them to use their assets more efficiently. Management and accountability of long-stay units will be improved by the increased awareness of the costs of capital.

NHS Trusts

21. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the latest position in respect of hospitals becoming self governing.

54. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress made on public consultation following proposals for the formation of self-governing hospital trusts.

82. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress being made on public consultation following proposals for the formation of self-governing hospital trusts.

86. Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress made on public consultation following proposals for the formation of self-governing hospital trusts.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Easington (Mr. Cummings) earlier today.

103. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many formal applications have now been received for national health service trust status; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A total of 66 applications for trust status have been received from units which wish to become operational on 1 April 1991.

68. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress by the Royal National Orthopaedic hospital in developing national health service trust status.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The North East Thames regional health authority is currently consulting on the application from the Royal National Orthopaedic hospital to become a national health service trust.

51. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the principal benefits that will attend trust status for national health service hospitals.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Units that are established as national health service trusts will have the freedom to manage their own affairs. They will be able to acquire, own and dispose of assets to ensure the most effective use is made of them; make their own cases for capital developments direct to the national health service management executive; borrow money, within annually agreed limits; establish their own management structures; employ their own staff, determine their own staffing structures, and set their own terms and conditions of employment; and advertise their services, within the guidelines set down by professional codes of practice on such advertising. Trusts will be able to use these freedoms to achieve better, faster decision-making to the benefit of patients, their community and their staff.

55. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals have indicated an interest in becoming self-governing trusts; and how many general practices have indicated an interest in applying for their own funds to date.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A total of 66 units have applied to become NHS trusts in the first wave, which will become operational in April 1991. We will be able to announce the number of units which have expressed an interest in becoming NHS trusts in April 1992 by the end of this month. As far as general practices are concerned, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friends the Members for Isle of Wight (Mr. Field) and for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) earlier today.

45. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from health workers and the general public in the north-west, on the need for balloting to occur before hospitals become self-governing national health service trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A number of representations from interested parties in the north-west have been received. We have consistently made clear that ballots are not appropriate. Mersey and North Western regional health authorities are responsible for statutory consultation on proposals to establish NHS trusts in their regions. It is for the regional health authority concerned to determine the manner in which it carries out such consultation and reports the results to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State.

49. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from health workers and the general public within the South Western regional health authority on the need for balloting to occur before hospitals become self-governing national health service trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A number of representations from interested parties within the South Western regional health authority have been received. We have consistently made clear that ballots are not appropriate. The South Western regional health authority is responsible for statutory consultation on proposals to establish NHS trusts in its region. It is for the regional health authority concerned to determine the manner in which it carries out such consultation and reports the results to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State.

30. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the total amount of interest-bearing debts facing proposed self-governing hospital trusts which is now to be written off.

41. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the total amount of interest-bearing debts facing proposed self-governing hospital trusts which is now to be written off.

99. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the total amount of interest-bearing debts facing proposed self-governing hospital trusts which is now to be written off.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Preston (Mrs. Wise) on 23 July at column 77.

Hospital Treatment

22. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the extent to which contracts being made by health authorities for hospital treatment take account of established patient and general practitioner preference for hospital treatment outside district boundaries, particularly in respect of non-budget holding practices.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have made it clear that district health authorities should place contracts in line with GPs' preferences. DHAs are consulting GPs now on referral patterns and analysing their own information on existing patient flows. I expect DHAs to be discussing their contracting intentions with local GPs throughout the autumn.

NHS Reform

23. Mr. Leadbitter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from voluntary organisations regarding the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received many such representations.

83. Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his intention to implement in full in April 1991 that part of the National Health Service and Community Care Act relating to the national health service; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes. It is important that patients and national health service staff reap the benefits of these changes as soon as possible.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the British Medical Association to discuss implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

31. Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the British Medical Association to discuss implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

44. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the British Medical Association to discuss implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

47. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the British Medical Association to discuss implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My last formal meeting with representatives of the BMA specifically to discuss the implementation of our reforms of the NHS took place on 18 October 1989.

Community Care

24. Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the implementation of the community care proposals contained in the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

25. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding funding arrangements for the Government's community care proposals.

27. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from local authorities regarding the Government's proposed changes in the organisation of community care.

29. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has revised his timetable for the implementation of his community care proposals.

34. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from local authorities regarding the Government's proposed changes in the organisation of community care.

42. Mr. Orme: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the implementation of the community care proposals contained in the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

43. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from organisations on the new arrangements for community care; and if he will make a statement.

48. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from organisations on the new arrangements for community care; and if he will make a statement.

56. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the time scale for the introduction of the community care reforms.

60. Mr. James Lamond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from voluntary organisations regarding the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

73. Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the implementation of the community care proposals contained in the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

77. Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from voluntary organisations regarding the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

97. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from local authorities regarding the Government's proposed changes in the organisation of community care.

101. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from voluntary organisations regarding the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the right hon. and hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Members for Barnsley, Central (Mr. Illsley) for Normanton (Mr. O'Brien), for Cumbernauld and Kilsyth (Mr. Hogg) and for Angus, East (Mr. Welsh) earlier today.

28. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the timetable for the implementation of his community care proposals.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Many such representations have been received, from local authorities, health authorities, voluntary organisations and other interested bodies.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received from local authorities on the implementation of community care arrangements since the commencement of the Parliamentary summer recess.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received many such representations.

Indicative Prescribing

26. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in implementing the measures outlined in his further working paper on the indicative prescribing scheme for general practitioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Since the publication of "Improving Prescribing" on 23 May further progress has been made towards implementation of the scheme. Arrangements have been made to hold a series of six seminars in different parts of the country for key NHS personnel who will be closely involved in operating the scheme. Their purpose is to update these personnel on the development of the scheme. The first two seminars were held at Leicester on 5 October and Birmingham on 12 October.

We propose to issue to regional health authorities and family health services authorities later this month further detailed guidance on the financial framework of the scheme and the setting of indicative prescribing amounts.

The introduction and development of the necessary information systems at the Prescription Pricing Authority is also progressing smoothly.

Consultants

32. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the 100 additional consultant posts announced in the White Paper, "Working for Patients", are now in place or have been allocated; and when he expects the process to be complete.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: All the 100 new posts have now been allocated. I announced the first 35, to be appointed in 1989-90, on 30 October 1989 at column 124 and I announced the allocation of the remaining 65 posts, for appointment in 1990-91 and 1991-92, on 27 February 1990 at columns 125-26. Districts are expected to complete the appointment process for the last of the new consultants by early in 1991-92.

NHS Inflation

33. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the levels of health service inflation for each of the last five financial years.

78. Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the levels of health service inflation for each of the last five financial years.

90. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the levels of health service inflation for each of the last five financial years.

Mr. Dorrell: Changes in input unit costs in the national health service over the last five financial years are as follows:

	Changes
1984-85	6·0
1985-86	5·2
1986-87	6·4
1987-88	7·9
1988-89	9·9
1989-90	[1]7·2

[1]estimate

Children Act

35. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the implementation of the Children Act 1989.

36. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the implementation of the Children Act 1989.

66. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the implementation of the Children Act 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Middlesbrough (Mr. Bell) earlier today.

Junior Doctors

37. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in negotiations on proposals for a reduction in the hours worked by junior doctors.

81. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in negotiations on proposals for a reduction in the hours worked by junior doctors.

90. Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in negotiations on proposals for a reduction in the hours worked by junior doctors.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government are very concerned to reduce the hours worked by some junior hospital doctors. For this reason I held a meeting earlier this year with representatives of the medical profession at consultant and junior level, the royal colleges, and NHS management to discuss the way forward. A working group was set up at that meeting to take forward a detailed examination of the issues.

After a second meeting on 20 September, I am delighted to report that excellent progress is being made. The working group has covered a considerable amount of ground in examining both the precise nature of the problem and what can be done further to reduce the long hours still being worked by some junior hospital doctors. As work loads and staffing patterns vary so much between different hospitals, specialties and grades of doctor, the intention is to produce a package of practical measures from which those concerned locally can choose the solutions best suited to their particular circumstances. All parties are aiming to reach broad agreement in principle on specific changes by the end of the year. This will then be followed by a detailed plan for implementation.

All those concerned should face up to the true nature of the problem so that further progress can follow.

Eye Tests

38. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest information on the impact of charging for eyesight checks on attendances for examinations.

69. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest information on the impact of charging for eyesight checks on attendances for examinations.

87. Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest information on the impact of charging for eyesight checks on attendances for examinations.

94. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest information on the impact of charging for eyesight checks on attendances for examinations.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The independent NOP survey, supported by evidence from other similar surveys, suggests that demand for sight tests is now broadly in line with the expected trend.

Patient Care

39. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to promote quality of care for patients.

58. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effects of the National Health Service and Community Care Act on the quality of services to patients; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) earlier today.

Hospital Facilities (North-west)

50. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on plans to improve hospital facilities in the north-west.

Mr. Dorrell: The North Western regional health authority has recently published a statement of its plans to improve hospital services in 1990-91 in the region, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Family Planning

57. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to improve family planning services.

72. Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to improve family planning services.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the replies I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) on 19 June at column 508 and on 27 June at columns 249-50.

Communicable Diseases

61. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in implementing the recommendations on the management of communicable diseases contained in the chief medical officer's report, "Public Health in England".

Mr. Dorrell: In December 1988, circular HC (88) 64 was issued to health authorities. The circular asked health authorities to review the arrangements for the discharge of their responsibilities to improve the health of the population including the control of communicable disease and infection. Health authorities were reminded of the need for effective measures to prevent and control infection and, for example, asked to move towards management arrangements which assigned executive responsibility for the surveillance, prevention and control of communicable disease and infection to a named medical practitioner of consultant status, the consultant in communicable disease control—CCDC.

A survey of training needs for CCDCs was commissioned in 1989 and the resulting report was issued to health authorities. A total of £164,000 has been allocated to health authorities to meet the cost of course fees for CCDC training in the 1990-91 financial year. In addition £119,000 has been made available to the communicable disease surveillance centre to enable it to develop a practical communicable disease control training module for CCDCs.

A consultation document "Review of the Law on Infectious Disease Control" was published in October 1989 inviting comments on proposals to change the relevant legal provision in England and Wales. The responses to this consultation document are currently being considered.

Copies of documents mentioned are available in the Library.

Social Work

62. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are taken by his Department to monitor the ability of individual local authorities to carry out their statutory social work functions.

67. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are taken by his Department to monitor the ability of individual local authorities to carry out their statutory social work functions.

76. Mr. Bidwell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are taken by his Department to monitor the ability of individual local authorities to carry out their statutory social work functions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) earlier today.

Regional Health Authorities

63. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he gives to regional health authorities in planning their capital expenditure programmes.

Mr. Dorrell: Regional health authorities plan their capital expenditure programme according to their needs within the resources available to them. Advice is available centrally to health authorities on the integration of service provision, manpower, finance and estate management in the planning of capital programmes.

Community Health Councils

64. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to increase the powers of community health councils.

85. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to increase the powers of community health councils.

92. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to increase the powers of community health councils.

95. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to increase the powers of community health councils.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are no plans to change the fundamental role of community health councils. Their main interest should be the quality of care and personal attention given to patients by the health service in their locality. The NHS management executive issued guidance on the role of CHCs in the post-reform NHS on 19 September with departmental press notice 90/462, a copy of which is in the Library.

Competitive Tendering

70. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the estimated annual savings generated from competitive tendering within the national health service.

Mr. Dorrell: Up to 1988-89, health authorities in England had achieved savings worth £110 million from competitive tendering of domestic, catering and laundry services. In 1989-90, authorities reported a further £10 million worth of savings from these and other services put out to tender. The anticipated new savings for 1990-91 are £10 million.

Hospital Construction

74. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals have been built in the past 11 years; and how many more are being planned.

Mr. Dorrell: Almost 500 health building schemes, each costing over £1 million, have been completed in the national health service in the last 11 years. A further 462 schemes are currently at various stages of planning, design and construction in a programme worth about £5 billion. This represents the largest sustained building programme in the history of the NHS.

Nurse: in-patient Ratio

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the nurse: in-patient ratio in 1979 and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Manpower statistics cover staff working in hospitals and are collected at a particular time; they do not show what activities within the hospital the staff engaged upon—for example, whether they are providing treatment to in-patients, out-patients, or accident and emergency patients. By contrast, activity statistics show the number of cases treated during the year in national health service hospitals. It is possible however, to give a ratio in terms of the population being served. At 30 September 1979, the number of qualified nursing and midwifery staff, measured in whole-time equivalents, was 438.6 per 100,000 population for England. At 30 September 1988, the number of qualified nursing and midwifery staff, measured in whole-time equivalents, was 508.9 per 100,000 population. These ratios have been adjusted to take account of the change in nurses' working hours, from 40 to 37.5 hours per week, during 1980-81. The average number of in-patients treated in a week was 103,848 in 1979 and 126,654 in 1988.

Out-patient Departments

88. Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any initiatives are being taken to improve out-patient departments.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre Forest (Mr. Coombs) on 1 May at column 532. A further series of projects to be set up in 1990-91 has recently been announced. They will be at Hillingdon, Stockport, Canterbury and Carlisle.

Liver Transplants

89. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many liver transplants were carried out in the United Kingdom in each year from 1979 to 1989.

Mr. Dorrell: According to information provided by the United Kingdom transplants service the number of liver transplants performed in NHS hospitals in the United Kingdom each year from 1982, the first year that figures were available, was as follows:

	Numbers
1982	21
1983	20
1984	51
1985	88
1986	127
1987	172
1988	241
1989	295

NHS Management

93. Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in the streamlining of management within the national health service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Our aim is to streamline the management of the national health service to ensure that it is better able to bring about improvements in health of the population, through services provided effectively, efficiently and economically. Our reforms have ensured a maximum devolution of functions and NHS authorities are now smaller, lines of accountability are clearer and primary health care is becoming better integrated with the hospital and community health service. Under the leadership of its chief executive, Duncan Nichol, the NHS management executive is working closely with health service managers to clarify and simplify their tasks, so that they focus on their core functions and on outcomes. The national programme of health targets which my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State announced on 9 October underlines this new focus.

Dentists

96. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has held with the British Dental Association about the future for general dental practitioners' services.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I met the general dental services committee of the British Dental Association on 12 July, when we agreed that the new contract for general dental practitioners would be introduced on 1 October, and that the proposals were in the best interests of patients, dentists and dentistry.

Family Doctors

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to ensure that the reimbursement rate for the cost of baby sitters whose employment is necessary to allow a family doctor to attend to his patients is set at a level which takes account of the prevailing level of charges made for such services.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No specific payment can be claimed by a family doctor for employing a baby sitter.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the hourly cost of employment of a locum to assist or to substitute for a family practitioner; and if the cost is fully reflected in the financial arrangements made by his Department.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As independent contractors, general medical practitioners make their own arrangements for locum cover. Where a locum is employed due to specific circumstances such as sickness or confinement, family health services authorities may make a direct contribution to the cost of a locum up to £328 for a five-day week. Similar payments can be made in certain circumstances where the GP is absent from the practice for educational purposes. Locum costs in addition to this direct payment, or incurred for reasons unconnected with the circumstances described above, are reimbursed indirectly through the generality of fees and allowances payable in respect of all patients on the GP's list. By these means all locum costs are reimbursed to the profession.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if allowances and capitation fees paid to family doctors under the new arrangements are more or less than the previous out-of-hours allowances.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The only fee payable for out-of-hours services is the night visit fee. Since April 1990, this fee has been split into two with a much higher fee—£43·35 compared to £20·25—payable if the family doctor does the visit himself and a lower fee—£14·45—payable if a deputising service doctor makes the visit. This change was made as part of the performance-related pay introduced under the new contract.

Before April 1990 supplementary capitation fees and a supplementary basic practice allowance were paid for out-of-hours services. These have been abolished and the money redistributed amongst other fees and allowances, in particular by way of capitation fees. These have gone up by some 30 per cent. for patients under 75 and by some 110 per cent. for patients aged 75 and over.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reimbursement is permitted for family doctors for service between 7 and 10 pm in weekdays or during the period to 10 pm on Saturdays, Sundays and bank holidays.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Family doctors are responsible for their patients 24 hours a day for seven days a week. In recognition of this responsibility family doctors receive a capitation fee for each patient on their NHS list. This amounts to £11·95 per annum for each patient under 65, £15·75 per annum for each patient aged 65 to 74 and £30·35 for each patient aged 75 and over. These amounts are to be increased, from 1 January 1991, to £12·40, £16·30 and £31·45 respectively. Home visits between the hours of 10 pm and 8 am attract additional payments of £43·35—£45 from 1 January 1991—if the doctor undertakes the visit himself or the visit is made by another doctor in the same group, and £14·45—£15 from 1 January 1991—if a deputising service doctor makes a visit.

Accident and Emergency Units

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the population served of each district health authority; and how many accident and emergency centres each district has.

Mr. Dorrell [pursuant to his reply, 24 May 1990, c. 341-46]: I regret that the tables published contained inaccuracies.

The corrected infromation is as follows:

GPs (Budgets)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of the general practitioners' budget-holding initiative.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friends the Members for Isle of Wight (Mr. Field) and for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) earlier today.

SCOTLAND

Local Government Finance

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland and the Borders who are currently paying the community charge did not previously pay the rates.

Mr. Lang: We estimate that about 1·9 million more people in Scotland are liable to pay the community charge than were liable to pay domestic rates. The information for Borders region is not available centrally.

Sandeels

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many tonnes of sandeels have been taken in Scottish coastal waters by commercial fishermen in each of the last five years; and what is his estimate of the annual sustainable yield.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Sandeel catches, in tonnes, landed into Scotland from Scottish inshore waters in the last five years are:

	tonnes
1985	35,809
1986	36,429
1987	21,705
1988	35,283
1989	24,585

Sandeels are short-lived, so the stocks sizes are very dependent on recruitment which is neither predictable nor constant. The concept of annual sustainable yield is therefore not appropriate for species such as sandeels.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many vessels crossed the 4 deg. line in June 1989; and what percentage radioing in were called in for inspection.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In June 1989 a total of 514 calls were received from vessels indicating that they were intending to cross the 4 deg W line. None of these vessels was called in for physical inspection.

Arrestment of Wages

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will seek to confer powers of arrestment of wages on local authorities in Scotland similar to those available to local authorities in England and Wales in respect of the collection of poll tax from persons evading payment but able to pay.

Mr. Rifkind: The powers available to local authorities to pursue arrears of community charge from a debtor by means of an earnings arrestment are those which are already available to a range of creditors under the terms of the Debtors (Scotland) Act 1987. I do, of course, keep all aspects of the community charge under review, but I have no plans at present to amend these provisions as they relate to community charge arrears cases.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar, all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I am reminding my officials of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation that might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Public Rented Housing

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, what financial help the Government propose to give to councils to build new public sector rented accommodation in areas where there is a shortage of such accommodation.

Mr. Rifkind: The housing capital allocations which the Government make available to local authorities may be used to fund the building of new council housing if this is seen by local authorities as a priority in their areas. It is for local authorities to determine their own policies and priorities, based on their assessment of housing needs in their districts, and to programme capital expenditure accordingly within the resources made available. If councils consider that additional council housing is necessary, they should in the first instance include proposals in the housing capital programmes they are due to submit to my Department by 2 November. Capital allocations for 1991-92 will be determined, as in previous years, in the light of the aggregate resources available and the competing requirements of all 56 housing authorities.

Hospices

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hospices there are in each of the counties of Scotland; and what is his policy regarding the expansion of hospice provision.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The numbers of hospices within each regional and islands council area are as follows:

Area	Number
Borders	1 (Independent)
Central	1 (Independent)
Dumfries and Galloway	1 (NHS)
Fife	Nil
Grampian	1 (NHS)
Highland	1 (Independent)
Lothian	3 (Independent)
Orkney	Nil
Shetland	Nil
Strathclyde	8 (Independent)
Tayside	2 (NHS)
Western Isles	Nil
	18

With effect from 1 April 1990, the 12 independent hospices in Scotland that require no contribution from patients have received Government funding of at least 50 per cent. of their running costs. This initiative is designed to ensure that the partnership which exists between the NHS and the hospice movement is fostered and the hospices enabled to grow and develop.

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the annual budget for the Scottish Development Agency in real terms in each year since its establishment to the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: The information is set out in the table.

	£ million at 1989-90 prices
1976-77	54·6
1977-78	126·2
1978-79	150·3
1979-80	161·7
1980-81	165·5
1981-82	150·5
1982-83	176·5
1983-84	159·3
1984-85	154·3
1985-86	162·9
1986-87	157·3

Health Minister

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many meetings the Minister in his Department with responsibility for health has had with hon. Members in each of the past five years.

Mr. Rifkind: Information on the number of official meetings that my hon. Friend the Minister for education and health has had with hon. Members to discuss health matters is as follows:

	Number
[1]1987	6
1988	19
1989	17
[2]1990	10

[1]After 15 June.
[2]To 30 September.

Crime

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the figures of crime rates in Scotland for each year since 1974.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table.

Crimes recorded by the police, Scotland 1974-89

Year	Number	Rate per 100,000 population
1974	233,552	4,456
1975	281,485	5,380
1976	317,877	6,074
1977	363,382	6,953
1978	334,957	6,426
1979	346,680	6,662
1980	364,587	7,020
1981	408,204	7,880
1982	435,081	8,421
1983	448,260	8,703
1984	474,914	9,229

Year	Number	Rate per 100,000 population
1985	461,970	8,994
1986	463,837	9,058
1987	481,230	9,413
1988	469,986	9,226
1989	493,385	9,692

Notes:

1. The figures for recorded crime in this table are based on the revised classification of crimes and offences which was introduced at the beginning of 1980.
2. Following the reorganisation of local government in Scotland in 1975, there was greater consistency in recording crimes.
3. Prior to 1980, the figures include crimes reported to the Procurator Fiscal by agencies other than the Police (for example the Department of Health and Social Security) in which a prosecution was taken.

Community Care

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the full implementation of community care schemes in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have nothing of substance to add to the written reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend to my hon. Friend the Member for Tayside, North (Mr. Walker), on 18 July 1990. The implementation of the arrangements referred to in this reply is proceeding. A timetable for issuing of guidance circulars and related initiatives was sent by my Department to local authorities and health boards on 26 September and a copy has been placed in the Library.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what studies have been carried out by Her Majesty's Government in Scotland (a) about health problems produced by working hours of junior doctors and (b) about the effect of such problems on junior doctors' performance.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None, but it is Government policy to improve the working arrangements of junior doctors.

Eye Tests

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many eye tests were carried out in the first seven months of each year since 1983 in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information about NHS sight tests carried out under the general ophthalmic service in Scotland is collected centrally on a quarterly basis only. Information for seven-month periods is not centrally available.

Dental Tests

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many dental tests were carried out in the first seven months of each year since 1981 in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information about NHS dental examinations carried out under the general dental service in Scotland is collected centrally on a quarterly basis only and published annually in "Scottish Health Statistics". Information for seven-month periods is not centrally available.

Second Homes

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of second homes for each district and island council in Scotland on the basis of information collected for the community charge.

Mr Lang [holding answer 15 October 1990]: Information on second homes as such is not collected for the purpose of levying the community charge. The number of premises liable for the standard community charge for each district and islands council area as at 1 July 1990—figures which include holiday homes and certain vacant houses as well as second homes—is set out in the table.

Capercaillie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the conference convened by the Nature Conservancy Council, at his request, on the capercaillie.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 15 October 1990]: As yet, no date has been set for the meeting, to which scientific, land use and sporting interests will be invited. Its purpose will be to identify the information which is required to develop a conservation strategy for capercaillie.

Hypertension

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision is made within Scotland for research into hypertension and treatment of cardiac failure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 15 October 1990]: A wide range of research into hypertension and cardiac failure has been supported by the Scottish Home and Health Department throughout the 1980s at a cost of £239,000. In addition the Medical Research Council's blood pressure unit in Glasgow is conducting research in this field.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list research projects currently being undertaken in Scotland into multiple sclerosis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 15 October 1990]: The Scottish Home and Health Department is not currently supporting research into multiple sclerosis, but favourable consideration would be given to any application for funding for soundly based research projects.

PRIME MINISTER

Monetary Developments (EC)

Q19. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister what representations and views she has received from member states of the EEC about United Kingdom proposals on monetary developments to be considered by the intergovernmental conference; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The United Kingdom's proposals for a "hard ecu" have been widely welcomed by our Community partners as a positive, constructive contribution to the on-going debate on what should follow stage 1 of economic and monetary union. We will continue to advance our proposals before and during the intergovernmental conference which opens on 13 December.

Natural History Museum

Q150. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will pay an official visit to the natural history museum.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

General Elections

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if she will bring forward proposals for a fixed-term Parliament with set dates for general elections.

The Prime Minister: No.

EC Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the items which Her Majesty's Government have asked to be discussed at the European Community intergovernmental conference.

The Prime Minister: The paper prepared by Foreign Ministers and endorsed by the June Dublin European Council, the conclusions of which were deposited in the Library of the House, covers all the areas which Her Majesty's Government would like to be discussed. The United Kingdom is playing an active part in the preparations for the intergovernmental conferences and is making specific suggestions as appropriate within the broad lines set down by that document.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the officials and Ministers who will represent Her Majesty's Government at the forthcoming European Council's intergovernmental conference.

The Prime Minister: No decisions have yet been taken on who will represent Governments at the intergovernmental conferences on economic and monetary union and on "political union". The size and composition of national delegations will be decided nearer the time for each meeting.

Economy

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the changes in the economy and exchange rate mechanism which have occurred since her reply on 30 January 1986, Official Report, column 1091.

The Prime Minister: Since the first quarter of 1986 the underlying improvement in the economy seen since this Government took office in 1979 has continued. Up to and including the second quarter of 1990, output rose by 15·5 per cent., business investment increased by 44 per cent. and real personal disposable income was 23 per cent. higher. By March this year there were over 2·5 million more people in work and in August unemployment was over 1,400,000 lower. A period of over-rapid demand growth in 1987 and 1988 led to a resurgence of inflationary pressures, but tight monetary policy has now slowed demand, and a fall in inflation will shortly follow. Since 30 January 1986 both the peseta and the pound sterling have joined the exchange rate mechanism. The lira moved from wide to narrow bands within the mechanism earlier this year. Between January 1986 and January 1987 there were three other realignments of central rates within the system.

Engagements

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 16 October.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 16 October.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 16 October.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 16 October.

Mr. Hind: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 16 October.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 16 October.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 16 October.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister, to list her official engagements for Tuesday 16 October.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty the Queen.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer of 19 July, Official Report, column 674, what assessment she has made of the implications for her policy of the book "End of the Cycle", by Morgan Stanley; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: This report is an informative assessment of the economic situations and investment opportunities within the countries of western and eastern Europe.

Demographic Trends

Mr. Wray: To ask the Prime Minister what specific measures Her Majesty's Government are taking in order to address the economic and social effects of the changes in demographic trends, in particular the reduction of births.

The Prime Minister: Each Minister in charge of a Government Department takes due account of changes in demographic trends when putting current policies into effect and when formulating proposals for the future.

Sanctions

Mr. Wray: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the Government's policy in respect of the use of sanctions in international or foreign affairs.

The Prime Minister: Where there is flagrant violation of international law such as the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait, comprehensive sanctions, collectively and effectively implemented, may be an appropriate response. Each case must, however, be examined individually, bearing in mind the objectives of our policy and the likely effectiveness of sanctions in achieving those objectives.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 17 October 1990

PRIME MINISTER

Natural History Museum

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Prime Minister whom she intends to appoint to replace Sir Gerald Ronson on the board of trustees at the natural history museum.

The Prime Minister: There are at present no vacancies on the board of the natural history museum to which I appoint but any new appointments will be announced in due course.

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government on seeking a revaluation of the sterling exchange rate mechanism band.

The Prime Minister: Together with our European partners we are fully committed to maintain the system of central rates and intervention limits agreed with them over the weekend of 6 and 7 October.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if she has anything to add to her statement of 12 July 1989, Official Report, column 518, about the conditions for United Kingdom adherence to the European monetary system.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 15 October at columns 928-29.

Single European Currency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the reply of the Lord President of the Council to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Sparkbrook (Mr. Hattersley), Official Report, 26 June, columns 179-80, whether she will make a further statement on progress towards a single European currency.

The Prime Minister: The Government remain opposed to the imposition of a single European currency as prescribed in stage 3 of the Delors report. The Chancellor of the Exchequer set out the Government's alternative proposals for developments beyond stage 1 on 20 June. These include a new institution, the European monetary fund, and a common European currency, the hard ecu.

Economy

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the changes in economic circumstances which have taken place since 16 September.

The Prime Minister: Since 16 September there has been further evidence that sustained tight monetary policy backed by firm budgetary control has now checked demand growth and is reducing inflationary pressures in the economy. The Chancellor was able to announce, with effect from 8 October, a one-point reduction in interest rates and, at the same time, United Kingdom entry to the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister how much was spent by her office on official hospitality in 1989-90.

The Prime Minister: The cost of official hospitality met by my office during 1989-90 was £27,427.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if she will provide the final figures for 1989-90 for (a) the cost of maintaining and running No. 10 Downing street and additional costs at Chequers, (b) the grant-in-aid to the Chequers Trust and (c) the costs on a consistent basis and expressed at constant 1984-85 prices.

The Prime Minister: The figures requested are as follows:

(a) Cost of maintaining and running 10 Downing street and additional costs at Chequers (1) (2) (3)
1989-90—£7,669,276

(b) Grant in aid to the Chequers Trust
1989-90—£238,000

(c) Costs at (a) and (b) in 1984-85 price terms (4)
1989-90 (a) £5,856,878
(b) £181,756

Notes:

(1) The figures include costs at both 10 Downing street and Chequers; the information is not available by location.

(2) Salaries and wages, notional pension liability, administration costs, the costs of office services and the grant in aid to the Chequers Trust are included. The Prime Minister's salary is excluded.

(3) These totals are calculated on a consistent basis with the total for 1986-87 in sub-paragraph (a) of the reply to the hon. Member on 23 October 1987 at column 846. If office services costs are excluded (to produce a figure consistent with those at sub-paragraph (c) of that reply) the total is:
1989-90 £7,155,708 £5,464,676 (5)

(4) Constant costs have been calculated using the Treasury's GDP deflator for 1989-90 rebased to 1984-85.

(5) At 1984-85 prices.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if she will provide the final figure for 1989-90 for the total cost to public funds of all her offices, duties, accommodation and expenses.

The Prime Minister: The total cost of all my offices in 1989-90 was £7,704,396 (1).

Note:

(1) Salaries and wages, notional pension liability, administration costs, and the grant in aid to the Chequers Trust are included. My salary as a Cabinet Minister is also included. My pay and allowances as a Member of this House are excluded.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister what was the total cost of travel incurred by her office in 1989-90.

The Prime Minister: The total cost of my travel and that of my staff in 1989-90 was £948,656.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Know-how Fund

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much money (a) has been and (b) is to be allocated to each country under the know-how fund.

Mrs. Chalker: A total of £50 million has been allocated to Poland, and £25 million to Hungary both for expenditure over a period of years. The know-how fund was extended to the German Democratic Republic and Czechoslovakia in March and April respectively. No specific country financial limits were announced. The know-how fund for the GDR ceased on 3 October.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the projects funded by the know-how fund in each of the countries of eastern and central Europe since its inception.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer to the replies I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) on 14 March at column 236, to my hon. Friend the Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston (Dr. Woodcock) on 13 June at column 213 and to my hon. Friends the Members for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) and for Hazel Grove (Sir T. Arnold) on 2 July at column 417. The additional activities approved since then under the know-how fund are as follows:

SOCIAL SECURITY

Community Charge

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the poll tax benefit case load, as at 31 May, for (a) Coventry, (b) Warwickshire and (c) each standard region.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as all the information becomes available.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to raise the level of invalid care allowance to the level of other income maintenance benefits.

Mr. Scott: The Government are committed to increasing invalid care allowance in line with movements in the retail prices index.

Refugee Monitoring

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when the refugee monitoring and review programme was started at Woodgrange Park house, Forest Gate, London; and how many refugee cases were then in the office;

(2) what method of identifying refugee status was used when fraud section staff inspected files at Woodgrange Park house, Forest Gate, London;

(3) how many fraudulent claims have been discovered through the refugee monitoring and review programme at Woodgrange Park house, Forest Gate, London.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No system of monitoring and controlling claims from refugees has been used at Woodgrange Park house. Consequently, there has been no such identification of fraudulent claims. Normally statistics are not held on the number of claims from refugees, but in order to assess the resources needed to deal with an influx of claims, a special count was made on 19 July 1990. Identification of these claims was made in the normal way from claim forms, and as a result a total of 1,200 claims from refugees was identified on that date.

Pensioners

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the number of men over retirement age; and what number are in receipt of means-tested benefits.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In mid-1988 there were approximately 3·5 million men over age 65 in Great Britain. Of these an estimated 1·1 million were in receipt of an income-related benefit.

Hostels

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what arrangements he has made to transfer the money made available by the October 1989 changes in hostel dwellers' benefit entitlements to alternative funding sources.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In line with the announcement made by my right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State on 16 March 1989 at columns 546-54, funds will be transferred from the Department of Social Security as follows:

Department	Allocation
Department of the Environment (for the Department of Health)	For local authority social services departments in England
Home Office	For probation, bail and after care hostels
Scottish Office	For local authority social work departments in Scotland
Welsh Office	For all relevant hostels in Wales

In addition, a small proportion of the available total will be retained by the Department of Social Security for the Resettlement Agency.

The other Departments concerned will be initiating discussions about consequent arrangements for hostel funding from April 1991 with local authorities and other interested parties. Details of temporary payments currently being made to hostels by the Department of Social Security are being provided to these Departments to inform their discussions.

Mr. John Pattinson

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the Medical Appeal Tribunal in Liverpool to arrange another hearing for Mr. John Pattinson, case no. L195/5/90, who first made a claim for industrial injury in 1983.

Mr. Scott: I have written to my hon. Friend.

Benefit Payments (Reviews)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the returns from each local office requested in circular RD TECH 100/90, showing the number of payments made and the total amount paid to claimants as a result of reviews following the commissioners' decisions CIS/144/89 and CIS/180/89.

Mr. Scott: Returns received up to and including 11 October 1990 are shown in the table.

Social Fund

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for review were received during the period April 1989 to March 1990 inclusive in respect of (a) social fund community care grants, (b) social fund budgeting loans and (c) social fund crisis loans, by each of his Department's local offices at Eston, Hartlepool, Middlesbrough, Redcar and Stockton, and how many of each of these applications for review resulted in revised decisions.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 23 July 1990, columns 88-89]: Some of the information given in the table was found to have been misinterpreted. The corrected information is as follows:

April 1989 to March 1990

	Applications received	Decisions revised
Eston
Community care grants	98	23
Budgeting loans	251	57
Crisis loans	9	4
Hartlepool
Community care grants	163	38
Budgeting loans	270	57
Crisis loans	9	3
Middlesbrough
Community care grants	569	158
Budgeting loans	771	295
Crisis loans	44	13
Stockton
Community care grants	520	164
Budgeting loans	561	173
Crisis loans	17	6
Redcar
Community care grants	127	49
Budgeting loans	162	48
Crisis loans	4	2

Some of the revised decisions will refer to review applications made in a previous period and decisions may not have been made on some of the review applications made in the period shown.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Bingo Clubs

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in support of relaxing present restrictions on advertising licensed bingo clubs; what consideration he is giving to this question; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since the reply by my right hon. and learned Friend to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 19 March at column 455, we have received a further 25 letters from hon. Members about the controls on the advertising of licensed bingo clubs.

I understand that in April the Bingo Association of Great Britain resumed discussions with the Gaming Board for Great Britain on the scope, if any, for some partial relaxation of the controls on bingo club advertising, and that the board hopes soon to be in a position to report, for our consideration, its advice in light of these discussions.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report the number of occasions in the past 10 years when public interest immunity certificates have been issued concerning matters before coroners and other courts preventing members of police forces and others within the remit of his Department from attending such courts, and to prevent such courts from hearing details of operations; indicating which operations were involved and how many individuals were covered by such certificates.

Mr. Waddington: There is no systematic record kept centrally of all cases in which public interest immunity is claimed in respect of police forces and others within the responsibility of the Home Office and it would not be possible to provide the information sought except at disproportionate cost.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report the number of occasions in the past 10 years when public interest immunity certificates have been issued concerning matters before coroners and other courts preventing officials of his Department and others within the remit of his Department from attending such courts, and to prevent such courts from hearing details of operations, indicating which operations were involved and how many individuals were covered by such certificates.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: It would not be possible to provide the information sought except at disproportionate cost.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Sri Lanka about human rights violations in that country, including harassment and murder of lawyers.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have made our concern about human rights known to the Sri Lankan Government on many occasions, both bilaterally in London and in Colombo, and together with our European partners.

Conventional Forces

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 26 July, Official Report, column 538, when he expects the high-level task force to complete its examination of further limitations on the offensive capabilities of conventional armed forces beyond those currently under negotiation at the CFE talks; and if he will place a copy of their report in the Library upon completion.

Mr. Waldegrave: The London summit declaration set out the alliance's position that once a CFE treaty has been signed follow-on talks on the basis of the same membership and mandate should begin with the aim of building on the current agreement including measures to limit manpower in Europe. There is now agreement on this in Vienna and the HLTF is currently preparing the alliance's negotiating position. The London declaration also undertook to seek new conventional negotiations within the CSCE framework in the 1990s on further far-reaching measures to limit the offensive capability of conventional armed forces in Europe so as to prevent any nation from maintaining disproportionate military power in Europe. The HLTF will be formulating a detailed position for these talks.

A copy of the London summit declaration has been placed in the Library. The contents of HLTF papers are, however, classified.

EMPLOYMENT

Association of Community Enterprises—Highlands and Islands

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps his Department has taken to try to expedite payment by the European social fund of an interim grant payment due to the Association of Community Enterprises—Highlands and Islands in June, following representations to his Department about the delay in receiving payment.

Mr. Forth: The association's claim for its interim payment from the European social fund was received in my Department on 22 June, and forwarded to the European Commission on 26 June.

I understand from the Commission services that an interim payment of £42,089 was finally approved on 24 September, and that authority to pay should be received later this month.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Under-fives

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to publish the report on under-fives prepared by the group chaired by the hon. Member for Mitcham and Morden (Mrs. Rumbold); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend has just received, and is now considering, the report of the committee of inquiry chaired by my hon. Friend the Member for Mitcham and Morden. He will make a further statement in the near future.

Iraqi Students

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy in relation to the provision of loans to Iraqi students at universities in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Students, of whatever nationality, are entitled to loans from the Student Loans Company provided that they meet the eligibility requirements set out in the Education (Student Loans) Regulations 1990. These include the condition that a student should satisfy the ordinary residence requirements set out in the schedule to the regulations or in the Students' Allowances (Scotland) Regulations 1987, or be a refugee—or a spouse or child of a refugee—who has been ordinarily resident in the British Islands since being recognised as a refugee.

HEALTH

Young People (Secure Accommodation)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, for each of the years 1975, 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989 the names of those community homes and other facilities providing secure accommodation for young persons according to each local social services authority area.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information in the form requested is not available for the full period. The table gives details of approved secure units in England, and their managing local authority, as at 31 December 1989. Comparable details covering the period 1984-1988 are given in the annual publication "Children Accommodated in Secure Units During the Year Ending 31 March", copies of which are available in the Library.

In addition, two centrally provided youth treatment centres are available. St. Charles YTC at Brentwood, Essex opened in 1971 and Glenthorne YTC in Birmingham opened in 1978.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest total cost figure for military assistance during the recent ambulance workers' dispute; and whether more bills are expected from the Ministry of Defence.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The final total cost of military assistance was £7·2 million. Bills for this amount have been received and paid.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he was consulted by the European Investment Bank over its decision to provide further loan finance to the channel tunnel project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Under the EIB statute, the bank is obliged to consult the host Government before making a loan to any project. As is the case with all proposed loans to projects in the United Kingdom, the Government were consulted on a further loan for the channel tunnel project.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if it remains the policy of Her Majesty's Government not to engage in the provision of public funding for the channel tunnel project.

Mr. Freeman: Yes. Section 2 of the Channel Tunnel Act 1987 specifically prohibits the provision of Government funds or guarantees for the project.

Glasgow-London Line

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to meet British Rail to discuss the shelving of the £750 million rail scheme for the Glasgow-London route; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail has not shelved its scheme for investment in the west coast main line from London to Glasgow, and currently plans for the first of the new trains to come into operation in the mid-1990s.

Moray Adventurer

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about an incident involving the fishing vessel Moray Adventurer at noon on 4 October; what investigations have been or will be carried out; whether the report will be made public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patrick McLoughlin [holding answer 15 October 1990]: A report was received by HM coastguards on 4 October that the fishing vessel Moray Adventurer had an object caught in her nets and was at one stage in danger of capsizing. The incident is being investigated by the marine accident investigation branch. No decision can be made about whether or not to publish a report on the incident until the investigation has been completed.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EC Stocks

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest estimate of the stocks of skimmed milk powder and butter in the European Economic Community; and what was the position 12 months previously.

Mr. Curry: Physical stocks of skimmed milk powder and butter (including aided private storage) in the European Community at the end of September were as follows:

	(Tonnes)
	1989	1990
Butter	252,689	378,168
Skimmed milk powder	4,811	333,406

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will extend the suckler cow premium by putting young bulls into intervention.

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend the Minister has already announced that the suckler cow premium will be paid at the maximum rate allowed under Community legislation in the less-favoured areas, and will be maintained at last year's rate for other producers. This will provide an extra £8 million for beef farmers. Intervention coverage has also been extended, and expenditure so far this year has been over £130 million. It would be difficult to justify any further extension in intervention coverage in view of the substantial cost of existing measures.

Food Advisory Committee

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has received to date from the Food Advisory Committee concerning health claims made for foods not requiring a medical product licence; what advice he has given to the European Commission on the issue; and when he intends to introduce new draft regulations.

Mr. Maclean: The Food Advisory Committee is currently considering the question of health claims as part of the review of food labelling which I announced on 15 November 1989. My right hon. Friend expects to receive its report at the end of the year and it is likely that the European Commission will be advised of the relevant findings of the review. Any proposals for further legislation controls will be the subject of wide consultation with interested parties before any new draft regulations are introduced.

Beef

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met European Commission Agriculture Ministers to discuss trade in beef.

Mr. Gummer: I have regular contacts with Agriculture Ministers from other Community countries, in particular during meetings of the Agriculture Council. Matters related to the trade in beef are discussed as the need arises.

Zoonoses Order

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will repeal the Zoonoses Order.

Mr. Maclean: I have no plans to do so.

Dairy Products

Mr. John Marshall: To ask Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest estimate of expenditure by the European Commission on the dairy sector during the 1990-91 dairy marketing year.

Mr. Curry: Estimates of EC expenditure are not available on a market year basis. The preliminary draft budget for 1991 includes provision of 4,927 million ecu (£3,433 million) for the dairy sector. This does not take account of any costs arising from German unification, which are still under consideration.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes have occurred in the level of consumption within the European Community of dairy products since 1983.

Mr. Curry: Consumption of the major milk products in 1983 and 1989, including disposals of skimmed milk powder for animal feed, was as follows:

'000 tonnes	[1] 1983	[2] 1989
Butter	1,520·0	1,571·0
Skimmed Milk Powder	1,606·0	1,057·0
Cheese	3,631·0	4,134·0

[2] EC12

Agricultural Exports (France)

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he places on the effect of recent French action on the quantity and value of British-produced lamb sold to France.

Mr. Curry: The level of British lamb exports is influenced by a number of different factors. We cannot identify the effects of individual factors.

Less-favoured Areas

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider interim relief for farmers in less-favoured areas by introducing the special premium scheme for ewes during the current financial year.

Mr. Curry: The payment to producers in the less-favoured areas (LFAs) of an additional 4 ecu per ewe in sheep annual premium, due to come into effect from the 1991 marketing year, could not be made this year without a proposal from the European Commission and agreement by member states. This is unlikely to happen. All sheep producers, however, will benefit from the decision to bring forward the second advance of annual premium; and we have decided to pay suckler cow premium at the maximum possible rate in the LFAs.

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will monitor beef and lamb imports from eastern Europe with a view to reducing the volume if it proves detrimental to the interests of British producers.

Mr. Curry: I have made clear to the Commission our concern about the effects which such imports might have on the market and the need to monitor the situation closely.

British-produced Meat

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he places on the effect, according to quantity and variety, of the hot summer on sales of British-produced meat.

Mr. Curry: It is not possible to isolate the effects of the hot weather from other factors affecting meat consumption. The latest figure for consumption of meat and meat products from the national food survey (which covers only domestic consumption and does not distinguish between home-produced and imported meat) covers the period from April to June 1990. The table gives the estimated average consumption per person per week for that period, for the same period in 1989, and for the first quarter of 1990.

	Ounces per person per week
	Second quarter 1989	First quarter 1989	Second quarter 1990
Meat and meat products	36·45	33·99	35·77
of which beef and veal	5·62	6·06	5·13
mutton and lamb	2·65	2·72	2·75
pork	3·15	3·21	3·30
bacon and ham	4·88	4·12	4·29
poultry and cooked chicken	8·00	7·25	8·88

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of knackermen and slaughterhouses to discuss working conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I, and my officials, have regular meetings with representatives of knackermen and slaughterhouses to discuss a wide range of issues. However, working conditions in knackers yards and slaughterhouses are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

Nuclear Emergency

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in publishing his Department's arrangements for dealing with a nuclear emergency in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. Friend the Minister announced on 26 March this year at column 56 his intention to publish details of the Department's arrangements at each of the major United Kingdom nuclear sites. Plans have now been published for the nuclear installations at Sizewell, Bradwell, Hinkley Point, Oldbury, Winfrith, Capenhurst and Springfields. Copies are being sent to public libraries in the vicinity of each installation and have also been placed in the Library of the House. Plans for other installations will be issued as they become available.

Wild Birds

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what checks are carried out by his Department to monitor the transportation conditions of wild birds being imported into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: The Ministry is responsible for legislation under the Animal Health Act 1981 to protect the welfare of animals and birds during transport and to prevent the introduction of diseases. This legislation is enforced by local authorities. Ministry veterinary staff maintain close liaison with the authorities concerned, particularly with the corporation of the city of London which operates the Animal Quarantine Station (AQS) at Heathrow airport through which all commercial consignments of wild birds are routed. On release from the AQS imported birds are held for 35 days at quarantine premises approved by the Ministry. During this period the health and welfare of the birds is monitored by veterinary inspectors including Ministry veterinary officers.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has regarding the number of wild birds imported into the United Kingdom during 1988 and 1989 which were dead on arrival or died in quarantine.

Mr. Maclean: Details of mortalities in imported wild birds in 1988 compiled by the Ministry were published in December 1989 and placed in the Library of the House. The figures show that of 184,577 birds imported, 4,732 (2·6 per cent.) were found to be dead on arrival and a further 20,619 (11·2 per cent.) died during quarantine. A similar analysis of imports in 1989 is currently being compiled.

EC Food Surpluses

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what increases or decreases have taken place in the surpluses of food and wine in the EEC, both in public and private storage, over the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available; and if he anticipates that they will increase or decline over the next 12 months.

Mr. Curry: The information is as follows:

Commodity	1989	1990	Reference date
EC Intervention Stocks ('000 tonnes)
Butter	30	187	September
SMP	5	333	September
Beef	123	145	June
Olive oil	133	71	June
Total cereals	8,586	11,651	September
Durum	1,117	1,053	September
Wheat	2,466	5,346	September
Barley	3,136	3,412	September
Rye	1,089	1,521	September
Table wine (ML)	1,531 (March)	624	January
EC Private Storage ('000 tonnes)
Butter	223	191	September
Cheese	159	167	September
Beef	38	0	September
Pigmeat	0	2	July

Stock levels are affected by a variety of factors and changes for the next 12 months cannot be predicted.

Set-aside Scheme

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total amount of land now covered by the set-aside arrangements; and what expenditure is involved in financing this per annum.

Mr. Curry: The latest information available indicates that the total amount of land to be set aside in England in the year commencing 1 October 1990 will be some 105,000 hectares. A total of £7·4 million was paid in the financial year 1989-90 to participants in the first year of the set-aside scheme and a further £17·5 million has been allocated in the 1990-91 financial year in respect of participants in the second year of the scheme.

Fishing Quotas

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many Spanish vessels will be permitted to engage in fishing of the United Kingdom quota in terms of the decision of the British and Euro courts on interim relief; how many United Kingdom boats are entitled to fish for the same quota; and if the Spanish vessels which have successfully claimed interim relief will be entitled to compensation from the United Kingdom Government.

Mr. Curry: Only United Kingdom-registered and licensed vessels may fish against the United Kingdom quota. The interim relief granted to applicants in the Factortame case is restricted to the requirement that owners and shareholders be resident and domiciled in this country and affects only 53 vessels. The requirement that vessels should be managed and their operations controlled from the United Kingdom remains.

At present approximately 3,200 boats are licensed to fish in the United Kingdom. The House of Lords granted interim relief to the Factortame applicants on the grounds, among others, that damages would not be available.

Agriculture Council

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Luxembourg on 15 and 16 October.

Mr. Gummer: I represented the United Kingdom at this meeting together with my hon. Friend the Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry), Parliamentary Secretary in my Department.

The main subject discussed was the Commission's proposal for a Community offer for reductions in agricultural support and protection in the current GATT round. Some Ministers were not able to take a definite stance and eventually the chairman decided to suspend the meeting and resume discussion on 19 October to allow them the opportunity for consultations in capitals.

I much regret that, with so much preparation, this Council was not able to endorse the Commission's package, which provides a useful basis for taking forward the talks in the GATT round.

The Council agreed on a useful amendment to the pesticides prohibition directive and on a resolution on veterinary measures required for the achievement of the single market.

ENVIRONMENT

ILEA (Abolition)

Mr. Tony Banks To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the London residuary body made a full inventory of items of historic importance prior to the abolition of ILEA.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The London residuary body made an inventory of items known as the heritage collection once the Greater London council had been abolished.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 26 July, Official Report, column 702, if he will give details of the various pieces of ivory for which his Department has given formal consent for sale within the European Community.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. Information contained in individual applications for CITES licences is considered by the Department as confidential and cannot be released.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many licences he has issued for the sale of elephant ivory since the current ban came into force.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Nine licences have been issued for sale of ivory within the United Kingdom, in conformity with the European Commission guidance and CITES regulations.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 26 July, Official Report, column 702, if it remains the policy of Her Majesty's Government to allow the ivory ban to be lifted in some respects in the not-too-distant future.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government remain firmly committed to maintaining the ivory trade ban for as long as is necessary to ensure the survival and recovery of elephant populations. CITES provides for species to be removed from annex 1 when no longer endangered, but the Government have no plans to initiate proposals for such a reclarification.

Sea Birds

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the number of sea birds washed up dead on the beaches of East Anglia in each of the past five years; and what were the main recorded reasons for death.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: This information is not available.

Local Government Finance

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further information he has made available to local authorities about standard spending assessments.

Mr. Key: Two publications, "Standard Spending Assessments: Background and Underlying Methodology", and the "Standard Spending Assessment Handbook 1990-91" were produced in August. These describe the way local authority services are reflected in standard spending assessments and how each SSA element is constructed. They are similar to the "Blue" and "Green Books" which we produced under the rate support grant system. Copies of the publications have today been placed in the Library of the House. Copies have also been sent to every local authority in England and to the local authority associations.

County Hall

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will direct the London residuary body not to entertain any use of county hall, other than of a temporary nature, until after the next general election; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 16 October 1990]: No.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has regarding damage to the interior and removal of contents from county hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 16 October 1990]: I am not aware of any damage to county hall.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when was the last occasion that staff from his Department responsible for listed buildings made an inspection of county hall.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 16 October 1990]: This is a matter for English Heritage.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the chairman of the London Residuary Body; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer, 16 October 1990]: I met Sir Godfrey Taylor on 19 April. A number of issues were discussed.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of current members of the London residuary body, together with their salaries and expenses, hours worked, vehicles allocated to them and dates of their appointment.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 16 October 1990]: The information is as follows:

	Time commitment	£ per annum (from 1 April 1990)
Sir Godfrey Taylor (Chairman and Chief Executive)	Full-time	63,530
Mr. Jack Esling	2 days per week	15,350
Mr. Reg Hartles	2 days per week	15,350
Mr. Wallace Mackenzie, OBE	2 days per week	15,350
Mr. Michael Roberts	2 days per week	15,350
Cllr. Sir Peter Bowness, CBE	1 day per week	7,650
Mr. Jack Wolkind, CBE	1 day per week	7,650

Sir Godfrey Taylor was reappointed from 12 August 1990 and Mr. Hartles from 23 October 1989. All other members were reappointed from 12 August 1988.

The total expenses paid to the chairman and members in 1988-89, the latest year for which information is available, was £6,430. Travelling arrangements are a matter for the residuary body.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 21 June, Official Report Column 637, if he will list the fittings removed from county hall for safekeeping by the London residuary body.

Mr. Heathcoat-Armory: The fittings that were removed from the principal floor of county hall are stored in county hall.

WALES

General Surgery

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the reasons for the rise in the number of people waiting for general surgery in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the "Welsh Hospital Waiting List Bulletin 1990; No. 2" which illustrates a variable performance in the light of developing demand and activity levels. During 1989 generally surgery in-patient and day care throughput increased by 2·9 per cent., out-patient throughput rose by 0·1 per cent., with new out-patient attendances up by 4 per cent. In addition, at 31 March 1990 the number of urgent in-patients waiting fell by 9 per cent. over the previous year, the number of non-urgent in-patients rose by 7 per cent., and the number of out-patients rose by 3 per cent. Urgent cases waiting one month or more rose by 13 per cent. over the previous year; non-urgent cases waiting one year or more fell by 6 per cent. and out-patient cases waiting three months or more fell by 2·5 per cent.

Young People (Secure Accommodation)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, for each of the years 1975, 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989 the names of those community homes and other facilities providing secure accommodation for young persons according to each local social services authority area in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The information is contained in the table.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Fair Employment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Local Government Staff Commission is taking to ensure that it conforms to the Fair Employment Acts 1976 and 1989; and what measures it is taking to advise local councils in relation to their responsibilities under the Acts.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Local Government Staff Commission has registered with the Fair Employment Commission, adopted a policy statement on development and training and, in accordance with the statutory requirements, monitors its staff in relation to their perceived religious composition.

The staff commission has taken the lead role in ensuring that councils, as employers, fulfil their responsibilites under the Acts. It has, inter alia, established a computerised personnel record system in all 26 councils to ensure that they are properly equipped to provide the statutory monitoring returns on their work force; prepared and issued to councils a comprehensive package of material on equality of opportunity practices and continues to revise and update this; met, and maintains contact with, the Fair Employment Conmmission to discuss matters relating to fair employment and acts as an interface between councils and the Fair Employment Commission; and established a working party representative of local government interests to review the employment and promotion procedures adopted by all councils to ensure that they fully accord with the principles of fair employment.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in the Official Report the number of occasions in the past 10 years when public interest immunity certificates have been issued concerning matters before coroners and other courts preventing members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and others within the remit of his Department from attending such courts, and to prevent such courts from hearing details of operations, indicating which operations were involved and how many individuals were covered by such certificates.

Mr. Cope: There is no central record of all cases in which public interest immunity is claimed and it would not be possible to provide the information sought except at disproportionate cost.

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Council

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many meetings of the Anglo-Irish Interministerial Council have taken place since its establishment; and if he will list the Ministers present and the issues discussed.

Mr. Brooke: There have been 36 meetings of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference since 1985. These meetings are normally attended by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and by the Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office. It is recently been agreed that departmental Ministers should attend when necessary; as a result of this, my hon. Friends the Members for Wiltshire, North (Mr. Needham) and for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley) attended the conference held on 17 July 1990.

Details of the topics discussed can be found in the joint communiqués published after each meeting, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Trade Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for 1968, 1973, 1977, 1985 and 1989, on the basis of 1973 = 100, United Kingdom output of (a) textiles, clothing, leather and footwear, (b) motor vehicles, (c) mechanical engineering less groups 320 and 329 and (d) electronic and electrical engineering goods.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The available information covering broad industry groupings is shown in the table.

Index of Industrial Production 1973 = 100·0

	1968	1973	1977	1985	1989
Textiles, leather, footwear and clothing (SIC 43 44 45)	92·2	100·0	93·4	79·1	78·2

Iraq

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the value of (a) military, (b) other manufactured and (c) financial services exports to and imports from Iraq in each year since 1980.

Mr. Sainsbury: Trade with Iraq in manufactured goods since 1980 is given in the table. The other information requested is not available.

United Kingdom trade with Iraq

Manufactured goods[1] Year	Exports	£ million Imports
1980	285	5
1981	582	16
1982	809	14
1983	375	12

[1]Manufactured goods are defined as Sections 5 to 8 of the Standard International Trade Classification Revision 3.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what levels of credit guarantees by the Export Credits Guarantee Department have been made available to British-based companies for trade with Iraq for each year since 1979.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 15 October 1990]: ECGD cover for exports to Iraq was available until earlier this year under both short-term and medium-term facilities. As a matter of general policy, ECGD's exposure on individual countries is not normally revealed publicly, but the amount of medium-term credit which was made available to Iraq sinces 1983 under a series of financial protocols is a matter of public knowledge, and was as follows:

Year	Amount £ million	To Finance
1983	250	capital goods and projects
	25	pharmaceuticals
1984	250	capital goods and projects
	50	pharmaceuticals
1986	50	pharmaceuticals
1987	100	capital goods
	75	pharmaceuticals
1988	265	capital goods and projects
	75	pharmaceuticals

These protocols have not been fully taken up by the Iraqis, and the actual exposure is therefore less than the figures given above.

Euro Week (Essex)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when his Department was invited to provide financial assistance to the county of Essex for its Euro Week; what decision he has made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: My Department had initial discussions in March with Essex county council about its proposed Euro Week. Various ways in which we might be able to assist were considered. No request has yet been made for financial assistance.

Internal Market Councils

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Internal Market Councils held on 17 September and 9 October.

Mr. Redwood: I represented the United Kingdom at the Internal Market Councils on 17 September and 9 October.

On 17 September the Council adopted the utilities directive, which sets rules to prevent restrictive purchasing policies by utilities, and a regulation on Community transit, which will facilitate trade across borders after 1992. Three amendments were adopted to technical directives on electrically operated lifts, electrical equipment for use in explosive atmospheres, and simple pressure vessels. The Council also took note of a progress report on the infrastructure networks needed for the completion of the single market, and held preliminary discussions on data protection, and on a framework directive to provide a single authorisation to do non-life insurance business in the Community. On food labelling, the Council adopted a directive on optional food labelling, and held a discussion on the prospects for compulsory food labelling.

On 9 October the Council agreed two amendments on dangerous substances, one on the classification, packaging and labelling of dichloromethane, the other on the marketing and use of pentachlorophenol. Vice-President Bangemann presented to the Council the Commission's green paper on European standards. The Council also discussed trade in works of art, the handling of company law directives, and the Commission's latest figures on the implementation of single market measures.

Companies Inspection Handbook

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when publication of the revised edition of the companies inspection handbook, as recommended by the Select Committee on Trade and Industry, will occur.

Mr. Redwood: In our White Paper responding to the report of the Select Committee we undertook to publish a revised edition in the early autumn. The new edition, now called the "Investigation Handbook", to reflect its extended coverage, was published this morning and replaces the earlier publication last revised in 1986. It takes account of recent legislative developments including the Companies Act 1989, the Financial Services Act 1986 and the Insolvency Act 1986 as well as incorporating points made by the Government in their response to the Select Committee.

The handbook describes the powers of investigation of the Secretary of State and includes procedural guidance for inspectors under the Companies Acts and under section 177 of the Financial Services Act 1986—inquiries into possible insider dealing. I expect that the handbook, like its predecessor, will be extensively used by my Department, inspectors, regulatory authorities, witnesses at inquiries and their legal advisers, academic staff and the public generally.

The Secretary of State's powers of investigation play an important part in the Department's objective of increasing confidence in the working of markets by achieving a fair level of protection for the individual consumer and investor.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Mortgages

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average increase in repayments per week on the average mortgage in each region between 1 June 1988 and the present time.

Mr. Maples: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a similar question by him on 20 June 1990 at column 558 as mortgage rates have not changed for most existing mortgage borrowers.

Personal Equity Plans

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he proposes any changes to the PEP regulations.

Mr. Maude: I have three changes to personal equity plans to propose.

First, I recognise that many people, particularly PEP managers, want to know how interest on cash deposited prior to investment will be dealt with when composite rate tax is abolished. I have decided that from 6 April 1991 such interest will not be liable to withholding tax under the new rules for the taxation of bank and building society interest. This interest will also be exempt from income tax at both basic and higher rates in the hands of investors, but only if it is eventually re-invested in the PEP. If it is withdrawn, it will be taxable in full. I hope that this news will be welcomed by plan managers who, I know, wish to start re-programming their systems in time for the change.

Secondly, shares may be described as "paired" where a United Kingdom and a foreign company have both agreed that no share in either company may be acquired other than as part of a unit comprising one share in each of the two companies, and units are offered for sale to the public in both companies at a broadly equivalent price. At present the PEP regulations do not allow such "paired shares" to be held within a PEP. I propose to bring paired shares within the definition of qualifying investments by analogy with the PEP rules for unit and investment trusts. The same maximum annual subscription of £3,000 will apply. Until the regulations can be amended, the Inland Revenue will operate the new rule by extra-statutory concession.

Shares subscribed for in a new issue may be transferred into a PEP up to 30 days from their allocation. Experience of this rule in practice has shown that it allows very little time for the necessary action to be taken. I therefore propose to increase the period to six weeks. Again, until the regulations can be amended, the Inland Revenue will apply the new rule by concession.

European Community Finance

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the net sum contributed by the United Kingdom to the European Economic Community in 1989; and what is the latest estimate for the comparable sum in (a) 1990 and (b) 1991.

Mr. Maude: The statement on the 1990 Community Budget (Cm 1095), published on 26 April 1990, included the outturn figure of £2,315 million for the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Community in 1989, and an estimate of £2,175 million for 1990. An estimate for 1991 is not yet available.

Exports (EC)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the exports to the European Economic Community and imports from the European Economic Community in each year since 1973; and what was the percentage of Britain's exports to and imports from the European Economic Community in each year.

Mr. Maude: Data from which the information requested can be derived is to be found on the Central Statistical Office database which may be accessed through the Library of the House.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax incentives he will consider introducing to encourage energy efficiency.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 15 October 1990]: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to introduce such tax incentives. The White Paper on the Environment outlines a number of measures designed to encourage energy efficiency.

SCOTLAND

Aberdeen Royal Infirmary

10. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of staff employed by Grampian health board at the Aberdeen royal infirmary.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Last year there were 2,340 whole-time equivalent staff at Aberdeen royal infirmary.

Scottish Assembly

11. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received about a Scottish assembly.

Mr. Lang: My Department has received nine letters in support of an assembly in the past six months.

28. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the fiscal implications of a directly elected Scottish assembly.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In the past six months, three letters referring to the fiscal implications have been received.

Council of Ministers

12. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last led a United Kingdom delegation to the Council of Ministers; and on which other occasions he has attended the Council in the past 12 months.

17. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last led a United Kingdom delegation to the Council of Ministers; and on which other occasions he has attended the Council in the past 12 months.

18. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last led a United Kingdom delegation to the Council of Ministers; and on which other occasions he has attended the Council in the past 12 months.

21. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last led a United Kingdom delegation to the Council of Ministers; and on which other occasions he has attended the Council in the past 12 months.

Mr. Rifkind: I attended the Fisheries Council on 18-19 December 1989 with my noble Friend the then Minister of State.

Community Care

13. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet the care in the community Scottish work group to discuss the implementation of community care aspects of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no request for such a meeting.

49. Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional funds he will make available to local authorities to house those discharged from long-stay care in hospital under the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 does not of itself require or promote hospital discharges. Decisions on the rate of discharge are taken in accordance with clinical judgment having regard to the availability of accommodation and necessary support in the home area. Rates of discharge have increased substantially in recent years and voluntary bodies as well as the statutory agencies have played an important part in making this possible.

Provisional allocations to local authorities for housing capital expenditure in 1991-92 will be made in December on the basis of their relative housing needs and with reference to their capital programmes and housing plans. Local authorities should include any capital requirements for housing arising from the need to house those discharged from hospital in their capital programmes, which are due to be submitted to the Scottish Development Department in November.

Disabled People

14. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many registered disabled people are currently employed by his Department in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Office and its associated Departments currently employ 91 registered disabled staff. In common with other Government Departments they accept the same responsibilities for employment of the disabled as other employers.

Hospice, Linlithgow

15. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his oral reply of 4 July, Official Report, column 979, what response he has had from Lothian health board in relation to its examination of the legal position on the feu disposition in respect of the hospice at Linlithgow.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Lothian health board has been instructed to examine carefully the legal position on the feu disposition in respect of Linlithgow hospital before taking any final decisions about the future of this hospital.

Industrial Development, Bo'ness

16. Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to visit Bo'ness to discuss industrial development.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has no current plans to visit Bo'ness to discuss industrial development.

Housing Survey

19. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the report of the Scottish housing conditions survey to be published; and if he will arrange for all data collected during the survey to be made publicly available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer to my answer today to the hon. Member for Cumbernauld and Kilsyth (Mr. Hogg).

The remit for the survey agreed by the Scottish Development Department and Scottish Homes provides that, following publication of the report, survey data in a form to be agreed will be made available to bona fide research institutes and other bodies including local authorities.

Substandard Houses

20. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to make additional resources available to tackle the problems of damp and substandard houses.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The final allocations to local authorities announced last March for housing capital expenditure in 1990-91 include increased net allocations of £15·5 million compared with 1989-90. It is for local authorities to determine their own priorities for use of these allocations in the light of local circumstances, including the need to tackle dampness and substandard houses if this is seen as a priority in their area.

Speedlink

22. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the occasions on which he has met directors of Railfreight to discuss the future of Speedlink services in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: British Rail is currently studying the options for Speedlink and is consulting its customers. My right hon. and learned Friend will be fully involved in the consideration of any proposals which BR puts to the Government in due course.

Steel Industry

23. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to receive the full report from the Scottish Development Agency on the Scottish steel industry; and if he will ask the agency to prepare an interim report on the implications of the proposed closure of the hot strip mill at Ravenscraig by the British Steel Corporation.

Mr. Lang: The emerging findings of the SDA study should be available by Christmas and my right hon. and learned Friend expects to receive the full report by the end of March. British Steel should be in a position to consider any opportunities identified before the date announced for final closure of the hot strip mill.

Economic Growth

24. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of economic growth in Scotland in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Office estimates that the Scottish gross domestic product grew by 5 per cent. in 1988, the latest date for which estimates are available. This is the highest rate of growth experienced by Scotland for 15 years.

Farming

25. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to have discussions with the National Farmers Union of Scotland about farming in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: My noble Friend the Minister responsible for agriculture and fisheries and I regularly meet representatives of the Scottish National Farmers Union. Discussions have recently concentrated on the state of the livestock sector.

NHS Hospitals, Lothian

26. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to visit national health service hospitals in Lothian.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I regularly visit hospitals throughout the country. I visited Roodlands and East Fortune hospital (and other Lothian hospitals) on 22 June.

Caledonian MacBrayne

27. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of Caledonian MacBrayne; and what subjects were discussed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has not met the chairman of Caledonian MacBrayne since he took the company into his direct ownership on 2 April 1990. However, my noble Friend the then Minister of State and I met the chairman on 19 February shortly after his appointment. I also met the full board of the company on 25 June when we discussed a number of matters relating to Caledonian MacBrayne's current and future operations. As indicated in my reply of 8 June to the hon. Gentleman, regular and frequent discussions take place between officials of the Scottish Development Department and Caledonian MacBrayne.

Education

29. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of teaching unions to discuss the future of Scottish education.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have invited representatives of the teaching unions and of the two head teacher associations to meet me on Friday 26 October to discuss a range of educational issues.

Local Government Finance

30. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the numbers paying the poll tax in Scotland since 1 April.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not held centrally. Most levying authorities, however, expect 90 per cent. or more of the total community charge due in 1989-90 to be paid.

Mr. Lambie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he is next going to meet the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss poll tax arrears.

Mr. Lang: I offered to meet the convention at an early date to discuss community charge collection issues following a recent request from its president, and as part of the normal consultation on local government finance matters, my right hon. and learned Friend and I will be meeting the convention on 26 November.

Constitutional Change

31. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for constitutional change in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None. The Government believe that the present arrangements provide for full and fair representation of Scotland's interests.

Fishing Industry

32. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet representatives of the west coast fishing industry.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My noble Friend the Minister responsible for agriculture and fisheries hopes to meet representatives of many of the principal fishing industry organisations over the coming months. He met the Scottish Fishermen's Federation, which represents many west coast fishermen, on 3 October.

47. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to meet the leaders of the fishing industry in north-east Fife.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My noble Friend the Minister responsible for agriculture and fisheries intends to have regular contact with the principal organisations representing the Scottish fishing industry. Earlier this month he had a very fruitful meeting with representatives of the Scottish Fishermen's Federation, an organisation to which the Fife Fishermen's Association is affiliated.

50. Mr. Buchanan-Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest assessment of the earnings of the Scottish fishing fleet during 1990 and the past two years.

Mr. Rifkind: The value (at the first sale) of fish landed into Scotland in 1989 was £246 million, compared with £253 million in 1988. The latest available information for 1990, which covers landings up to the end of August, is a total so far of £176 million, an increase of 11 per cent. over the same period last year.

NHS Trusts

33. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many expressions of interest have now been made for self-governing hospitals and other national health service units; and how many formal applications have been submitted.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Four expressions of interest in NHS trust status have been received, but these have not yet progressed to the formal application stage.

48. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding the establishment of national health service self-governing trusts.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Representations have been received on a number of aspects relating to the establishment of NHS trusts. Four expressions of interest are currently being pursued.

Nursery Education

34. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of under-fives have places in local authority nurseries.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There were 41,785 three and four-year-olds in Scottish education authority nursery schools at September 1989, 32·2 per cent. of the 1989 mid-year estimate of the total three and four-year-old population, the range which is the relevant age group for nursery education.

Road and Rail Transport

35. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress is being made in improving road and rail transport in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government are committed to improving the Scottish road network and, since 1979, 288 miles of the network have been constructed or improved including 26 miles of motorway and 142 miles of dual carriageway. Earlier this year my right hon. and learned Friend announced a massive £130 million package of major trunk road schemes which are planned to start during 1990-91. These form part of a significant programme of improvements designed to relieve congestion, improve journey times and safety.

Over the next three years the resources allocated for new construction and improvements to our road network are set to rise by nearly 50 per cent.

Investment is not, however, restricted to the road network. Since 1979, the Government have sanctioned record levels of investment by British Rail and Scotland has been, and will be, a major beneficiary of this investment. Completion of the east coast main line electrification will enable electric running to begin in May 1991. Together with electrification between Edinburgh and Carstairs, this will allow substantial reductions in journey times between Scotland and London. As part of its long-term strategy, British Rail is investigating a range of further electrification options in Scotland. New rolling stock is being introduced on non-electrified lines.

Health Services

36. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what improvements he has made to Scottish health services in the past 12 months.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Over the past 12 months the Government have announced a number of substantial new developments for the national health service in Scotland. First, Grampian health board has been asked to prepare detailed proposals for a new specialist maternity unit in Elgin and for a new cottage hospital in Peterhead. Both units are to be developed on the existing hospital sites. Tayside health board's proposals for a new hospital in Crieff to replace outdated facilities at Crieff cottage hospital and Bridge of Earn hospital have been approved. Together these three capital projects represent an investment of some £20 million in the NHS estate.

The helicopter ambulance services based in Inverness will be centrally funded to serve the more remote parts of Scotland and allow rapid transfer of patients requiring urgent hospital treatment. This will cost some £600,000 and will be the first centrally funded helicopter ambulance service in Britain.

A new national service for the rehabilitation of brain-injured patients is to be established to complement and enhance the work already being carried out in the NHS and the private sector. It is estimated that there are around 500 patients in Scotland who would be likely to benefit from intensive specialised rehabilitation services, many of whom are young people whose quality of life could be vastly enhanced if these facilities were available.

Scotland is also to get its first heart transplant unit so that Scots patients do not have to travel to England for transplant surgery. Many Scots have benefited from the service in England but the long journeys are distressing for very ill patients and their relatives. A new Scottish unit will be much more accessible and will build on the considerable improvements in cardiac surgery in Scotland, which now carries out 2,500 cardiac operations a year.

Earlier in the year the Government announced that £200,000 per annum was to be made available over the next three years to support the development of cochlear implantation in Scotland. This new technique will greatly enhance the quality of life for some deaf people.

On 11 July the Government announced that a total of £4 million is to be made available to provide the health service in Scotland with five advanced magnetic resonance imaging scanners. Use of these scanners will greatly improve early detection of brain tumours and other cancers and, in many cases, will mean that the need for investigative surgery can be avoided. The new equipment will be installed at major neurosurgical and oncology centres.

The first three scanners will be installed at Aberdeen royal infirmary, the Western General hospital in Edinburgh and the Southern General in Glasgow during the financial year 1991-92. The remaining two will be installed at Ninewells hospital, Dundee and the Western infirmary in Glasgow during 1992-93.

The Government have agreed to provide financial support to the independent hospices in Scotland up to at least 50 per cent. of their running costs. These hospices provide a worthwhile contribution to patient care for the terminally ill. In addition approval has been given to the building of a new blood transfusion centre at Inverness at a cost of £900,000 and to the construction of eight new control centres for the Scottish ambulance service at a cost of £4·7 million over the next four years. These investments will improve the efficiency of the ambulance service throughout Scotland and provide a much better blood transfusion service for Inverness and surrounding areas.

The Government have also approved the introduction of a new contract for general dental practitioners which will encourage preventive dentistry and improve patient care. The contract provides patients with continuing care from their dentist and ensures that dentists have a system which recognises their continuing responsibility for patients.

The Government have established a Scottish medicines resource centre to provide pharmaceutical advice and information to GPs and others in the primary care service. The centre will issue independent evaluated drug information and provide assistance in the development of local formularies with a view to encouraging rational, safe and cost-effective prescribing of medicines.

The remit of community pharmacists in Scotland has been extended to allow them to play a greater part in the NHS by allowing them to maintain medication records for certain patients; and to visit residential homes in Scotland to advise on the safekeeping and dispensing of medicines.

In the light of a comprehensive review of health education in Scotland, a consultation document was issued on 9 October setting out the Government's strategy for the future, including our proposals for targeting specific problem areas such as coronary heart disease and cancer and for promoting healthy life styles. The new Health Education Board, which will operate from 1 April 1991, will give fresh impetus and direction to health education in Scotland. The Government have also made available in 1990 some £2·2 million in the health programme specifically for the support of drug misuse services and for preventive measures. As regards prevention, an accelerated schedule has been announced for childhood immunisation against diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough and polio which should lead to higher uptake levels.

Finally, in recognition of the burdens resulting from AIDS and HIV, the Government have continued to make general allocations to health boards, which in 1990 amounted to £7·84 million. In addition specific allocations totalling £7·05 million have been made to those boards which are setting up and running special AIDS units in Edinburgh, Glasgow and Dundee, where the majority of AIDS cases in Scotland will be located. This brings total provision to £14·89 million this year.

Maintained Schools

37. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) children and (b) teachers are now in maintained schools in Scotland; what was the comparable figure in 1986 and 1976; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested, for education authority primary and secondary schools, is as follows:

	Number of pupils
	1976	[1]1986	1989
Primary schools	611,788	433,459	437,072
Secondary schools	402,704	344,369	298,603

[1] Estimate.

	Number of Teachers[1]
	1976	1986	1989
Primary schools	27,324·3	21,218·1	22,186·1
Secondary schools	27,432·2	25,992·7	24,143·3

[1] Full-time equivalent.

In the period since 1976 pupil:teacher ratios have improved from 22·4 to 19·7 in primary schools, and from 14·7 to 12·4 in secondary schools.

Lothian Health Board

38. Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has of the deficit likely to be incurred by Lothian health board in 1990-91.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Lothian health board is making good progress in introducing more efficient ways of providing health care and reorganising its hospital service. The savings resulting from these measures are improving the financial position, but it is too early to predict the outcome for the financial year.

Roof Tax

39. Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has recently received regarding proposals for a roof tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a very few letters about the Labour party's proposed local tax on houses.

Elderly People

40. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet Mr. Don Cruickshank, chief executive of the national health service in Scotland, to discuss care of the elderly.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I frequently meet the chief executive of the national health service in Scotland.

Lead Piping

41. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional funds he intends to make available to local authorities to facilitate the replacement of domestic lead piping to comply with the Government's commitment that such work will be completed in the current year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government have given no such commitment.

A1

42. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the implications for the A1 in Scotland of the upgrading of the A1 south of Newcastle to motorway status.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The most recent assessments following the routes south of Edinburgh study concluded that upgrading the A1 from London to Tyneside would result in only approximately 300 additional trips per day across the border on the A1 by the year 2008. This is because the majority of long-distance traffic crossing the border on the A1 is coming from or going to the north-east of England and would therefore be very little influenced by the upgrading of the A1 south of Teesside. I am satisfied that the £50 million package of improvements I announced in April together with the implementation of a route action plan which the A1 steering group has been charged with formulating will considerably improve this important and strategic route to the advantage of Scotland. The monitoring of traffic on the A1 by the steering group will give an early warning of traffic pressures developing which exceed forecasts.

Students (Housing)

43. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning housing difficulties for students in higher education in Scottish establishments.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Apart from one case raised by the hon. Member himself, my right hon. and learned Friend has received no representations on behalf of students during the past year about the availability of student housing. He has, however, received various representations about the withdrawal of most students' entitlement to housing benefit as part of the revised student support arrangements.

NHS Reform

44. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the British Medical Association to discuss the Government's health service reforms in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I last met representatives from the BMA in March this year.

Flood Damage, Tay Valley

45. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the number of individuals and companies which have received grants to repair flood damage in the Tay valley; and what proposals there are to protect the village of Spittalfield and the farms downstream from Braecock.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: To date the Scottish Office has either paid or certified for payment grant amounting to £158,471 to 22 farmers and landowners in the Tay valley area for the restoration of flood damage. A further 15 claims with an estimated grant value of £346,505 are under consideration or awaited.

Restoration of the elevated floodbanks at Braecock farm is now virtually completed and this should also afford protection to properties immediately downstream in the direction of Spittalfield.

Public Spending

46. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the most recent information available relating to annual public spending per capita in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The latest available figures on identifiable public expenditure per head are in the reply my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury gave on 19 December 1989.

Set-aside

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total amount of land covered by the set aside schemes; and what expenditure is involved per annum.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The area of land currently set aside by farmers in Scotland is approximately 19,700 hectares.

Annual expenditure on payments is cumulative, as new participants may apply each year and participate for five years. Payments of £2·279 million were made in financial year 1989-90. Provision of £4·22 million has been made for 1990-91.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report a list of the unemployment figures, at the latest available date, for each Scottish county.

Mr. Lang: The level and rate of unemployment in each of the Scottish regions as of August 1990 is given in the table. Overall unemployment in Scotland has fallen by over 135,000 in the past three years.

Unemployment in Scotland, August 1990[1]

County/Region	Number unemployed	Rate[2]
Borders	1,900	3·8
Central	10,583	8·8
Dumfries and Galloway	4,273	6·0
Fife	12,179	8·3

Tayside Health Councils

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will consider the possibility of creating more than one local health council in the Tayside health board area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I agree that local health councils have an important role to play, but to be effective it is desirable that what is expected of councils is clear, that they are truly representative of my areas that they serve, and that they speak with one voice. These criteria are, in my view and that of my colleagues, most likely met by well-resourced single councils capable of dealing on a one-to-one basis with their health boards. However, if Tayside health board, or indeed any other board, wishes to submit a scheme for more than one council any such scheme will be considered on its merits.

Education Statistics

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the educational participation rate of 16 to 18-year-olds in Scotland and in (a) Denmark, (b) Belgium, (c) Canada, (d) Australia, (e) France, (f) West Germany, (g) Italy, (h) the Netherlands, (i) Spain, (j) Norway and (k) Sweden.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 16 October 1990]: The participation rate in full-time or part-time education or training in Scotland was 60 per cent. in 1986 and 68 per cent. in 1988. International comparisons, including references to definitional differences, are contained in the Department of Education and Science statistical bulletin No. 1/90 "International Statistical Comparisons of the Education and Training of 16 to 18 year olds", copies of which are in the Library.

DEFENCE

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list in the Official Report the number of occasions in the past 10 years when public interest immunity certificates have been issued concerning matters before coroners and other courts preventing members of the armed forces and others within the remit of his Department from attending such courts, and to prevent such courts from hearing details of operations, indicating which operations were involved and how many individuals were covered by such certificates.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no systematic record kept centrally of all cases in which public interest immunity is claimed in respect of the armed forces and others within the remit of the Ministry of Defence and it would not be possible to provide the information sought except at disproportionate cost.

Belize and Thailand

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy regarding the release of detailed information concerning service personnel stationed in (a) Belize and (b) Thailand.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: National security considerations may restrict the amount of detail that can be disclosed about service personnel stationed overseas. In addition, where such personnel are providing military training assistance for the host Government, details are normally confidential between Her Majesty's Government and the Government concerned. Further information on such assistance may be released in some circumstances with the agreement of the host Government. These principles apply when considering the release of information concerning United Kingdom service personnel in any overseas country, including Belize and Thailand.

Service Personnel (Qualifications)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many qualifications were acquired each year since records began by service personnel as a result of pre-release training.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is not held centrally and could not be provided without disproportionate cost.

Civil Servants (Training)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of 25 July, Official Report, column 297, which skills in which his Department's civil servants have received training are applicable to outside employment.

Mr. Carlisle: Most of the skills acquired by MOD civil servants through either in-house or external training are transferable to outside employment. Wherever possible in both industrial and non-industrial training use is made of outside accreditation bodies such as the training boards or the institutions to give recognition to the skills acquired, in addition to academic awards such as BSc, MSc, MBA and HNC.

British Forces (Germany)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his statement of 25 July, Official Report, columns 471-72, (1) whether he envisages that those forces that remain in Germany by the mid-1990s will have a similar balance of different types of equipment;

(2) whether he envisages those forces designated as reinforcements for British forces stationed in Germany increasing or decreasing in size.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Work is continuing to refine the detail of the broad proposals put forward by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 25 July. This includes consultation with NATO and our alliance partners. It is too early to say what will be the appropriate balance between forces stationed in the United Kingdom and Germany or what levels and types of equipment remaining forces in Germany will need.

Foreign Military Forces (Training)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of 26 July, Official Report, column 538, whether any companies have contacted his Department to seek approval for the provision of military training for foreign military forces.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Companies intending to provide military training for foreign military forces would be required to request approval from the Government only if such training involved the release of United Kingdom classified information. We have no records of any requests of this nature being made to the Ministry of Defence.

Household Division

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any financial resources from non-Ministry of Defence sources have ever been provided to assist the Household Division in carrying out its ceremonial duties.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. Financial resources for ceremonial duties undertaken by the Household Division are provided solely by the Ministry of Defence.

Procurement Programmes

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which equipment procurement programmes whose total value is expected to be greater than £250 million have been either delayed, cancelled, or reduced in size since 1 June.

Mr. Alan Clark: I told the House on 18 June at column 770 that I had decided not to authorise further work on the eighth batch of Tornado aircraft, and I have since decided to slow production of the Warrior armoured infantry fighting vehicle and its variants.

Nuclear Capable Combat Aircraft

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his statement of 25 July, Official Report, columns 471-72, whether he envisages an increase in the number of nuclear capable combat aircraft as a result of the "Options for Change" study.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Defence Establishments (Closures)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what announcements have been made regarding the closure of Royal Air Force bases and other of his Department's establishments since 25 July.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since 25 July the Ministry of Defence has announced proposals to close the RAF air defence radar station at Bishops Court.

Tri-Service Resettlement Organisation

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual budget of the Tri-Service Resettlement Organisation and the number and grade of his Department's personnel attached to the organisation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Tri-Service Resettlement Organisation does not yet have a budget of its own, but the current level of expenditure was indicated in my reply to the hon. Gentleman on 25 July 1990 at column 301. The information requested about the number and grade of personnel attached to the organisation is as follows:

	Number
Headquarters
Wing Commander/Lieutenant Colonel	2
Major/Lieutenant Commander	4

Hawk Aircraft

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his statement of 25 July, Official Report, columns 471-72, whether he envisages that there will be an increase in the number of armed Hawk aircraft.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

"Options for Change"

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations have taken place with civil service trade union representatives regarding the "Options for Change" study.

Mr. Alan Clark: Since the trade union representatives were informed of the "Options for Change" proposals on 25 July, the subject has been discussed at meetings of the joint industrial Whitley council and the non-industrial joint general purposes committee.

Defence Planning Committee

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of 12 June, Official Report, column 142, when he expects that the work in hand on the implications for British forces of the Defence Planning Committee meeting of 22-23 May will be complete.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The review of readiness and availability requirements for NATO forces to which I referred in my reply of 12 June is progressing satisfactorily and further interim measures have been agreed. Details are classified. We expect work to continue for some time yet.

Cambridge Hospital, Aldershot

Mr. Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will take steps to ensure that the Cambridge hospital in Aldershot will resume its normal civilian and military functions once the Gulf crisis has been resolved.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes. This will of course be subject to the future hospital requirements of the armed forces which are currently under review.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what safeguards are being taken to prevent toxic waste originating from Nancekuke polluting the sea and beaches of Cornwall; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will give details of the location and type of toxic waste dumps created by past production of nerve gas at Nancekuke; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what assistance is being given by his Department to appropriate authorities inquiring into the dangers of toxic wastes originating from past activities at Nancekuke;

(4) what representations have been made to his Department by the National Rivers Authority in respect of toxic wastes buried in Cornwall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The United Kingdom had abandoned its chemical and biological weapons by the late 1950s. The policy of the Government is that chemical and biological weapons will not be used or produced by this country and we have no plans to acquire any such weapons. There is no evidence to suggest that there is any cause for concern at Nancekuke resulting from Ministry of Defence operations.

The Nancekuke nerve agent pilot plant operated between 1953 and 1956. The plant was decommissioned in 1956 and dismantled in 1978-79 following a decision to close the site, which had been used for a variety of tasks not related to the United Kingdom's chemical defence programme since 1956.

No chemical warfare or toxic material was ever disposed of by burial at Nancekuke. All such material was either treated chemically or incinerated, the resulting products not causing any environmental hazard. The disposal arrangements at the site were highly sophisticated and were subject to independent on-site inspection throughout the operations.

The material buried at Nancekuke is mainly the decontaminated structure and components of the dismantled pilot plant. This material was buried using approved techniques and was classed as non-leachable and therefore safe for such disposal. It is buried at five main sites which are fenced off to prevent disturbance; these sites are well known locally.

The National Rivers Authority (south west region) have been provided with comprehensive information on our management of the site to enable them to carry out their statutory responsibilities in taking ground water samples. Representatives of the National Rivers Authority visited the site on Monday 15 October and have indicated that, in accordance with their statutory responsibilities, they will place the results of their work on the public record.

British Forces Overseas

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current estimated daily cost of the British military presence in (a) the Falklands and (b) the Gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The current estimated full daily cost of the British military presence in the Falklands and the Gulf is £0·167 million and £2 million respectively.

Low Flying

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Her Majesty's Government intend to reply to the House of Commons Defence Select Committee's report on low flying published earlier this year.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Shortly.

Trident

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what costs would be incurred at each stage if the United Kingdom withdrew from its contractual commitments with United States of America on Trident submarines and the nuclear weapons to be carried by Trident.

Mr. Alan Clark: Her Majesty's Government remain firmly committed to the United Kingdom Trident project, and have no plans to withdraw from their related contractual commitments, either in the United States of America or elsewhere.

ENERGY

International Atomic Energy Agency

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what requests the International Atomic Energy Agency has submitted to his Department in the last 10 years.

Mr. Baldry: My Department has not retained records of all requests made by the IAEA over the last 10 years. We receive annual requests for contributions to the agency's regular budget, its technical assistance and co-operation programme and for assistance on safeguards research and development. We also receive invitations for United Kingdom experts to participate in the many technical meetings and other events organised by the agency. Other ad hoc requests for assistance are received from time to time.

Research and Development

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply of 4 April, Official Report, column 681, what is the (a) annual expenditure on the safeguards research and development programme for each year since records began, (b) average number of staff employed on the safeguards research and development programme in each year since records began, (c) grades of the staff employed on the safeguards research and development programme, (d) annual number of technical reports provided by his Department to the International Atomic Energy Agency and (e) titles and subject matter of the technical reports provided by his Department to the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Mr. Baldry: Since 1981, the United Kingdom has conducted, in consultation with the IAEA, a programme of R and D in support of the IAEA's safeguards work. The programme includes the provision of training courses for IAEA safeguards inspectors. The funding for the programme, which is managed by the UKAEA, is provided by my Department.

The expenditure in each year since 1980, in money values of the year in question, is as follows:

Year	amount (£k)
1980-81	301
1981-82	535
1982-83	573
1983-84	661
1984-85	744
1985-86	825
1986-87	854
1987-88	828
1988-89	950
1989-90	1,064
1990-91	[1]1,088

[1] Budget

Provision of technical reports on safeguards to the IAEA is a matter for AEA Technology, which carries out the research and development work for it. AEA Technology produces a UK programme progress report which includes, among other things, a list of reports published during the year. A copy of the most recent progress report has been placed in the Library of the House.

The additional information requested by the hon. Member under items (b) and (c) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the implications of the 1990 conference on the non-proliferation treaty for the work of his Department.

Mr. Baldry: To the Government's regret, the review conference could not adopt an agreed final document. My Department is still studying the ideas which emerged from the valuable work done in the conference's main committees relating to my responsibilities, notably for safeguards and nuclear supplies.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he has taken to ensure that Government Departments practise greater energy efficiency.

Mr. Wakeham [pursuant to the reply, 25 June 1990, col. 105-6]: Copies of the first annual report on the campaign to promote energy efficiency on the Government estate have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 18 October 1990

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General whether his Department will take positive steps to discuss with the Data Protection Registrar all his Department's legislation that impacts on the use, collection, processing or holding of personal data; and whether he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I am reminding my officials of the need to consult the registrar about proposed legislation which might affect or be affected by the Data Protection Act 1984.

Shops Act

Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Attorney-General in the light of the High Court judgment of 18 July relating to the Shops Act 1950, what guidance he will be giving to local authorities and courts to enable them to enforce the law in a consistent manner.

The Attorney-General: I do not propose to give any guidance to local authorities, and it would be improper for me to offer guidance to the courts.

The judgment of Mr. Justice Hoffmann in Stoke-on-Trent City Council and Norwich City Council v. B&Q plc is clearly expressed, and neither local authorities nor courts should have any difficulty in understanding its effect and acting upon it. Mr. Justice Hoffman decided that the effect of the judgment of the European Court of Justice in Torfaen Borough Council v. B&Q plc is that the Sunday trading provisions of the Shops Act 1950 do not contravene the EEC treaty, and that accordingly for shops in England and Wales to be open for the serving of customers on Sunday otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of the Act continues to be an offence under the Act. It follows that local authorities continue to be subject to the duty of enforcement conferred on them by section 1 of the Act.

Electoral Law

Sir David Steel: To ask the Attorney-General what consideration has been given by the Director of Public Prosecutions to the contents of the document published by the Conservative party entitled "Offer from the Conservative Party", relating to registration of proxies by overseas voters, with respect of its compliance with electoral law.

The Attorney-General: I have invited the right hon. Member to forward a copy of the document to which he refers to the Director of Public Prosecutions indicating any criminal offence he believes may have been committed. The Director will then consider whether any action on his part is appropriate.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General what consideration he has given to prosecuting Ministry of Defence officials over their handling of the case of Mr. Colin Wallace.

The Attorney-General: The Director of Public Prosecutions has received a letter from solicitors acting on behalf of Mr. Colin Wallace requesting that he initiate a criminal investigation and he is considering the matters raised.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Flooding

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what damage was caused to (1) dwellings and (2) farmland and crops as a result of the breach in the river Roe floodbanks on Saturday, 6 October and what is his estimate of the sums required to (a) repair the banks and (b) restore the loss of (i) farmers crops and land damage and (ii) dwellings and household furniture and goods.

Mr. Brooke: As a result of a breach in the left floodbank approximately 160 hectares of land were flooded. There have been no reports of damage to dwellings received.

The cost of repairing the floodbank is estimated to be of the order of £11,000.

As the Government do not meet the cost of losses due to accidental flooding of farmland, crops or dwellings, no estimate of these costs has been made.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Namibia

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further economic help Her Majesty's Government proposes to give to Namibia in both the context of the European Community and the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Chalker: On 21 March I announced in this House that Britain would be providing £10 million of aid for Namibia, for commitment over three years. Technical assistance is already being provided for education, public sector reform and police training and the scope for assistance in certain other sectors is being explored with the Namibian Government. Military training is also being provided under separate arrangements. The European Community is meanwhile considering the terms of Namibia's accession to the Lomé Convention and Britain is working to ensure a speedy and favourable outcome to this consideration. Pending accession, the Community is providing an interim package of aid totalling 19 million ecu (£13·24 million) in 1990, of which our share is about one fifth.

THE ARTS

Cultural Property

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Arts if Her Majesty's Government will ratify the 1970 UNESCO convention on illicit trade in cultural property; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 15 October 1990]: Her Majesty's Government have no plans to ratify the 1970 UNESCO convention. While supporting the principles and objectives laid down in the convention, we consider that the convention's definition of cultural property is unduly wide. In addition, the requirements of the convention on imported and exported goods would impose a heavy administrative burden on both the Government and the art trade with, for example, the requirement for all dealers to keep registers of the material bought and sold. Implementation of the provision on restitution and prohibition of imports would require new legislation and allocation of substantial additional administrative resources, and the identification and verification of claims made against items imported into the United Kingdom would not be straightforward.

United Kingdom museums and the art trade already subscribe to codes of practice on the handling of items of dubious provenance, which help to uphold the objectives of the convention.

TRANSPORT

Road Safety

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has concerning the number of serious or fatal accidents where a hand-held car telephone was an element; what assessment he has made of the road safety aspects of such instruments; and what consideration he has given to alternatives not requiring use of either hand for conversation.

Mr. Chope: There is no information available on such accidents. The use of hand-held telephones while driving constitutes a potential road safety hazard and rule 54 of the highway code states that drivers should not use a hand-held telephone while their vehicle is moving. Drivers who need a car telephone should use hand-free equipment.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state the proportion of serious or fatal road accidents occasioned by right turns; and what action he is taking to reduce their occurrence.

Mr. Chope: A total of 17 per cent. of all fatal or serious road accidents involve a vehicle turning right. The highway code advises motorists on the correct procedure for making a right turn and this advice is reinforced in my Department's publicity programme. Many of the small-scale engineering works to improve road safety address this problem. The expanded national road building programme will create new higher-quality roads which are generally safer and on which right-turning accidents are less common.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many outstanding approvals there are for the provision of light-controlled right turns that eliminate conflicting movement; what delay has occured in their installation; and what plans he has to eliminate significant delay.

Mr. Chope: The provision of signal-controlled right turns that eliminate conflicting traffic movements is within the scope of the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1981. Equipment for this purpose is already type approved by the Department and does not require specific approval. Technical advice has been published showing correct layout of signals, signing and roadmarkings. In the case of trunk roads the Department's policy is to provide signal-controlled right turns where appropriate.

Transport Policy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with his counterparts in the European Council over developments in environmental aspects of transport policy following the publication of the White Paper on the environment (Cm. 1200) in September.

Mr. Parkinson: None. But following consultation between our Departments, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will press for the introduction of tight emission controls for cars of all sizes at the European Council of Environment Ministers on 29 October. At a later stage he will press for the adoption by the Council of the tighest practicable emission standards for heavy diesel vehicles, and I understand that the European Commission expects to submit shortly to the Council of Transport Ministers proposals on transport and the environment generally.

Network SouthEast

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what investment plans he has approved for British Rail Network SouthEast with particular reference to new rolling stock for the north-east Kent routes; and when he expects delivery of such stock.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail has not yet put to us investment proposals relating to new rolling stock to be deployed in north-east Kent. Last year we approved proposals for 400 vehicles for inner suburban services in south-east London and north-west Kent. We have approved in principle further vehicles and infrastructure works for this area. The whole scheme will cost £700 million in total. The new trains will begin operation from 1992 onwards.

Midland Line Electrification

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further representations he has received, and what meetings he has had, with east midlands local authorities, regarding the midland line electrification; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I have received a number of representations about electrification of the midland main line and I recently met representatives from Leicestershire county council; Northamptonshire county council and Kettering borough council, to discuss this issue. British Rail has not so far identified a robust commercial case for electrification; but I hope that the local authorities will continue to discuss their plans with BR.

Kegworth Crash

Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the official report into the cause of the accident to a Boeing 737 near Kegworth on 8 February 1989 will be published.

Mr. Parkinson: The report of the Department's air accidents investigation branch (AAIB) into the accident, which occurred on 8 January 1989, is being published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The report contains 31 safety recommendations addressed, directly or indirectly, to the Civil Aviation Authority which has the statutory responsibility for the safety regulation of civil aviation in the United Kingdom. The AAIB's recommendations are passed to the CAA as soon as they are determined and I understand that the CAA has already completed action or put research into train as a result.

The report is very detailed and comprehensive and the AAIB is to be congratulated on a most thorough investigation into circumstances surrounding this accident.

Networker Trains (Kent Coast)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has taken any decisions that will result in the delayed introduction of the new networker trains to serve the Kent coast routes; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 17 October 1990]: Decisions on the provision of external finance for British Rail for the three years to 31 March 1994 will be announced at the time of the autumn statement. It is for British Rail to decide its investment priorities in the light of the external and internal funds available to it; and it will be updating its plans in due course.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mobility Allowance

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many reviews of mobility allowance claims were conducted during the last year for which statistics are available.

Mr. Scott: During 1989, the medical questions were reconsidered, on review, in 720 claims for mobility allowance.

Attendance Allowance

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many reviews of attendance allowance claims were conducted during the last year for which statistics were available.

Mr. Scott: In 1989, the total number of decisions reviewed was 66,574.

Pensions

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of people currently retiring will receive the basic rate by way of retirement pension.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In the six-month period ending March 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 317,000 claims for retirement pension; 244,940 awards were made of which 79·45 per cent. received the full rate basic retirement pension.

Elderly People (Residential Care)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he received the report of Messrs. Price Waterhouse on the costs of residential care in charitable and proprietorial homes for elderly persons; and if he will place a copy in the Library of the House of Commons.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The report was received on 20 September. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be making a statement shortly.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to review the 75-plus age disqualification for access to assistance from the independent living fund.

Mr. Scott: The decision to restrict eligibility to those aged between 16 and 74 and who also receive attendance allowance at the higher rate was taken by the trustees in the light of the resources made available for this financial year. We understand that they are keeping this decision under review.

Mesothelioma

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information the Government collect about the number of people suffering from mesothelioma; and what action the Government have taken to support and compensate all victims.

Mr. Scott: The Health and Safety Executive collects figures from death certificates mentioning mesothelioma and the Department keeps records of the number of industrial injuries claims made for this disease. Industrial injuries benefit and war disablement pensions can be awarded to claimants with mesothelioma and additional benefits can be paid depending on other needs. In addition, the Pneumoconiosis (Workers Compensation) Act 1979 provides some measure of compensation to those people or their dependants who cannot sue their employer because he has gone out of business.

Community Charge

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are receiving the reduced personal allowance due to downrating after over six weeks hospitalisation and are still liable for community charge.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information is not available in the form requested. All hospital patients who are receiving Income Support, and who are not exempted from paying the community charge, are entitled to maximum community charge benefit.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated total number of carers looking after disabled, sick or elderly people in the United Kingdom; how many carers claimed (a) invalid care allowance and (b) income support in 1989; and if he will launch a review of carers' incomes.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated total number of carers looking after disabled, sick or elderly people in Wales; and how many of these receive (a) invalid care allowance or (b) income support.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 17 October 1990]: The information is not available in the form requested.

Any estimate of the number of carers of disabled people has to make certain assumptions on the amount of care provided. The 1985 general household survey suggested that there were 1·4 million adults in Great Britain caring for disabled people for at least 20 hours a week.

The numbers of carers in Great Britain in receipt of invalid care allowance (which is intended for people who forgo work opportunities to care for an attendance allowance recipient for at least 35 hours a week) was 119,000 on 30 June 1989. On 31 May 1989, 23,000 people were receiving income support who were also receiving invalid care allowance, or whose partners were.

A report based on research commissioned by the Department into the effectiveness of invalid care allowance as an income maintenance benefit is expected to be published in the next few months.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 18 October.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 18 October.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 18 October.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 18 October.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Separate Assessment

Q54. Sir David Price: To ask the Prime Minister if she will now introduce legislation to ensure that husbands and wives are assessed separately for social security and community charge.

The Prime Minister: No. All the income-related benefits including community charge benefit, follow the principle that couples share their income and capital resources, and their claims for benefit are assessed jointly. The Government believe that it is right for couples to share the responsibility of running their homes and paying their bills. There is no good reason why community charge benefit should differ from other income-related benefits in this respect.

Macclesfield

Q169. Mr. Winterton: To ask the Prime Minister whether she has any plans to visit Macclesfield.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

United Nations

Q172. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to pay an official visit to the United Nations.

The Prime Minister: I visited the United Nations earlier this month. I have at present no plans for a further visit.

Child Benefit

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if she will estimate what proportion of (a) the value of personal tax allowances of people under retirement age, (b) the value of mortgage interest tax relief of people under retirement age and (c) child benefit goes to individuals or families with incomes of more than £20,000 a year.

The Prime Minister: The latest estimates in respect of 1990-91 are as follows:

Percentage benefiting single people or married couples with incomes over £20,000

	Percentage
(a) Personal tax allowances[1]	35
(b) Mortgage interest tax relief[1]	50
(c) Child benefit	35

[1] The percentages benefiting individual taxpayers with incomes over £20,000 are 20 per cent. and 30 per cent. for (a) and (b) respectively.

Family Income

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if she will give updated estimates of the cost of achieving a £2 post-tax increase in the income of a two-child family by (a) increasing child benefit, (b) increasing the married man's allowance and (c) increasing the average level of male earnings.

The Prime Minister: Increasing the average level of earnings depends on the performance of the economy, as indeed does any general improvement in living standards. The estimated direct costs of increasing child benefit or the married couples' allowance to give an additional £2 per week to most two-child families are as follows, but it should be noted that the increase in income a family derives from them depends also on its individual circumstances.

(a) an increase in child benefit of £1 a week would have a gross cost of around £630 million a year.

(b) Increasing the married couple's allowance (together with the additional personal allowance) by £416 would have a gross cost of around £1,150 million a year.

Child Allowance

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if it remains her policy that the level of the child cash allowance may still be dealt with in the Budget:

(2) if, while retaining the Department of Social Security to administer the child allowance scheme, she will limit the responsibility for determining the level of the child cash allowance to the Chancellor of the Exchequer and herself.

The Prime Minister: The Social Security Act 1986 requires the Secretary of State for Social Security to review the level of child benefit each year having regard to the national economic situation and any other matters which he considers relevant. This duty is most appropriately discharged as part of the annual review of social security matters.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister what is the current level of electoral registration; and what steps Her Majesty's Government proposes to increase the level of electoral registration before the closing date for entries.

The Prime Minister: The numbers of parliamentary elec tors on the 1990 electoral register for each part of the United Kingdom, together with the corresponding figures for 1989, are given in the table. The Home Office has continued to assist electoral registration officers in their statutory duty of preparing the electoral register in a number of ways. It has again this year conducted a nationwide advertising campaign designed to encourage people to complete and return the electoral registration form; and has produced publicity and an explanatory leaflet aimed at encouraging young people to register.

Research into the working methods of electoral registration officers is undertaken annually, and the results are used to inform Home Office guidance on best practice. It also amends and improves the electoral registration form, form A, where necessary, and is producing revised and updated practice notes for electoral registration officers. The most recent of these covers the effective use, at each stage of the compilation of the electoral register, of the electoral registration officer's statutory right of access to the community charge register.

Parliamentary electors

	1989	1990
England	36,365,916	36,388,575
Wales	2,194,625	2,207,542
Scotland	3,932,911	3,936,704
Northern Ireland	1,120,508	1,130,602

China

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to discuss with her European Economic Community counterparts the normalisation of relations with China; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Policy towards China has been regularly discussed within the Community and the measures adopted last year have been kept under review. We have been advocating for some time a steady resumption of normal relations. The subject is likely to be discussed again at the meeting of the Foreign Affairs Council on 22-23 October.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to allow her Ministers to resume normal visits to China; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I hope that we can agree shortly with our Community partners on a steady resumption of normal Ministerial visits to and from China. Our partners have of course also always accepted our special need to maintain contact with China over Hong Kong.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to seek to persuade the International Monetary Fund and World Bank to resume normal lending to China; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: China has not sought recently to borrow from the IMF. We fully supported the decision taken at the Houston economic summit in July to consider World Bank loans to China that would contribute to the reform of the Chinese economy, especially loans that would address environmental concerns.

WALES

Industrial Development

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will convene a conference at Mold, Clwyd, to consider future industrial development in north-east Wales with Clwyd local authorities, the Confederation of British Industry, the Trades Union Congress and others.

Mr. David Hunt: No. Ministers held extensive consultations with local authorities and the representative bodies prior to the publication last December of the document "A55: The Road of Opportunity", which sets out a range of policies and proposals to ensure the future success of North Wales.

Land Sales

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received opposing the sale of the Llwyn Mawr site owned by West Glamorgan county council.

Mr. Grist: Since he issued the direction to the county council on 22 August, my right hon. Friend has received 27 letters and one petition.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he received, and how many were from developers, asking him to require West Glamorgan county council to sell the Llwyn Mawr site; and on what dates these representations were received.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend received one representation from a private developer on 20 April 1988 requesting that a direction be served on West Glamorgan county council to sell the land.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in how many cases since June 1979 his Department has instructed an education authority to sell land being held for future school development.

Sir Wyn Roberts: One.

Health Service

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the percentage of those waiting for non-urgent operations who wait longer than for one year, in each of the health authorities in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The percentage of people who were waiting for non-urgent operations in hospitals in each of the Welsh district health authorities as at 31 March 1990, and had waited for a year or more, is given in the following table:

	Per cent.
Clwyd	13·6
East Dyfed	10·0
Pembrokeshire	53·9
Gwent	26·0
Gwynedd	15·3
Mid Glamorgan	32·5
Powys	0·0
South Glamorgan	25·5
West Glamorgan	19·4

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to which hospitals have been able to reduce the number of patients waiting for non-urgent operations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to table 6 of the Welsh hospital waiting list bulletin 1990, No. 2, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

In addition, the following hospitals also reduced the numbers waiting for non-urgent treatment:
Maesteg general
Talygarn
Breconshire war memorial
Machynlleth and district
Children's ear nose and throat, South Glamorgan

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the rise in the number of people waiting for non-urgent operations, as a percentage and as a number; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: At 31 March 1990, the non-urgent waiting list was 42,685, a rise of 11 per cent. or 4,214 on the previous year. During 1989, in-patient and day case throughout increased by 7,549 to 534,478, a rise of 1·4 per cent.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy concerning the need to cut down the waiting time for non-urgent surgery.

Mr. Grist: Health authorities are well aware of the importance which the Government places on the need to address the time people have to wait to receive treatment or diagnosis, whether urgent or non-urgent.

Record resources have been made to the NHS in Wales in response to increased demand and to reflect higher activity levels. In addition, central funding continues to be available to support the initiative launched in 1986 to tackle the more problematic lists and three treatment centres have been set up to ensure speedier treatment for those who suffer from specific key disabling conditions.

For the future, all health authorities will be expected to pay particular attention to waiting lists in the contracts which they negotiate with their providers.

River Dee Crossing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet Alyn-Deeside council, Clwyd county council, Queensferry community council, Shotton town council, Connah's Quay town council and Hawarden town council to discuss matters relating to the need for a new crossing of the River Dee.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Dee crossing scheme was conditionally accepted for transport grant support in 1990-91. An application from Clwyd county council for continued conditional acceptance in 1991-92 is under consideration. Progress on the scheme is a matter for the county council.

British Urban Development

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with British Urban Development concerning its proposed development project in Swansea.

Mr. David Hunt: I discussed progress on the Tawe Vale project with the deputy chairman of the BUD on 26 July and offered to meet him when specific detailed proposals were available.

Young People (Secure Accommodation)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list for each facility in Wales providing secure accommodation for young persons for each of the years 1975, 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989, the number of admissions and discharges according to the sex and age of young persons accommodated and according to the legal basis on which they were accommodated;

(2) if he will list for each facility in Wales providing secure accommodation for young persons for each of the years 1975, 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989, the number of places available; whether such places were available for boys and-or girls; and what was the age range for which such places were available.

Mr. Grist: I will write to the hon. Gentleman, and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Educational Psychologists

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales why paragraphs 46, 47 and 48 of the Department of Education and Science circular "Grants for Education Support and Training" are omitted from the Welsh Office equivalent circular; what are the respective numbers of educational psychologists in relation to pupil numbers in Wales, England, Scotland and Ireland; what are the equivalent figures for each Welsh county; how many posts are unfilled; and whether any bilingual posts are unfilled.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Paragraph 47 of the Department of Education and Science circular is dealt with under activity 12(91) of the equivalent Welsh Office circular. The initial training of educational psychologists has not been classed as a national priority area within the Welsh Office programme for education support and training in 1991-92, because of the many and competing demands on available resources. Local authorities are free to train educational psychologists from their own resources for that year. The Welsh Office will be keeping the situation under review and will consider future support in the light of local demand and priorities.

Details of the numbers of educational psychologists in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland are set out in the following table. No comparable statistics are available for Wales but, as part of the review mentioned above, the Welsh Office will be seeking specific information from local authorities.

	England January 1989	Scotland September 1989	Northern Ireland October 1990
Number of educational psychologists employed by local authorities	[1]1,400	[1]318	[2]60
Pupil numbers	6,731,047	744,061	339,185

IBM Contract

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to make use of the credit note issued by IBM UK to his Department in respect of its under-performance in completing the contract for the financial systems computer software installation.

Mr. David Hunt: Use has already been made of the credit note, and it is expected that it will be fully expended before the end of the current financial year.

Clwyd Health Authority

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the new members of the Clwyd health authority giving any appropriate qualifications.

Mr. Grist: With effect from 17 September 1990, the memberships of Clwyd district health authority is as follows:

Non-Executive Members
Mrs. A. L. Roberts, (Chairman of DHA)
Mr. T. J. McAllister, C Eng, MICE, MIWEM, MBIM
Mr. T. G. Jones
Mr. J. R. Slater, FCA
Mrs. A. Waters, LLB
Dr. T. M. Hayes, MB, Chb, FRCP

Executive Members
Dr. D. T. Jones, FFCM, FRCGP, FRSH
Mr. B. F. Jones, FCCA
Dr. A. L. J. Williams, JP, NBBF, SSCM, DPH, AKC, DRCOG, MSCH
Mr. S. W. Jones, RGN, RMN
Mr. W. J. Ravenscroft, BA, ACIS, MIPM

Menai Straits (Sewage Discharges)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will order an investigation into the discharge of untreated sewage from the pathology laboratory at Ysbyty Gwynedd via Pen Rhos Garnedd into the Menai Straits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No. I am advised by Dwr Cymru Cyfyngedig that the discharge from Ysbyty Gwynedd receives treatment at Treborth sewage works.

SCOTLAND

Forestry

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the woodland grant scheme applications made since 1 June 1989 in respect of land in the study area covered by the Highland regional council's examination of forestry in Caithness and Sutherland, indicating into which of the four zones identified by the Highland regional council's report these applications fell and the result of the application in each case;

(2) if he will list the woodland grant scheme applications made since 1 June 1989 in respect of land in the study area covered by the Highland regional council's examination of forestry in Caithness and Sutherland in cases where the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds had not been consulted, indicating the total land area of proposed forestry in each case.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is set out in the following tables, which cover the period 1 June 1989-1 October 1990.

The Nature Conservancy Council and the Highland regional council—but not the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds—have been, or will be, consulted directly by the Forestry Commission over each of these applications.

Children's Hearings

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the amount of money spent by his Department, separate from that employed by the regional councils and islands councils, on publicising the system of children's hearings in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Scottish Office has arranged and funded over the past nine years national press advertising to assist in the annual recruitment of new members to children's hearings system. Expenditure has been as follows:

Year	£
1982	25,000
1983	20,000
1985	22,000
1986	16,000
1987	26,000
1988	30,000

Year	£
1989	45,000
1990	50,000

There was no national publicity in 1984.

Education Vouchers

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what consideration he has given to the introduction of vouchers into Scottish education;

(2) whether he has any plans to introduce education vouchers into Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend has no immediate plans to introduce a voucher scheme in Scotland. A pilot scheme to provide students in further education with training credits is being tested in Grampian region.

Education Policy

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the initiatives in education policy he has under consideration.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend gives high priority to the implementation of initiatives in education policy already in hand, such as curriculum assessment review, development of the effectiveness of school boards, staff development and appraisal; the development of Scottish vocational qualifications; wider access to post school education; and improvement in the management of further and higher education. New initiatives in education policy will be announced when it is appropriate to do so.

Junior Doctors (Working Hours)

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the actions of Greater Glasgow health board in seeking to require junior doctors at Southern general hospital, Glasgow, to work 115 hours per week; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 15 October 1990]: None. The employment of junior doctors at the Southern general hospital is a matter for Greater Glasgow health board. In two cases which have recently received extensive publicity, I understand that the junior doctors concerned had contracted to work from 1 August 1990 a one in three rota, with prospective cover. This meant that their normal period of duty of 88 hours a week rose to 115 hours, including time spent on call, when covering while their colleagues are on holiday and study leave, and they were paid accordingly from the start of their contract. Greater Glasgow health board is currently examining ways of reducing the hours of work of all its junior staff, including those at the Southern general hospital, who are on rotas more onerous than one in three.

Self-employment

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the latest figures of self-employed people in Roxburgh and Berwickshire.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 15 October 1990]: The latest information on this is from the 1981 Census of population, which shows that there were 1,314 self-employed residents in Berwickshire and 1,732 self-employed residents in Roxburgh in Spring 1981. Information on self-employment from the 1991 census of population is expected to become available in 1992.

Tree Planting

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many trees have been planted in Scotland under planting schemes aided by Her Majesty's Government; and what expenditure is involved;

(2) how many trees have been planted in England and Wales under planting schemes financed by Her Majesty's Government; and what expenditure has been involved.

Mr. Michael Forsyth (holding answer 17 October 1990): The areas grant-aided by the Forestry Commission in the ten years to 31 March 1990 are given in the table.

hectares[1]

	New planting	Restocking
Scotland	145,600	14,400
England	14,700	23,400
Wales	8,300	2,500

[1] The figures have been rounded to the nearest 100 hectares.

The Forestry Commission paid out £68·3 million in grants over this period; the breakdown of this figure by country is not available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Grand Metropolitan /Alders Deal

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the results of his consideration of the Monopolies and Mergers Commissions investigation into the Grand Met/Alders deal.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 17 October 1990]: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the merger situations between Elders IXL Ltd. and Grand Metropolitan plc was published on Tuesday 16 October.

ENERGY

Hinkley Point C Inquiry

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he intends to publish the data on plutonium production set out in recommendation 3 of the Barnes report on the Hinkley C inquiry, detailed at page 960 in volume 3, to which he agreed in his decision letter; and if he will make it his policy to publish the said data in the Official Report.

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is being published today and copies of the press release will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consideration he gave to seeking a parliamentary debate on the recommendations of the Barnes report on the Hinkley Point C public inquiry, before his statement granting consent which was issued in his reply to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson), Official Report, 6 September, column 604.

Mr. Baldry: In fairness to all concerned with this decision. My right hon. Friend wanted to make a prompt announcement of his decision on the recommendations of the Barnes report on the Hinkley Point C public inquiry.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson), Official Report, 6 September, column 604 (i) how many copies of the full inspector's report of the Hinkley inquiry have been printed. (ii) to whom they have been distributed, (iii) what is the sale price of the full report; (iv) what has been the cost to date of printing the report and (v) how many copies of the summary report and decision letter have been (a) published and (b) distributed and to whom.

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is as follows:
(i) 1,800;
(ii) Parliament, the relevant planning authorities, Government Departments, Nuclear Electric and all those objectors who appeared at the inquiry and requested a copy of the report;
(iii) £80;
(iv) £134,000. The final amount will be recovered from the applicant, Nuclear Electric plc; and (v)(a) 5,000 of the summary report and 1,100 of the decision letter; and
(b) the same as in (ii) plus the media.

Isle of Wight (Hydro-electric Barrage)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether any public expenditure is involved in the proposed hydro-electric barrage between Hurst Castle and the Isle of Wight.

Mr. Wakeham: My Department has not been approached about this proposal and the project is not included in the renewable energy research and development programme.

ENVIRONMENT

Brewers (Sports Sponsorship)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will meet the Fosters brewing company to discuss adherence to the British brewers' voluntary self-denial about sponsoring motor racing and racing cars.

Mr. Atkins: I have no plans to meet the Fosters brewing company.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the construction contracts entered into by the Property Services Agency since September 1988 in respect of which no competitive tenders have been sought.

Mr. Key: No. In the period referred to, the Property Services Agency placed in excess of 5,000 contracts for building and construction work in this category.

Travellers

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance is given to local authorities on the criteria for deciding land suitable for use as residential gipsy traveller sites; and whether these or other criteria relate to land designated for housing purposes.

Mr. Key: Circular 28/77 and the site design guide, which is currently being revised, give guidance to local authorities on the criteria which they should follow in selecting land as suitable for gipsy sites. The criteria do not refer to whether the land in question is designated for housing purposes.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent estimate has been made of the shortfall in the provision of residential sites for gipsy and traveller people; and in which ways local authorities are encouraged to meet their obligations to provide sites.

Mr. Key: A spot count of gipsy caravans is undertaken on behalf of my Department by metropolitan-district councils in England every six months. At the time of the count in July 1990 a total of 11,967 caravans were recorded, of which 4,610 (38·5 per cent.) were on unauthorised sites.

The Caravan Sites Act 1968 placed a duty on county councils, metropolitan districts and London boroughs to provide sites for gipsies residing in or resorting to their area. The Government provide 100 per cent. grant aid towards the reasonable capital costs of construction of sites.

Management Consultants

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 15 October, if he will name the consultants who have been employed to advise on the development of financial and management systems.

Mr. Chris Patten: The names requested are as follows:
KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock
Mr. K. Worthy
Spicers Consulting Group (now called Spicer Oppenheim)
SPT Management Consultants
Touche Ross
Some of these have worked on more than one project.

Public Rented Housing

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any proposals to turn public rented housing accommodation into a compulsory mortgage scheme.

Mr. Key: No.

Rent Arrears

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table setting out the top 20 local authorities whose rent arrears are the greatest.

Mr. Chris Patten: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Noise Review Working Party

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the report of the noise review working party; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The report of the working party is being published today and copies are being made available in the Library.

The working party was chaired by Mr. W. J. S. Batho and included representatives of local government, industry and voluntary bodies. I am most grateful for their efforts and pleased with the outcome.

The report is most timely in view of current public concern about noise pollution and I welcome the wide range of recommendations it contains. This is the most thorough review of noise control to take place since the Control of Pollution Act (COPA) was passed in 1974. Although we have no reason to believe that the framework of that Act is seriously defective, we are aware that the number of complaints about noise has more than doubled in the last decade.

On the basis of current knowledge the Government are satisfied that adequate controls exist to ensure that people in their homes, workplaces and when travelling are not exposed to levels of noise which threaten their health. We are concerned to lessen the exposure of people to levels of noise which constitute a nuisance, but have to weigh reductions against feasibility and cost. The risk of exposure to high noise levels is increasing: we travel more, own more sound reproduction equipment, use more machinery. We also have better equipment to measure and control noise. So both the challenge and opportunity are there for us to improve our procedures.

The Government have already acted on many of the report's recommendations. Local authorities' basic duties have been clarifed in the Environmental Protection Bill. The index for measuring aircraft noise has been changed. The working party's thinking is reflected in the noise chapter of the Environmental White Paper. The report contains a wide range of recommendations, many acceptable in principle, and they will all be seriously considered. The following paragraphs set out the Government's initial response to each chapter.

Planning and Noise. The Government are committed to revising DOE circular 10/73 (Welsh Office 16/73). Scottish Development Department circular 23/73 will be also be revised. It is accepted in principle that all potentially noisy development activities should be taken into account, including road, rail and air transport, sport, entertainment and countryside recreation. It is already recognised that inevitably noisy short-term activities such as construction may need to be controlled under nuisance legislation as well as by conditions imposed on planning permission: the controls on mineral working sites are the subject of a minerals planning guidance note, and controls on oil and gas extraction and landfills will be reviewed. The principle of three action levels is accepted and guidance will be developed. Local authorities are already empowered to require applicants for potentially noisy development to supply relevant information which can include noise implications.

Neighbourhood Noise. The Government are well aware of concern about neighbourhood noise from correspondence and debates as well as the increase in formal complaints to local authorities. The basic framework of control by abatement orders seems sound, but some improvements are needed. The need to clarify the duty on authorities to inspect their areas and investigate complaints was picked up at an early stage in the review and consulted on: an appropriate amendment has already been made to the Environmental Protection Bill. Many authorities already investigate complaints and operate an out of office hours service where appropriate.

The Government are sponsoring a pilot "quiet neighbourhood" scheme. The first part of the pilot will involve establishing the scheme through local organisations and is likely to be in place by the end of the year. The second part will involve monitoring the scheme once it is operating. Our aim is that if the pilot scheme is a success we will issue guidance to those interested in setting up schemes on how best to go about it. Discussions by the research contractor on where the pilot scheme is to be set up are at an advanced stage—it is likely to be a London borough—and a further announcement will be made shortly.

The creation of new offences for allowing buildings and open spaces to be used for noisy activities will be considered in the context of entertainment noise. We aim to devise simpler and more practical procedures for noise abatement zones. Consideration will be given to improving control over noisy activities on the highway, such as car repairs, which may cause a nuisance but are not adequately covered by existing legislation. DoE will publish further material designed to encourage responsible attitudes to noise and its prevention, and is aware of others produced by voluntary bodies and local associations.

Transport Noise. The Government are examining the feasibility of measuring vehicle noise in the annual MOT test and when inspecting vehicles at the roadside. We shall consider whether compensation in respect of road traffic noise should be paid on a sliding scale and whether it would be practicable to extend compensation to those affected by permanent traffic management schemes. We are concerned also to ensure parity of treatment for those who live near roads and those who live near railway lines. We have appointed a committee to recommend a national noise insulation standard for new railway lines, and we are considering an alternative to the private Bill procedure. We shall explore the idea of noise standards in the construction and use of trains.

The Government agree that noise created by the take-off and landing of aircraft from airfields and flight according to the rules of navigation should continue to be controlled under aviation law rather than COPA. We will continue to encourage airfield managements and in appropriate cases to require them to consult local authorities and local people about the management or administration of their aerodromes, which includes operational measures to reduce exposure to noise. Further thought will be given as to whether a clearer framework is needed for controlling noise from light or recreational aircraft, low flying, ground running and helicopters landing outside airfields.

Alarms. The Government propose to introduce mandatory controls for burglar alarms and will examine how car alarms can be improved.

Entertainment Noise We will issue guidance on the application of current legislation to the control of large parties. The Government will consult organisers and local authority associations with a view to establishing a code of conduct.

Noise within Buildings. The Government are aiming—for England and Wales—to extend the building regulations sound insulation requirements for new buildings, as far as practicable to cover flat conversions as they already do in Scotland. The need to ensure that insulation work can be properly inspected will be considered.

Codes of Practice. The Government recognise the value of codes of practice and will work with interested parties to complete and issue the codes currently under discussion and to consider the case for further codes. The value of guidance leaflets is accepted, especially in the area of neighbourhood noise.

Research DOE will continue to sponsor a comprehensive programme of research on noise, which will include all the topics highlighted in the report—human response to noise, noise watch schemes, action thresholds, low-frequency noise and building insulation testing. The Department of Transport already has a major programme of research on transport noise, but will consider whether further research is necessary to formulate a common measure for the assessment of noise from all the main forms of transport. The Health and Safety Executive will sponsor research on noise in the workplace.

A further statement will be made next summer on the progress made in our deliberations.

Housing Statistics

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many Government-owned empty properties there are in (a) Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde Region and (c) Scotland.

Mr. Key [holding answer 16 October 1990]: There are no Government-owned empty properties in Glasgow. There are seven vacant in Strathclyde and a total of 15 throughout Scotland of which all but two are up for disposal.

County Hall

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if any building or alteration works connected with the proposals made by the development group took place in county hall before 8 October.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 16 October 1990]: I have no knowledge of any such works.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the future of county hall.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 16 October 1990]: Following publication on 24 July of the inspector's report of an inquiry into planning appeals to the proposed redevelopment of county hall my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has invited the applicants to submit amendments to the planning application by 7 November. If there is occasion to do so he will reopen the inquiry before determining the application. It remains the responsibility of the London residuary body to dispose of the property in the interests of London charge payers.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has anything to add to his statement of 26 March, Official Report, column 116, about the conditions required to be met for entry to the exchange rate mechanism.

Mr. Maude: I have nothing to add to the statement my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer made on 15 October at column 928-29.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement outlining the effect the decision to join the exchange rate mechanism of the exchange rate mechanism will have on the United Kingdom's trade balance with the European Economic Community.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 17 October 1990]: Future movements in the United Kingdom's trade balance with the EC will be influenced by a number of different factors. ERM entry will reinforce counter-inflationary policy and provide a better framework for British industry to control costs.

Tax Fraud

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the present practice of the board of Inland Revenue with regard to instituting criminal proceedings in case of suspected tax fraud.

Mr. Major: The practice of the board of Inland Revenue in cases of fraud in relation to tax is as follows:

1. The board may accept a money settlement instead of instituting criminal proceedings in respect of fraud alleged to have been committed by a taxpayer.
2. It can give no undertaking that it will accept a money settlement and refrain from instituting criminal proceedings, even if the taxpayer has made a full confession and has given full facilities for investigation of the facts. It reserves to itself full discretion in all cases as to the course it pursues.
3. Nevertheless, in considering whether to accept a money settlement or to institute criminal proceedings, its decision is influenced by the fact that the taxpayer has made a full confession and has given full facilities for investigastion into his affairs and for examination of such books, papers, documents or information as the board may consider necessary.

The purpose of this statement is to clarify the former statement—given by the then Chancellor Sir John Anderson—and to bring its language up to date. It is not intended to make any substantive changes.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Michael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on voluntary organisations in England and Wales of any harmonisation of value added tax which would end the zero-rating concessions at present in force.

Mr. Ryder: The Government recognise that the total VAT burden falling on the United Kingdom voluntary sector would have increased by about £500 million a year if the EC Commission's original proposals for tax approximation in the single market had been adopted. The Government therefore welcome the Commission's recent acceptance of zero-rating in certain circumstances after 1992 but is opposed to any proposals which interfere with our existing VAT reliefs.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the charities or types of charity that might be adversely affected by the removal of current zero-rating concessions as a result of harmonisation within the EEC.

Mr. Ryder: This information is not readily available. In any case, EC decisions in tax matters require the unanimous agreement of all member states and there is no question of the Government being forced to accept any proposals on VAT approximation which might adversely affect charities.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the meeting in Luxembourg on 8 October of the European Council of Financial Ministers.

Mr. Maude: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply which my right hon. Friend the Chancellor gave to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) on 15 October at column 718.

Hospital Radio

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received for zero-rating value-added tax on hospital radio broadcasting equipment.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has received a small number of representations since the reply my predecessor gave to my hon. Friend on 6 July 1989 at columns 453-54.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he was consulted by the European investment bank in his capacity as Chancellor and as a director of the bank over the decision to lend £1,000,000,000 and £300,000,000 to the channel tunnel project; and what advice he offered to the bank on behalf of the United Kingdom Government on each loan decision.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 17 October 1990]: The statute of the European investment bank (EIB) requires the EIB to seek an opinion on each loan proposal from the member states in whose territory the project will be carried out. The opinion represents the view of the Government concerned in their capacity as a shareholder in the EIB.

The United Kingdom Government were duly asked for an opinion on the loans of £1 billion and £300 million to the channel tunnel project. These requests were made on 18 December 1986 and 3 May 1990 respectively. The EIB was informed by the Treasury that the Government had "no objection to the project's being assessed according to the EIB's normal criteria".

European Monetary System

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Her Majesty's Government has the power to withdraw sterling from the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 17 October 1990]: Yes, but we have no intention of doing so.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Research Equipment

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what representations he has received from higher education institutions about deficiencies in research equipment provision;

(2) what plans he has to assess the adequacy of research equipment in higher education institutions.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend is generally advised in these matters by the Advisory Board for the Research Councils and by the higher education funding councils. Other representations relevant to equipment matters are received from time to time.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what funds have been made available by the research councils for the purchase of research equipment in universities and polytechnics in each of the last two years.

Mr. Alan Howarth: In the financial years 1988-89 and 1989-90, the research councils made available £41,003,000 and £74,644,000 for the purchase of equipment in universities and polytechnics.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the finance which has been made available to universities and polytechnics for the purchase of research equipment by (a) charitable institutions and (b) industry in each of the last two years.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This information is not available centrally.

Higher Education Corporations

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many higher education corporations have been established under the provision of the Education Reform Act 1988.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Fifty-six higher education corporations have been established under the Education Reform Act 1988. Five have subsequently been dissolved and merged with other institutions, leaving a present total of 51.

Under-fives

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when the contents of the report recently submitted to him by the committee set up to deal with nursery education and the quality of child care for the under-fives will be published.

Mr. Eggar: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to the Member for Durham, North-West (Ms. Armstrong) on 17 October.

Primary Schools

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science from what date all primary schools will become eligible to seek grant-maintained status.

Mr. MacGregor: Primary schools with less than 300 registered pupils have in the past not been eligible to apply for grant-maintained status. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have now made an order which will enable all primary schools in England and Wales which are county or voluntary schools to apply for grant-maintained status. The order will come into force on 1 November 1990.

Standard Assessment Tasks

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the standard assessment tasks to be used to assess seven-year-olds in English, mathematics and science in 1991.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral statement that I made to the House earlier today.

HEALTH

Training

73. Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is proposing to improve the training of those involved in the food industry.

Mr. Dorrell: The Food Safety Act 1990 contains an enabling power which allows regulations to be made requiring food handlers to receive training in food hygiene.

The Government put forward their proposals on the subject in a consultation document which was issued to interested parties at the end of last year. It proposed that all food handlers should be required to receive an appropriate level of training in food hygiene. The Government intend that the method of training used to achieve this should be as flexible as possible, and should build on existing good practice in the industry.

The consultation period ended on 30 June, and responses are currently being considered. Draft regulations will be published for a further round of consultation early next year.

Travellers

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he has given to the Maternity Alliance's report, "Traveller mothers and babies: who cares for their health"; and what steps he proposes to take to ensure that traveller families receive adequate health care.

Mr. Dorrell: The report highlighted the obstacles which need to be overcome in providing adequate maternity and child health services to traveller families and suggested that they are best addressed through co-operation between local authorities, health authorities and the travellers themselves. The Department provides financial support to a travellers information and liaison unit run by the Save the Children Fund and will shortly be reviewing the progress of this project with the organisers to see if there are good practices or advice which could be disseminated more widely.

Legionnaire's Disease

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps have been taken to check whether any patients were infected by the Legionella outbreak at Queen's medical centre, Nottingham;

(2) what action he has taken on the recent outbreak of legionnaire's disease at the Queen's medical centre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: One patient in the medical block of Queen's medical centre has been diagnosed as suffering from Legionnaires' disease. The infection was discovered as a result of a continuing surveillance exercise in the centre. The following action was undertaken by local management:

—all patients at risk in the centre were individually screened and have been found not to be infected;
—the normal intensive surveillance of water supplies has been enhanced;
—the hospital's control of infection committee and the Health and Safety Executive have been informed.

Since the Department's guidance on the control of Legionellae was published in 1988, the hospital have taken extensive measures to minimise the risk of Legionaires' disease: This includes.

—substantial investment in cleaning and disinfecting water systems;
—increased hot water circulation temperatures;
—the removal of infrequently used water outlets;
—the regular flushing of remaining water outlets;
—the increased sampling of water supplies;
—the investigation of any relevant clinical conditions.

We are satisfied that everything is being done in accordance with guidance issued by the Department to minimise the risk to patient and public safety.

Food (Temperature Controls)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had on the need for improved temperature control standards for the British food industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department consulted widely with interested parties including manufacturers, retailers, caterers, distributors, consumer groups and enforcement agencies on proposals for the Food Hygiene (Amendment) Regulations which were laid before Parliament on 18 July 1990. The regulations require that the temperature of certain categories of food be contolled in order to reduce the risk of foodborne illness among the public. Officials in the Department and in MAFF have met with a number of interested parties both before the regulations were made and subsequently.

Correspondence

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth might expect a response to his letter of 8 June in connection with Mr. B. E. Brown.

Mr. Dorrell: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Lords) replied to my hon. Friend on 28 August.

Self-Governing Hospitals

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he intends to give approval to any application for self-governing status where the amount of medical support in the hospital concerned is minimal;

(2) if he will state the level of support shown by the medical and nursing profession in a hospital which is the subject of an application for self-governing status before he will give his approval to the proposal.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In assessing applications for NHS trust status, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State will be looking at a number of matters, including evidence that senior clinicians and other professional staff are involved in the management of the unit. The issues involved are complex and cannot be reduced to simple propositions.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out the criteria by which he will decide applications for hospitals to become self-governing.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The key criteria which my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State will use in assessing National Health Service trust applications are as follows:

(i) tangible benefits to patients and improvements in the quality of the services it offers;
(ii) strong leadership and effective management;
(iii) involvement of senior professional staff, including clinicians, in management; and
(iv) financial viability.

Young Persons (Secure Accommodation)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, for each facility providing secure accommodation for young persons for each of the years 1975, 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989, the number of places available; whether such places were available for boys and/or girls; and what was the age range for which such places were available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information in the form requested is not available for the full period. The tables provide information about the number of approved secure facilities provided by local authorities as at 31 December in each of the years 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989. All the facilities listed would accommodate children in the age range 10 to 18 years.

Secure accommodation approved for use 31 December 1985

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each facility providing secure accommodation for young persons for each of the years 1975, 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989, the number of admissions and discharges according to the sex and age of young persons accommodated and according to the legal basis on which they were accommodated.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Statistical information about the use made of secure facilities provided by local authorities was not collected centrally prior to 1984.

The information requested for the years 1984 to 1988 is given in the annual publication "Children Accommodated in Secure Units During the Year Ending 31 March", copies of which are available in the Library. The figures for 1989 will be published shortly.

Vitamin A

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department is giving to pregnant women about the consumption of vitamin A.

Mr. Dorrell: Our Department, together with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Foods, has been considering evidence which suggests that high levels of vitamin A may cause birth defects.

The Chief Medical Officer, Sir Donald Acheson, is cautioning women who are, or who may become, pregnant not to take vitamin A supplements except under medical supervision, and as a matter of prudence, not to eat liver or liver products because the high levels of vitamin A found in some samples of animal liver may be harmful.

The Chief Medical Officer has sought expert advice on this question and he has issued the following advice:

"While there is, at present, no positive evidence that any birth defects have arisen as a result of Vitamin A intakes within the United Kingdom, there have been a small number of case reports from abroad of birth defects in children of women who have taken supplements containing Vitamin A greatly in excess of the recommended daily amount. Worldwide, there has been only one case reported of birth defects in a baby born to a woman who had consumed large quantities of liver every day during her pregnancy.

Vitamin A is essential for good health. Pregnant women and nursing mothers have always been advised to make sure they get enough of it in their diet.

However, it has recently been suggested that an excess of Vitamin A may cause birth defects."

"This is why the Committee on Toxicity, reinforced by other experts, has been considering all the available information about the toxic effects of Vitamin A in the diet, how much of it people consume as supplements or in their food and whether these intakes may be harmful to unborn babies.

"They have now given me their advice and as a result I must caution women who are, or who may become, pregnant against taking any dietary supplements—including tablets and fish-liver oil drops—containing vitamin A, except on the advice of a doctor or ante-natal clinic. The vitamin supplements currently prescribed as part of ante-natal care for pregnant and nursing mothers contain a safe amount of vitamin A and should continue to be taken.

"I am also advising women who are pregnant, or who could become pregnant that as a matter of prudence they should not eat liver or products made from it such as liver pâte and liver sausage.

"Other women, men and children are not affected by this advice.

"Vitamin A is an essential nutrient but it is not essential to eat liver to acquire it. A balanced diet provides sufficient for healthy living. Apart from liver the main sources of vitamin A in the diet are carrots, margarine, dairy products, eggs, all green vegetables, tomatoes and other fruit. Eating such a diet poses no risks from any harmful effects of vitamin A, and women should continue to eat these foods as part of a balanced diet. Women who stop eating liver would however need to maintain, and preferably increase, their iron intakes by consuming more lean red meat and meat products, fortified breakfast cereals, bread and vegetables.

"The cause of high vitamin A levels in animal liver is being investigated as a matter of urgency with a view to seeing whether changes in current animal feeding practices and in the use of veterinary vitamin A supplements could reduce those levels.

"These investigations will take some time and, as high levels of Vitamin A have been reported in liver from a number of countries which export it to the United Kingdom, any effective action would have to be in concert with other countries. It is not yet clear how far levels of vitamin A in liver could be reduced but the situation will be closely monitored and fresh advice issued if the position changes."

The CMO's statement, together with further information, has been placed in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Extradition

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether, in the case of prisoners held on remand for the purposes of extradition, the requesting country pays the cost of imprisonment so incurred should they oppose bail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: It is established international practice in extradition cases for the requested country to bear the cost of the fugitive's detention.

Personal Data

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make a statement on the progress made by the working party studying reform of the Data Protection Act; what recent relevant international developments there have been; and whether any new legislation is envisaged in the near future.

Mrs. Rumbold: We are currently considering the report of the interdepartmental committee appointed to review the Data Protection Act 1984. The Government have also received recently a draft of a directive on data protection, and associated measures, from the European Commission. Legislation is unlikely before the directive has been adopted.

Visas

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the changes to visa requirements since 26 July.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: On 15 August we withdrew from nationals of Somalia the concession under which the visa requirement is waived for transit passengers who are booked on an onward flight within 24 hours. The same concession was subsequently withdrawn from Iraqi nationals with effect from 23 August. Under rules changes which took effect on 22 September Iraqi nationals are to be refused student visas and Iraqis already issued with such visas may be refused admission. Under an immigration rules change which took effect on 1 October visas are no longer required by nationals of Czechoslovakia and Hungary; this change is subject to the usual parliamentary procedure.

Travellers

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will announce his conclusions on the outcome of the review of section 39 of the Public Order Act; and whether he has plans to ensure that eviction powers take account of the needs of pregnant and newly-delivered traveller women.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We hope to announce the results of the evaluation of section 39 of the Public Order Act 1986 by the end of the year. There is already a defence in the section for an accused person to show that he had a reasonable excuse for failing to leave the land, which he had been directed by the police to leave, as soon as reasonably practicable. As part of the evaluation we are considering whether specific account should be taken of the health of trespassers before a direction to leave the land is given.

Police Records

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has issued any guidance or instruction to police forces on the length of time for which internal written or computer records should be preserved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Department has in the past asked forces to keep various records for a variety of reasons but details are not available and a comprehensive record could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The weeding of police records, where there is not a statutory requirement to keep them for a specified period, is a matter for chief officers. The code of practice for police computer systems issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers contains guidelines for the review and removal of personal data. A copy of the code of practice is in the Library. The guidelines are currently under review.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will seek a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis listing and describing all the notebooks and other written records that are required by standing orders, instructions or guidance to be personally kept or compiled by individual Metropolitan police officers for operational purposes (a) in the uniformed branch, and (b) in the CID;

(2) if he will seek a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis listing and describing all the written records that are required by standing orders, instructions or guidance to be kept for operational purposes at Metropolitan police stations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Metropolitan police require police officers to compile many different kinds of written records and it is not possible to list them all except at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those police forces in England and Wales which do not have central command and control computers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Nearly all forces make some use of computers in the handling of incidents and the deployment of resources. I understand, however, that the following forces do not have an integrated centralised command and control computer system which provides both these facilities:

Cumbria Constabulary
Durham Constabulary
Dyfed Powys Police
Gloucester Constabulary
Greater Manchester Police
Gwent Constabulary
Humberside Police
Lancashire Constabulary
Leicestershire Constabulary
Norfolk Constabulary
Northamptonshire Police
North Yorkshire Police
Nottinghamshire Constabulary
Thames Valley Police

The following four forces have decentralised computer systems which provide both command and control:

Avon and Somerset Constabulary
Devon and Cornwall Constabulary
Dorset Police
Surrey Constabulary

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Police National Computer contains a particular code for recording or indicating that an individual has made a false complaint or false complaints against the police.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett) on 15 October at column 725.

Suicide

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what dates young offenders have committed suicide while (a) in prison and (b) in secure accommodation in the last 10 years; on what date each inquest took place; what was the average time between suicide and inquest (i) for those who committed suicide while in custody and (ii) for those not in custody; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The dates on which persons under the age of 21 (both convicted and unconvicted) have died at their own hand while in prison custody in the last 10 years, and the details of the inquests into those deaths, are set out in the table. The dates on which inquests were held prior to 1988 are not readily available and I shall write to the right hon. Member. For the years for which the information is available the average time between death and inquest is 134 days. Information about deaths in local authority secure accommodation is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health. Information about the average time between death and inquest for people who commit suicide while not in prison custody is not available.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to improve the support to bereaved parents of prisoners who commit suicide in prison.

Mrs. Rumbold: Where an inmate dies in prison custody the governor is required, under prison and young offender institution rules, to inform at once the inmate's spouse or next of kin and also any person whom the prisoner may reasonably have asked should be informed. Governors are expected to exercise care and sensitivity in notifying relatives and responding to their questions and concerns.

We are currently preparing new guidance on the making of visits to bereaved relatives. The purpose of such visits would be to convey sympathy, to follow up matters of concern to the family and to provide information, where appropriate, about specialist bereavement services which are available in the community. We are also exploring the possibility of providing special training for selected members of prison staff by way of preparation for such visits.

Armley Prison

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently housed in Armley prison (a) on remand, (b) under 18-years-old, (c) for debt and (d) in total.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is as follows:

Prisoners held in Armley prison as at 17 October 1990

	Number
(a) Held on remand	200
(b) Under 18-years-old	46
(c) Held for debt offences	7
Total inmate population on 17 October 1990	895

Ethnic Minorities (Grant)

Mr, Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he has made for the future administration of grant to ethnic minorities under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966.

Mr. Waddington: I have today issued the new arrangements for section 11 grant following the consideration of the responses received to the consultation document published on 14 March this year. The grant will in future be administered under both the Local Government Act 1966 and by means of a grant to be newly established and known as ethnic minority grant (EMG). The new arrangements will come into effect from April 1992.

Copies have been placed in the Library.

It is important that the considerable contribution that our ethnic minorities make to the life and work of this country is fully recognised. The new arrangements will focus grant on supporting the Government's prime objectives to break down barriers experienced by members of the ethnic minorities. They are designed, in advance of legislative change, to ensure that the areas of greatest need are identified—both in the local authority and voluntary sectors. The grant will in future not be open ended and the continuing need for it will have to be shown. Workable proposals with identifiable objectives set, monitored and evaluated will be a means to ensure those ethnic minorities can take a full and active part in the life of this country.

There will be greater scope to pursue a larger number and wider range of more innovative projects; in particular by the increased involvement of the voluntary sector. This will be achieved by requiring local authorities to identify suitable voluntary sector projects for the placement of local authority staff and at the same time by specifically devoting a proportion of the grant directly to the voluntary sector through the new training and enterprise councils (TECs).

The TECs are becoming firmly established and by the time the new grant arrangements come into effect they will largely cover the whole country. Voluntary sector organisations, in particular those from the non-Commonwealth areas that have previously been unable to apply for such funds, will be able to make application for the new ethnic minority grant through the TECs.

The Government recognise that legislation will be required for fundamental reform of section 11, but believe that much can be done in advance to improve the administration of the grant.

The response to the consultation process from local authorities, the voluntary sector and individuals was considerable and the Government are grateful for the scale and scope of the comments made on their proposals. Where possible, comments and suggestions have been incorporated in the new arrangements. In response to specific requests from both local authorities and the voluntary sector it was announced on 5 September that the start date for the new arrangements would be deferred until 1 April 1992. This has allowed more time for the consideration of the comments and suggestions made. The grant has been subject to an overall cash limit (as recommended by the scrutiny report) since 1 April 1990; the other main changes in the funding arrangements set out in the draft circular are:

the emphasis of the grant in future will be on practical projects working to identified needs, such as a lack of English language or low achievement in schools, and local authorities will in future bid for funding for projects to be judged against such specific criteria;

all projects will therefore have to fall within the new criteria for grant as laid down in the statement of policy which accompanies the circular;

all projects will have to be regularly monitored and reviewed against recognisable performance targets;

in advance of formal legislative change arrangements are being made for some section 11 funding to be redirected to innovative projects that tackle ethnic minority need, to be sponsored by the new training and enterprise councils (TECs), with task forces and city action teams in suport;

local authorities will need to work closely with voluntary organisations and identify a proportion of projects for the voluntary sector;

new administrative arrangements will come into effect on 1 April 1992. Bids for funding will be invited on an annual basis to a fixed timetable.

The new arrangements will allow for wider and more innovative proposals, but existing projects will still be able to continue if they are brought within the new criteria. To increase effectiveness, all projects, whether local authority or voluntary sector based, will need to set clear objectives for achievement. They will on the one hand encourage, in advance of legislative change, the take-up of grant by the widest range of ethnic minority groups while on the other ensure that those seeking grant do not become wholly dependent on such funding. By this means I believe we shall enable more people to gain better access to all mainstream services and to thereby become full and effective members of our society.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

German Unification

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the agreement signed by the four occupying powers, the United Kingdom, the United States of America, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and France, with the two Germanies to enable unification to take place is a de facto peace treaty with Germany or whether a separate peace treaty will be signed to re-establish the legal status, responsibilities and liabilities of the new German state; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The treaty on the final settlement with respect to Germany settles definitively matters arising out of the Second World War as between the parties to the treaty. There will be no separate peace treaty.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if during his official visit to Argentina in early October, the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones), raised with ministers or officials of the Argentine Government the conditions under which Argentina would sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: My hon. Friend did raise nuclear non-proliferation with President Menem and Foreign Minister Cavallo during his visit to Argentina, and they discussed Argentine attitudes towards the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's attitude towards a nuclear test ban treaty following the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our position remains that, for the foreseeable future, the United Kingdom's security will depend on deterrence based, in part, on possession of nuclear weapons. This will mean a continuing requirement to test to ensure our weapons remain up to date and effective.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report (a) the remarks of the President of the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference concerning article VI and (b) preambular paragraphs 8 to 12 of the treaty; and if he will make a statement outlining Her Majesty's Government's response to President de Rivero's remarks.

Mr. Waldegrave: A record of the remarks of the President of the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference will be placed in the House of Commons Library when it becomes available. We share President de Rivero's assessment that agreement would have been possible on the final document proposed by the President but for the objections of one delegation.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline the reasons and the policy basis upon which Her Majesty's Government submitted annex A to section I of the non-proliferation treaty document MC 1/I at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference; and if he will list the countries that supported annex A.

Mr. Waldegrave: This text, on the nuclear capabilities of certain countries not party to the treaty, was one of several working papers put forward by various countries at the non-proliferation treaty review conference for discussion. The text was supported by a number of countries.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the texts of the proposals put by Her Majesty's Government to committees I, II and III at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. Most of our proposals were put forward as the conference unfolded, often orally. It would be meaningless to publish texts in isolation.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline the reasons why the United Kingdom Delegation submitted the document on final language to main committee III at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: The United Kingdom delegation was one of a number of delegations to put forward suggestions on which the review conference secretariat drew in preparing a first draft of language for the final document for circulation in main committee III.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline any changes made in Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the enforcement of full scope safeguards on all nuclear exports during 1990 and publish the response of the United Kingdom delegation to documents NPT/CONF IV/DC/1/ ADO 3(B) presented to the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: There have been no changes during 1990 in our long-standing position on the desirability of requiring full-scope safeguards as a condition of nuclear supply.

The conference achieved consensus language on this matter, which reads as follows:

"The Conference further urges the nuclear supplier States to require as a necessary condition for the transfer of relevant nuclear supplies to non-nuclear-weapon States under new supply arrangements, such a commitment and acceptance of such safeguards."

We will be discussing the question with other states concerned.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the response of the United Kingdom delegation at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference to the comments of the Nuclear Control Institute on the implementation of safeguards.

Mr. Waldegrave: The United Kingdom delegation did not respond at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference to any comments of the Nuclear Control Institute on the implementation of safeguards.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the main points of and Government reaction to, article VI and preambular paragraphs 8 to 12 set out at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: Article VI and preambular paragraphs 8-12 of the non-proliferation treaty primarily concern the responsibilities of states to work towards nuclear and general disarmament and to cease nuclear testing. Although these are long-term goals, considerable progress has been made since 1985 in arms control, in particular through the INF treaty and strategic arms reduction talks, and with the prospect of a treaty on conventional forces in Europe. But we do not believe that a cessation of nuclear testing is possible while we depend upon nuclear weapons for deterrence and in the absence of completely reliable means of verification.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ensure that copies of all the documents submitted to the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference and its three main committees by Her Majesty's Government are deposited in the Library.

Mr. Waldegrave: Copies of the following documents submitted to the Conference are being placed in the Library of the House:

(a) a paper on United Kingdom implementation of the treaty;

(b) the speech which I gave to the conference on 22 August.

(c) a paper jointly submitted with the other two NPT depositary powers about a combined review and extension conference in 1995.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline the response of Her Majesty's Government to (a) document NPT/CONF IV/M E II/WP 10 and (b) document NPT CONF IV/MC II/wpio/REV I contained in annex 4 and 5 of the main report and presented at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: Document NPT/CONF IV/MC II/WP10 was a working paper presented by the three depositary powers of the NPT and proposed language for the final document relevant to article X of the treaty concerning a conference in 1995 to extend the treaty document NPT/CONF Iv/MC 11/WP10/REV 1 was introduced by the depositary powers as a revision to their original working paper, in an effort to achieve consensus. Consensus could not be reached. Accordingly, the second main committee of the conference decided to annex these papers to its report.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish Her Majesty's Government's response to the proposals on the extension of applications for nuclear safeguards to cover peace orientated nuclear facilities in non-proliferation treaty signatory states, outlined in the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: The conference achieved consensus language on this point, which reads as follows:

"The Conference reiterates the calls for the continued pursuit of the principle of universal application of IAEA safeguards to all peaceful nuclear activities in all States".

The United Kingdom joined the consensus.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts were made by the United Kingdom delegation to achieve the adoption of a joint declaration at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference; and if he will make a statement on the reasons why the conference failed to adopt such a declaration.

Mr. Waldegrave: The United Kingdom made every effort to achieve a consensus final document. In the end, consensus was blocked by one delegation.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish Her Majesty's Government's response to the comment in paragraph I in article 3, of the report of main committee II at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference about the proliferation dangers posed by unsafeguarding nuclear activities in non-nuclear weapons states.

Mr. Waldegrave: We fully endorse the statement in the report of main committee II to the effect that unsafeguarded nuclear activities, which could lead to the spread of nuclear weapons capabilities in non-nuclear weapon states, pose serious proliferation dangers. This highlights the importance of the application of IAEA safeguards.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a list of all documents submitted in the name of Her Majesty's Government to the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference; how many copies of each document were produced; and what was the response of conference participants to the documents.

Mr. Waldegrave: The following documents were submitted formally by us to the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference:

(a) a paper on the United Kingdom's implementation of the treaty;

(b) the speech which I delivered to the conference on 22 August.

We do not know precisely how many copies of each document were produced. Conference participants welcomed a number of the ideas and statements in the documents.

In addition, our delegation put forward several suggestions for language for the final document.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish Her Majesty's Government's response to the proposals outlined in the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference to offer any nuclear materials installed for verification by submission to the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Mr. Waldegrave: The proposals resulting from the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference are currently being considered. Our policy will continue to be that all civil nuclear material held in the United Kingdom should be subject to Euratom safeguards under the treaty of 1957 establishing the European Atomic Energy Community and to the terms of the UK/Euratom/IAEA safeguards agreement of September 1976.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline the reasons for the United Kingdom delegation's reservation of judgment on paragraph 20 of the report of main committee II concerning safeguards, at the recent fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: We reserved our position on this paragraph because we had an alternative formulation. Consensus language was eventually achieved.

Cambodia

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will investigate the role of the Astra company of Ramsgate, and its Belgian subsidiary PRB, in exporting anti-tank rocket launchers to the armed forces of the Khmer Rouge operating in Cambodia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have no evidence to substantiate these allegations. A licence is required to export such equipment under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1989, as amended, and any breach of the controls would be carefully investigated.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy at the next European Council of Foreign Affairs Ministers to ask his counterparts from France and Germany whether any military equipment and offensive armaments have been exported from manufacturers in their respective countries to the armed forces of the Khmer Rouge operating in Cambodia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: These are matters for the Governments concerned.

Iraq

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to secure the release of Mr. Ian Richter since his imprisonment in Abu Ghraid gaol, near Baghdad, on 7 February 1987.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are doing all we can to bring Mr. Richter home safely as soon as possible.

We have raised his case with the Iraqis at every opportunity throughout the last four years. Her Majesty's ambassador in Baghdad also raises Mr. Richter's case at every possible opportunity, most recently on 20 August.

Although our task has become more difficult during the present crisis in the Gulf, Mr. Richter's case remains very much in our mind in our dealings with the Iraqis.

We are in touch with Mrs. Richter regularly about her husband's case.

Lebanon

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British relations with Lebanon.

Mr. Waldegrave: We will continue to give strong support to President Hrawi and the legitimate government of Lebanon. This is a time for reconciliation not recrimination. Following General Aoun's surrender we look for early and substantial progress on the basis of the Taif agreement towards a fully sovereign, independent Lebanon, free of foreign troops and armed militias.

Syria

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British relations with Syria.

Mr. Waldegrave: Syria is an important regional power with whom we would like to have normal relations, but this does depend on resolving the problems which led to the breach in relations in 1986. We welcome President Assad's decision to send troops to the Gulf in support of the international effort to defend Saudi Arabia and help restore the legitimate government of Kuwait.

International Atomic Energy Agency Conference

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the issue of nuclear weapons funding safeguards was raised by (a) the United Kingdom delegation or (b) any other delegation at the International Atomic Energy Agency conference at Vienna during September.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Spanish Government about the position of British lorry drivers and their vehicles held up in Spain by the current Spanish road haulage dispute; and what help can be offered through consulate arrangements to assist those suffering hardship or financial difficulties.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have made representations to the Spanish central and regional authorities about their responsibility for the safety of British lorry crews and vehicles held up near the Irun border post for several days.

Assistance, including financial, is being given by the Consular staff to all who are in need of help. The local authorities are providing food and drink.

Cambodia

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the responsibilities of Mr. Dennis Rupert Gallwey in relation to Cambodia and the forces of the Cambodian resistance during his recent posting to Bangkok.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Mr. Gallwey was engaged in general duties in support of the defence section at the British embassy in Bangkok.

Tibet

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement outlining the Government's policy towards Tibet.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Successive British Governments have always regarded Tibet as autonomous while recognising the special position of the Chinese authorities there. This remains our view. Against this background, we continue to call for dialogue between the Chinese Government and the Tibetan people. We have also told the Chinese authorities on every possible occasion of our concern about the human rights situation in Tibet.

Mr. Dennis Gallwey

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the current responsibilities of Mr. Dennis Rupert Gallwey.

Mr. Lenox-Boyd: Mr. Gallwey retired from Her Majesty's diplomatic service in April 1990.

Cambodia

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contact there was between his Department and Messrs. Anthony de Normann and Christopher Edward Mackenzie Giedt (a) before and (b) after their recent visit to Cambodia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: At his request, Mr. Mackenzie Geidt was briefed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on the situation in Cambodia before he and Mr. de Normann visited Indochina in 1989 at the invitation of the Institute for International Relations in Hanoi and the present regime in Phnom Penh. There was no subsequent contact between this Department and the two men on their visit. Within the last few days, there have been exchanges with officials in this Department about allegations against the two men in the media.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE

5. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the National Farmers Union to discuss bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Gummer: I am in regular discussion with the National Farmers Union on a wide range of issues, including BSE.

42. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to take any further measures to control BSE; and if he will make a statement.

56. Mr. John Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to take further measures to control BSE; and if he will make a statement.

6. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to take further measures to control BSE; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Legislation has, from 25 September, prohibited the use of certain bovine offals in all animal feedstuffs, including pet food.

In addition, legislation came into force on 15 October which will require cattle owners to maintain breeding records of their herds and to keep both these and animal movement records for 10 years. As well as tightening general disease control measures, this will enable the offspring of BSE cases to be traced more easily, should if prove necessary to do so.

National Consumer Council

9. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the National Consumer Council to discuss food issues.

16. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the National Consumer Council to discuss agricultural issues.

3. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the National Consumer Council to discuss food issues.

38. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the National Consumer Council to discuss food issues.

72. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the National Consumer Council to discuss agricultural issues.

Mr. Maclean: Representatives of the National Consumer Council were present on 12 July 1990 at the periodic meeting between my right hon. Friend and the office holders of consumer organisations.

Consumer Panel

14. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what items were discussed by the Consumer panel at its last meeting.

70. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what items were discussed by the consumer panel at its last meeting.

Mr. Maclean: The consumer panel met on 17 October 1990 and discussed a wide range of issues including food safety research and development, food surveillance, risk assessment, the food hazard warning system and freedom of information. The papers and minutes of this meeting are publicly available and have been placed in the Library of the House.

The next meeting of the panel will take place on 16 January 1991.

Farming and Wildlife Trust

17. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what form of support his Ministry has been able to offer to the Farming and Wildlife Trust.

Mr. Gummer: My Department supports the work of the Farming and Wildlife Trust both by financial contribution and by provision of services locally to the trust's farm conservation advisers.

Research

18. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to co-ordinate his Department's research with that in other European Community countries.

Mr. Curry: The main vehicle for the co-ordination of research within the European Community has been the series of framework programmes for R & D, the most recent of which was agreed on 23 April 1990. The Department has taken, and is taking, an active part in development of the relevant individual programmes under these frameworks which include provision for research into agriculture, fisheries and food. In addition, we maintain a range of other contracts, formal and informal, between MAFF scientists and their EC counterparts.

45. Mr. Mans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department is spending on food research in the current year.

Mr. Gummer: My Department plans to spend £20 million on food research in the current year.

Beef

19. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will next meet the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss the beef sector of the agricultural industry.

Mr. Gummer: I am in frequent contact with the President of the National Farmers Union about all aspects of the agriculture industry, including the beef sector.

64. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met European Community Agriculture Ministers to discuss trade in beef.

Mr. Gummer: I have regular contacts with Agriculture Ministers from other Community countries, in particular during meetings of the Agriculture Council. Matters related to the trade in beef are discussed as the need arises.

Food Irradiation

20. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what scientific evidence is available to him on the safety or otherwise of food irradiation; and what weight he accords to such evidence.

27. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what scientific evidence he has on the safety or otherwise of food irradiation; and what weight he gives to such evidence.

Mr. Maclean: The safety of food irradiation has been confirmed in the report of the independent Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods entitled "The Safety and Wholesomeness of Irradiated Foods".

This includes reports from other independent scientific committees dealing specifically with toxicology, nutrition, microbiology and radiology.

Many other national and international scientific committees, including the EC Scientific Committee for Food, have also concluded that food irradiation can safely be permitted.

The Government has accepted the conclusion on the many scientific evaluations that have been made world wide.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the legislative measures he will have to introduce prior to the introduction of food irradiation into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: On 6 August the Ministry and the Department of Health jointly published for public consultation the draft Food (Control of Irradiation) Regulations 1990. These regulations, which draw on new powers in the Food Safety Act 1990, would lift the current general prohibition on the sale of irradiated foods in Great Britain and introduce a plant-specific, product-specific licensing system for food irradiation facilities. The regulations are intended to come into force on 1 January 1991.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any plans to introduce the legislative measures to permit food irradiation in the United Kingdom prior to a decision being taken on its use in the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Government proposals for regulations that would lift the current general prohibition on the sale of irradiated foods and introduce a licensing system for food treatment facilities were published on 6 August. Irradiated foods have been accepted as safe by the World Health Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organisation of the United Nations and many national and international scientific committees including our own Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods. There is no justification for continuing to deny consumers and industry the option of benefiting from this process, which can enhance food safety and extend choice. But no one will be forced to buy irradiated food if they do not want to.

Houston Protocol

21. Mr. Stern: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the steps he is now proposing to further the aims of the Houston protocol in relation to the reduction of agricultural support.

Mr. Curry: The Houston summit stressed the importance of a successful conclusion to the GATT round. The United Kingdom is playing a leading role with the Community to ensure that the EC contributes constructively to discussions on reducing agricultural support.

Eggs

22. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many eggs were imported into the United Kingdom in the last 12 months for which figures are available; what was their value and what was the percentage change in the last 12 months.

Mr. Curry: Six hundred and eighty five million eggs were imported into the United Kingdom between September 1989 and August 1990 at a value of £29 million.

This represents an increase of 148 per cent. in volume and 211 per cent. in value over figures for the equivalent period in 1988-89.

Food From Britain

23. Mr. Waller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussion he has held with the chairman of Food From Britain on its objectives for 1990 and 1991.

Mr. Gummer: Since his appointment on 1 May 1990, I have met the chairman of Food From Britain on a number of occasions to discuss this and other issues.

Scottish Fishing Industry

24. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to meet with representatives of the catching sector of the Scottish fishing industry; and what assistance he is making available to that sector.

69. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to meet with representatives of the catching sector of the Scottish fishing industry; and what assistance he is making available to that sector.

Mr. Curry: I have no plans to do so but my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Scottish Minister for Fisheries are in regular contact with them. Aid is available for the modernisation of fishing boats and provision of port facilities for the fishing industry. In addition there are schemes for assisting the marketing and processing of fish and shellfish products which benefit the industry.

Common Agricultural Policy

25. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what matters he proposes to raise at the next meeting of the Agricultural Council in order to further develop the effectiveness of the CAP.

Mr. Gummer: The agenda for the next Agricultural Council on 12 and 13 November has yet to be decided; I will decide nearer the time whether to raise any matters that would not otherwise be discussed.

68. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met his colleagues in the Council of Ministers to discuss reform of the common agricultural policy.

71. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the European Community Agriculture Ministers to discuss the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Gummer: This week, on 15 and 16 October. Issues discussed included the EC's proposed GATT offer on agriculture, the agricultural aspects of German unification and the reform of the olive oil regime.

34. Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next expects to meet his European Community counterparts to discuss further amendments to the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Curry: In November—12 and 13. The agenda is not yet fixed.

Dairy Industry

26. Mr. Knox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to meet the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss the dairy sector.

Mr. Gummer: I meet the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss a wide range of issues including the dairy industry.

North Sea Conference

28. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about his implementation of the agreements from the last North sea conference.

53. Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about his implementation of the agreements from the last North sea conference.

Mr. Curry: The targets and timetables set by Her Majesty's Government for implementation of the agreements reached at the 3rd North sea conference in March of this year were published in the United Kingdom guidance note on the ministerial declaration on 6 July 1990. This publication is available in the Library of the House.

Footpaths

29. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the effect of new legislation on the ploughing up of footpaths.

Mr. Gummer: The Rights of Way Act 1990 has removed previous uncertainties as to the legal rights and responsibilities of farmers when cultivating land crossed by public rights of way. All farmers have been sent a booklet explaining the new law and providing practical guidance. The act also provides for stronger powers of enforcement. Its provisions have been widely welcomed and the public should benefit from the use of paths which are free from obstruction and clearly marked.

UK Fishing Industry

30. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give an assessment of the prospects for the United Kingdom's fishing industry.

51. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will assess the prospects for the United Kingdom fishing industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: So far this year the value of landings has been 9 per cent. higher than in 1989 despite the volume being down by 2 per cent. The conservation of fish stocks to safeguard the future of the fishing fleet remains an urgent priority.

Animal Welfare

32. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the role of veterinarians in promoting animal welfare.

40. Mr. Doran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the role of veterinarians in promoting animal welfare.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) earlier today.

47. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what role state veterinary service vets play in enforcing animal welfare standards.

62. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what role state veterinary service vets play in enforcing animal welfare standards.

Mr. Maclean: Veterinary officers of the state veterinary service monitor welfare whenever they visit livestock farms. In addition, they carry out specific visits for welfare purposes. They promote the maintenance and improvement of welfare by advising farmers to follow the recommendations in the welfare codes. When necessary, they will not-hesitate to initiate prosecution proceedings. Indeed, a ministerial prosecution was concluded this month in which a farmer was convicted on more than 150 counts, sentenced to five months' imprisonment and fined £3,500 for cruelty to sheep. In addition, he has been banned for keeping sheep for five years.

Livestock Exports

33. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress of negotiation with the European Community on welfare standards for live horses for export after 1992.

Mr. Gummer: There has been little progress and only one Community meeting has been held to discuss the Commission's proposals on the protection of animals during transport. When the discussions resume we shall be pressing to retain our controls on the export of horses and ponies.

55. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the numbers of live sheep exported for slaughter in the first three months of 1990 and 1989.

Mr. Maclean: The figures are as follows:

	Live exports (numbers)
	1989	1990
January	43,845	88,835
February	31,543	61,731
March	30,117	[1]27,992
Total	105,505	178,558

[1] Provisional Data

Relocation

35. Mr. Leadbitter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he plans to relocate any of the divisions of his Department.

59. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he plans to relocate any of the divisions of his Department.

66. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the possible decentralisation of staff in his Department.

Mr. Gummer: My Department is currently planning to relocate its central science laboratory and part of its headquarters work away from the south-east. I announced on 1 May that the intervention board was to move part of its operations from Reading to Newcastle on Tyne and the first steps to transfer the work permanently have already been taken.

Fishing Agreements

36. Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that European Community agreements on fishing are not flouted by other member states.

Mr. Curry: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave him on 22 June at columns 748-49 on measures to deal with quota-hopping. Since then the House of Lords Appellate Committee have ordered that interim relief should be granted to applicants in the Factortame case. The relief is restricted to the requirement on owners and shareholders to be resident and domiciled in this country and affects only 53 vessels. The requirement that vessels should be managed and their operations directed and controlled from the United Kingdom remains. The registrar of shipping will ensure that only eligible vessels are registered. To date 12 of the 53 vessels have qualified.

As I said in my earlier reply, the question whether the fishing vessel registered requirements of the Merchant Shipping Act 1988 are compatible with Community law was still to be considered by the European Court of Justice. We will argue strongly before that Court that these provisions are right and necessary to protect the interests of our fishing communities.

To resume fishing against United Kingdom quotas, all these vessels must also obtain a licence. Licensed vessels will be required to make regular visits to United Kingdom ports where it is expected that they will take on supplies land fish and change crews and thereby create some economic activity of benefit to the local community. Such visits will also enable officers of the sea fisheries inspectorate to board and inspect the boats to ensure that the conditions of their United Kingdom fishing licence are met and national and EC fisheries regulations are complied with. The inspectorate will continue to take firm action against any fisherman who flouts the law.

Scientific Evidence

41. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what weight he accords to scientific evidence in reaching his Ministerial decisions.

63. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what weight he accords to scientific evidence in reaching his Ministerial decisions.

Mr. Gummer: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is a science-based department. Our policies rest on are guided by scientific knowledge and advice. For example, policies on food safety, the environment, animal health and welfare, and fish stock management, all depend heavily on scientific input.

Beer

43. Mrs. Currie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the balance of trade in beer and lager products.

Mr. Maclean: Net imports of beer and lager were valued at just under £75 million in 1989.

Young People

44. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives from the National Union of Farmers to discuss opportunities for young people entering the agricultural industry.

Mr. Curry: The NFU has not requested a meeting to discuss opportunities for young people to enter agriculture. We are in regular touch on a wide range of other issues.

Countryside Preservation

46. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has recently discussed the maintenance of the countryside with the president of the National Farmers Union.

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend the Minister meets the president of the National Farmers Union on numerous occasions to discuss various issues. Their last meeting was on 6 September.

Sea Defences

48. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has met the National Rivers Authority to discuss a national strategy for sea defences.

Mr. Curry: I meet the chairman of the National Rivers Authority on a regular basis to discuss implementation of the Government's flood defence policy and there are also frequent contacts between our officials on all flood defence matters.

Farm Incomes

49. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of British farmers to discuss farm incomes.

Mr. Gummer: Ministers in this Department frequently meet representatives of the British farming community to discuss a wide range of issues, including farm incomes.

Dolphins

50. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he has taken to safeguard dolphins.

Mr. Curry: Dolphins are already strictly protected under United Kingdom law including against deliberate capture. We are playing a leading role in work with countries bordering the North Sea and the Baltic for arrangements to further conserve small cetaceans, including dolphins. We also continue to press for wider international protection where this is needed and have supported the United Nations resolution to curtail large scale oceanic drift netting which has presented a threat to dolphins and other marine life particularly in the South Pacific.

Food Labelling

52. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress towards the introduction of compulsory food labelling.

Mr. Maclean: The directive on Nutrition Labelling Rules was finally agreed by the council on 24 September and was published in the Official Journal of 6 October. It lays down the statutory format for the giving of nutrition information on food labels. It provides for a two stage approach with energy, protein, carbohydrates and fat in the first group plus sugar, sodium, saturates and fibre in the second. The giving of information remains voluntary, although when given it must be comprehensive and in the agreed format. The exception to this is where a nutrition claim is made when the provision of the information in the agreed format is compulsory.

The first stage of the approach comes into final effect in three years; the second stage comes into effect two years later. There remain some detailed provisions still to be agreed but I anticipate these issues will be resolved within the three year run-in period. We are disappointed that we did not achieve earlier implementation dates and I know that consumer and health groups will be similarly disappointed. It was however not possible to rally majority support in Brussels for an earlier implementation date and we thought it best to enable this important directive to be agreed without further delay and possible dilution. We shall be making the necessary changes to United Kingdom food labelling legislation, but in the meantime we shall now actively encourage the United Kingdom food industry to provide comprehensive nutrition information to the level of both first and second stages as we do already in the United Kingdom Government guidelines on Nutrition Labelling of Food.

The second directive giving powers to require selected nutrients to be the subject of compulsory labelling has not been agreed, but we have ensured that it remains on the table in Brussels. There is a general support amongst a majority of member states for the principles behind this proposal, but it is felt that decisions about compulsory labelling will best be considered after experience has been gained with the voluntary system. Because the science of nutrition is relatively new and ideas and knowledge are still developing, the United Kingdom Government are prepared to go along with the majority view whilst wishing to ensure that the issue of compulsory nutrition labelling does not disappear from view.

Animal Health Directives

57. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the progress towards animal health directives within the European Community.

Mr. Maclean: Progress continues to be made within the Community in harmonising animal health controls as part of the process of the realisation of the single market. Within the last 12 months a number of key measures have been agreed, as follows:

Directive 89/556 of 25 September 1989 on animal health conditions governing intra-Community trade in and imports from third countries of embryos of domestic animals of the bovine species.

Directive 89/608 of 21 November 1989 on mutual assistance between the administrative authorities of member states and co-operation between the latter and the Commission to ensure the correct application of legislation on veterinary and zootechnical matters.

Directive 89/662 of 11 December 1989 concerning veterinary checks in intra-Community trade with a view to the completion of the internal market.

Directive 90/422 of 26 June 1990 amending directive 64/432 as regards enzootic bovine leukosis.

Directive 90/423 of 26 June 1990 amending directives 85/511, 64/432 and 72/462 as regards from foot and mouth disease. Decision 90/424 of 26 June 1990 on expenditure in the veterinary field.

Directive 90/425 of 26 June 1990 concerning veterinary and zootechnical checks applicable in intra-Community trade in certain live animals and products with a view to the completion of the internal market.

Directive 90/426 of 26 June 1990 on animal health conditions governing the movement and import from third countries of equidae.

Directive 90/429 of 26 June 1990 laying down the animal health requirements applicable to intra-Community trade in and imports from third countries of semen of domestic animals of the porcine species.

All these measures represent important steps toward completion of the single market. I should like particularly to refer to directive 90/423 which provides for a uniform policy for the control of foot and mouth disease (FMD). From January 1992, and in line with current United Kingdom policy, the practice of vaccination against the disease is to be discontinued throughout the Community. Thereafter the main protection against the disease will be the slaughter and destruction of animals from affected herds with compensation being paid to the owner. Once implemented this new policy will contribute significantly to liberalising controls on the movement of FMD-susceptible animals.

In addition to the measures listed above, two directives (89/662 and 90/425) have now been adopted concerning the veterinary and documentary checks that are currently conducted at points of entry to ensure that animals and animal products are healthy and comply with Community rules. Both directives provide for the eventual elimination of veterinary checks at frontiers and their substitution with a system of checks at points of origin and destination. However, as a transitional measure the directives provide us with considerable scope for maintaining frontier checks until at least the end of 1992 when both directives have to be reviewed. We are satisfied with both since they reflect our key contention that the dismantling of controls should not lead to an increased risk of the spread of disease.

Much remains to be done, however, before the end of 1992, and we still await formal proposals from the Commission for post-1992 controls. In the meantime, although we fully support the overall objective of harmonising Community health standards at the highest attainable level, and look forward to the eventual removal of barriers to trade where possible, we have no intention in the negotiations to come of jeopardising our current high animal health status.

Pesticides

58. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he has made on the review of pesticides; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Considerable progress has been made on the review of pesticides and I will be making a statement shortly.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a Statement on the use of pesticides on agricultural land.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave today to the Member for Wrexham (Dr. Marek).

Research and Development

60. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the research and development priorities for his Department.

Mr. Gummer: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food funds research essentially for three reasons: (a) to guide the formulations, appraisal and evaluation of policy and to support statutory functions; (b) to protect the consumer and the environment; (c) to support strategic research which takes scientific opportunities to the point where it is appropriate for industry to fund further development prior to exploitation.

I see research in all three areas as essential in both the short and long term, although the emphasis may change. Current priorities include lower chemical inputs, improved pest control techniques and the relationship between public health and zoonoses.

In setting research priorities full account is taken of the independent advice of the Priorities Board for Research and Development in Agriculture and Food. Food safety and nutritional quality are areas recently recommended by the priorities board as needing a higher priority. Among the subjects which are likely to become more important are climate change, lower input sustainable farming systems and cleaner technologies.

Meetings

65. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many times during 1990 he has met representatives of (a) consumers and (b) producer interests.

Mr. Gummer: Since 1 January 1990 I have met consumers' representatives on 10 occasions and producers' representatives on 12 occasions to discuss food safety issues, on 16 occasions to discuss production issues and on six occasions mainly to discuss problems connected with the export of live sheep to France.

Salmon

67. Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement about the report on east coast salmon fisheries prepared under the terms of the Salmon Act.

Mr. Curry: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave on 15 October.

37. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which independent bodies provide advice to his Department on food matters.

Mr. Maclean: The Department receives advice on food matters from a number of independent bodies notably the Food Advisory Committee, the consumer panel, the advisory committee on novel foods and processes, the advisory committee on pesticides and the veterinary products committee. In addition this Department and the Department of Health receive advice from three further independent bodies. These are the committee on the microbiological safety of food, the committee on medical aspects of food policy and the committee on toxicity of chemicals in food, consumer products and the environment. Finally, the spongiform encephalopathy advisory committee has advised these two Departments on, among other matters, the implications of BSE for human health through the consumption of certain food products.

39. Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has had any discussions with local authorities about the implementation of the Food Safety Bill.

54. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has had any discussions with local authorities about the implementation of the Food Safety Bill.

Mr. Maclean: Local authorities are being consulted on the draft orders and regulations that will bring the Food Safety Act into force. Local authority officers are serving on the Implementation Advisory Committee which advises the Government on the codes of practice to be made under the Act. Yesterday my right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food addressed the first of a series of seven seminars aimed at helping enforcement officers to understand how the new Act will work.

Sea Fish Industry Authority

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report the names of the chairman and members of the Sea Fish Industry Authority, the organisations, agencies and associations whence they were recruited, their tenure of office and their remuneration.

Mr. Curry: The chairman and members of the authority were appointed on 1 October 1990. Appointments are normally for a three-year period, but Ministers may, under certain circumstances, terminate an appointment at any time during that three-year period.

The board comprises of 12 members appointed by Ministers. The chairman and deputy chairman and two other members are independent members who have no direct financial or commercial interest in the fishing industry. The other members are drawn from various sectors of the fishing and fish processing industry and the industry is consulted on their appointments. These members represent the industry as a whole rather than their own particular sector. The chairman receives £25,490 and the board members £5,330 per annum for their services.

Names of the authority's board members and their position are as follows. Further biographical details were given in the MAFF news release 321/90 of 25 September, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. An announcement on the appointment of a deputy chairman will be made shortly.

DEFENCE

Military Hospitals

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the numbers of (a) civilian outpatients and (b) civilian inpatients treated at the Princess of Wales RAF hospital, Ely under the national health service in each medical and surgical department during each of the last five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested cannot be provided without disproportionate cost.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those military hospitals which provide an accident and emergency service to the national health service.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The following service hospitals currently provide a consultant-led specialist accident and emergency service to the national health service:

Royal Naval Hospital Haslar;
Royal Naval Hospital Plymouth;
Cambridge Military Hospital, Aldershot.

In addition, casualty departments run by a medical officer are provided for use by national health service patients in the following service hospitals:

Duchess of Kent Military Hospital, Catterick;
Princess Alexandra Royal Air Force Hospital, Wroughton;
The Princess of Wales Royal Air Force Hospital, Ely.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the surgical and medical disciplines provided at each RAF hospital.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The table provides a guide to all the surgical and medical disciplines normally provided at the three RAF hospitals in the United Kingdom. These may be subject to alteration or reduction in the light of future service requirements.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the district health authorities which have had civilian patients treated under the national health service at the Princess of Wales RAF hospital, Ely during each of the last five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The principal district health authorities which have referred NHS patients to the Princess of Wales RAF hospital during the last five years are Cambridge, West Norfolk and Wisbech, West Suffolk and Huntingdon. Additionally, health authorities from all areas of the United Kingdom may on occasion refer patients for a specific treatment. A list of those authorities which have done so over the last five years could not be produced without disproportionate cost.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to permit military hospitals to enter the national health service internal market.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no current plans for service hospitals to compete in the NHS internal market.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the numbers of servicemen, women and dependants from each service treated at each military hospital as (a) inpatients and (b) outpatients for each of the last five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The tables show the total number of service personnel and dependants for (a) in-patients and (b) out-patients at each military hospital in the United Kingdom for each of the last five years for which figures are readily available. It is not currently possible to provide a breakdown of these figures according to service or sex without incurring disproportionate cost.

British Forces (Malaysia and Thailand)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British service men have served in (a) Malaysia and (b) Thailand for each year since 1980; and in what capacity.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since 1980 British service men have served in both Malaysia and Thailand in a number of capacities including attaché posts, the provision of military training assistance, and on exercise. Further details could not be provided without disproportionate cost.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many representatives of his Department were in communication with the chairman of the Civil Service Appeals Board regarding Mr. Colin Wallace's appeal;

(2) what was the content of the communication that took place between representatives of his Department and the chairman of the Civil Service Appeals Board regarding Mr. Colin Wallace's appeal;

(3) what were the Civil Service grades of the representatives of his Department who were in communication with the chairman of the Civil Service Appeals Board regarding Mr. Colin Wallace's appeal;

(4) what was the purpose of the communication that took place between the chairman of the Civil Service Appeals Board and representatives of his Department regarding Mr. Colin Wallace's appeal.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to my letter of 13 September to my hon. Friend the Member for Arundel (Sir M. Marshall), a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he first became aware of the fact that representatives of his Department had been in private communication with the chairman of the Civil Service Appeals Board regarding Mr. Colin Wallace's appeal.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend and I were informed in September 1989 of the private communications which took place in 1975 and to which Mr. Calcutt has referred.

Environment Council Conference

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he or officials of his Department have been invited to attend or participate in the conference on "Going Green, Benefits Versus Costs", organised by the Environment Council, to be held in London on 22-23 November.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Secretary of State has not received an invitation and I am not aware of any invitations being received by officials of the Ministry of Defence.

Territorial Army

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the amount of money spent in each of the past 10 years on publicising the Territorial Army in Scotland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Other than a small number of local publicity and recruiting initiatives, funding for Territorial Army publicity is not allocated to any particular region. It is not, therefore, possible to provide figures in the form requested.

Royal United Services Institute

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of Government funding for the Royal United Services Institute and describe the Royal United Services Institute's relationship with his Department.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Royal United Services Institute (RUSI) is an independent academic institute with charitable status. It is the professional association of the armed forces and one of many academic institutes with which the Ministry of Defence maintains contacts.

For the current financial year we expect MOD funding for RUSI to be around £130,000. The sum of £10,000 is a grant in aid towards expenses of the institute in support of its academic activities. The remainder is a contribution towards the cost of rental and maintenance of its accommodation.

Low Flying

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many complaints have been received by the Royal Air Force of low flying military aircraft over towns which are listed to be avoided over the past two years;

(2) how many complaints received by the Royal Air Force within the last two years relating to low-flying aircraft over towns listed to be avoided have resulted in action other than simple reprimands being taken against pilots.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I regret that such complaints are not recorded separately and it would not be possible to provide the information requested without disproportionate cost and effort.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will introduce tough penalties on pilots who fly military aircraft low over towns listed to be avoided, by way of a substantial fine, equivalent to their annual salary.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I am satisfied that an adequate range of penalties, including fines, is available to deal with cases where pilots are found to have breached low flying regulations.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list in the Official Report the names of those towns which are to be avoided by low-flying military aircraft.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: It remains our policy not to release this information.

Warheads

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has made any representations to his counterparts in the United States concerning the safety of (a) W79 artillery warheads, (b) W88 warheads and (c) W89 warheads; and what communications he has received on this subject.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As I said in my answer of 18 June to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) at column 436, we are satisfied with United States assurances on the safety of its nuclear weapons. We have received a small number of communications from hon. Members and others on this subject.

Cambodia

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contact there was between his Department and Messrs. Anthony de Normann and Christopher Edward Mackenzie Geidt (a) before and (b) after their recent visit to Cambodia.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The visit of Messrs. de Normann and Mackenzie Geidt to Indochina was at the invitation of the Hanoi Institute for International Relations and the current Phnom Penh regime. The only contact with the Military of Defence in relation to the visit that has been traced was a routine inquiry by Mr. de Normann prior to departure to check on the regulations governing visits by ex-service personnel to communist countries. Within the last few days, there have been exchanges with officials in the Ministry of Defence about allegations made in the media against the two men.

Forces Cuts

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom forces' cuts he proposes and over what time scale in the draft CFE agreement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The proposed CFE treaty provides, in general, for limits on the holdings of certain equipments by the two groups of states, rather than for specific national limits. The overall NATO totals permitted by the treaty will, therefore, have to be allocated to individual nations and, although work on this is well advanced, national ceilings have still to be decided finally. The precise reductions that the United Kingdom will have to make to comply with the treaty will also depend on continuing negotiations on definitions and counting rules. Implementation of reductions is envisaged over a three-year period.

The Gulf

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is now in a position to make a statement on the pay and allowances for servicemen deployed to the Gulf.

Mr. Tom King: The basic pay of service personnel remains the same wherever they are stationed and includes an X-factor, currently 10·5 per cent. for men and 9·5 per cent. for women, which recognises the disadvantages of service life, including the liability to serve in difficult and dangerous conditions. Entitlement to allowances and liability to charges varies according to individual circumstances.

The effect of this for those deploying to the Gulf is that the great majority of service personnel will in fact receive more in their pay packets. However, there are some for whom the changes would result in a possible loss. I have therefore decided that there should be an abatement to part of the charges paid by married personnel from Germany and from other overseas locations while they are serving in the Gulf. This will benefit most of those otherwise adversely affected. In addition, I have instructed that arrangements be made to recompense any individual who would still otherwise experience a net reduction in pay and allowances.

These measures are intended to fulfil my assurance that no one would suffer financially as a result of service in the Gulf.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Meals

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report those local education authorities which do not provide a school meals service other than for pupils of families on family income support.

Mr. Fallon: In January 1990, the latest date for which information is available, all local education authorities in England recorded that there were pupils who had had a paid meal at school. Detailed information on school meal arrangements will be published in "Statistics of Education Schools 1990".

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether local management of schools system schools will be able to decide whether to provide a hot school meals service for at least the winter months.

Mr. Fallon: Every local education authority with an approved scheme for local management of schools is continuing with the arrangements for the provision of school meals that were in operation before the introduction of LMS.

Under-fives

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what financial incentives exist under the local management of schools system for schools to recruit pupils who are aged under five years at the start of the school year; what guidance his Department offers to local education authorities on education provision for rising-fives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fallon: The admission of four-year-olds to school is a matter for the schools and their local education authorities in the light of local needs and circumstances. The Department offers no guidance to local education authorities on provision for rising-fives. However, under local management of schools, all pupils registered at a school, including those under five years at the start of the school year, are funded through the age-weighted pupil element of the local education authority's resource allocation formula.

National Tests

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on national tests at the ages of seven, 11 and 14 years; and how many children at each such age group are currently in maintained schools.

Mr. Eggar: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral statement that my right hon. Friend made to the House on 18 October at columns 1395-1407.

Education Spending

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of gross domestic product is spent on education (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) the United States of America, (c) Japan and (d) Germany.

Mr. Eggar: Data are readily available for public expenditure as a percentage of GNP only and are shown in the table:

Total public expenditure on education, 1986

Country	Expenditure as a percentage of GNP
United Kingdom	4·9
United States of America[1]	4·7
Japan[1]	4·4
Germany (West)	4·4

[1] Excludes public expenditure subsidies to private education.

Environmental Education Study Centres

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those environmental education study centres which (a) were in operation in 1987, 1988 and 1989 and (b) have already closed or face closure within the next 12 months.

Mr. Eggar: This information is not collected centrally.

Grant-maintained Schools

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his written answer of 15 October, if he will list the dates of visits by Her Majesty's inspectors to grant-maintained schools other than the last date of visit, in those cases where the school has been visited more than once.

Mr. Eggar: Listed below are the dates, other than the last dates, on which HMI visited these GM schools up to June 1990. The other schools listed in my reply of 15 October have each been visited once only.

	Date
Queensbury School, Bedfordshire	November 1989
Small Heath School, Birmingham	September 1989
St. James CE School, Bolton	September 1989 October 1989 December 1989
Colyton GS, Devon	November 1989
Old Swinford Hospital School, Dudley	November 1989
London Oratory School	September 1989
Wilmington Girls School, Kent	October 1989
Castle Hall School, Kirklees	October 1989
Heckmondwike GS, Kirklees	November 1989 January 1990
King's School, Grantham	November 1989
Queen Elizabeth GS, Lincolnshire	November 1989
Wilson's School, Sutton	November 1989

	Date
Audenshaw School, Tameside	December 1989
Queen Elizabeth's, Barnet	November 1989

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mr. Eggar: In 1989-90 the Department spent a total of £88,800 of its administration budget in providing official hospitality.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to be able to report the establishment of the city technology college for Bristol.

Mr. Fallon: My right hon. Friend announced on Wednesday 3 October his intention to consult interested parties on proposals which he has before him to establish a city technology college in Bristol. He will announce his decision on the proposal after he has considered all responses received in the course of the 56-day consultation period.

TRANSPORT

Nottingham-Mansfield Line

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent information he has received on the reopening of the Nottingham to Mansfield line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Nottinghamshire county council has recently sent the Department of Transport a video about its proposals to reopen this line, and officials will meet council representatives shortly to discuss the proposals further. More information would be needed before any decision on resources for the project could be taken.

London Transport

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the remuneration of each of the members of the London Transport board, their hours of work and their individual responsibilities on the board.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

Member	Annual salary and time commitment	Responsibilities
1. Executive Members
Mr. Wilfrid Newton, CBE	£100,000 full time	Chairman and Chief Executive of LT, Chairman of LT Executive Committee; Chairman of London Underground Limited; Member of Safety Audit Committee, Design Policy Committee, London Transport Property Board and Remuneration Committee.
Mr. John Telford Beasley, CBE	£75,000 full time	Deputy Chief Executive of LT; Member of LT Executive Committee; Chairman of London Buses Limited, Docklands Light Railway Limited, LT International Services Limited and of London Transport Museum; Member of Safety Audit Committee and Design Policy Committee.
Mr. Michael Marsh	£69,650 full time	Board Member for Finance and Planning; Member of LT Executive Committee and LT Property Board; non-executive director of London Underground Limited, London Buses Limited and Docklands Light Railway Limited.
2. Non-executive part--time members
Sir Neil Shields, MC	£22,000 two days per week	Deputy Chairman of LT; Chairman of LT Property Board; Member of Design Policy Committee and Remuneration Committee.
Mr. Keith Brown	£8,250 0·75 days per week	Chairman of Audit Committee; Director in charge of LT Disabled Passengers Unit.
Dr. Stephen Glaister	£8,250 0·75 days per week	Member of Fares Revenue Committee and LT Property Board; non-executive director of Victoria Coach Station Limited.
Mr. Oscar Roith	£11,000 one day per week	Chairman of Safety Audit Committee.
Mrs. Helen Robinson	£8,250 0·75 days per week	Chairman of Design Policy Committee; Member of Remuneration Committee.
Miss Patricia Steel, OBE	£8,250 0·75 days per week	Member of Safety Audit Committee; non-executive director of Docklands Light Railway Limited and of Victoria Coach Station Limited.
Mr. Roy Thomas	£8,250 0·75 days per week	Member of Audit Committee and of Remuneration Committee.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what directions he has given to London Transport to improve the training and driving standard of bus drivers.

Mr. Freeman: It is for London Transport to determine what the training needs and the driving standards of its bus drivers should be, in accordance with the appropriate public service vehicle driver licensing legislation.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received a plan from London Transport regarding the closure of Victoria bus garage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No.

Rail Electrification (West Yorkshire)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what meetings he or his officials have had with officials of the West Yorkshire passenger transport authority in the current year to date, to discuss rail electrification between Bradford and Leeds and local services.

Mr. McLoughlin: The hon. Member was present when the then Minister of State met the West Yorkshire passenger transport authority on 26 April to discuss the scheme and other matters. In addition, officials have had two meetings and several exchanges of correspondence on this scheme with the West Yorkshire passenger transport executive.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he expects to announce his decision on loan approval being given to the West Yorkshire passenger transport authority to enable electrification of rail services;

(2) whether British Rail has supplied him with information as to what extra costs are incurred each year that the electrification of the Bradford-Leeds railway is deferred; what is his latest estimate of the total cost of such electrification; and when he expects to announce his decision on loan approval for the scheme.

Mr. McLoughlin: Decisions on credit approvals for local public transport schemes in 1991-92 will be announced after the autumn statement. The most recent cost estimate for this project is about £60 million; we have no information on cost increases if it is deferred. Whether it can go ahead in 1991-92 depends on the availability of physical resources for the necessary signalling work as well as on funding.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received since the beginning of 1990 concerning the electrification of the Bradford—Leeds railway and local rail services; and if he will list the names of individuals and organisations who have urged electrification take place.

Mr. McLoughlin: We have this year received almost 300 representations in support of this scheme, some individuals and organisations having written more than once. Representations have also been sent to other Government Departments, and we do not have a complete list available.

Road Programme

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of civil and traffic engineering staff employed directly by his Department in each regional office in 1989 and 1990 and forecast for 1992; how many of the additional staff engaged for the expanded road programme will be given permanent civil service status; and how many will be given short service contracts.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 18 October 1990]: Information is not available precisely in the form requested. Engineering staff employed directly by my Department in the regions are as follows:

	[1]1989	[2]1990
South East	61	64
London	52	64
Eastern	45	48
South West	42	48
West Midlands	59	62
East Midlands	45	43
North West	66	57
Yorkshire and Humberside	59	60
Northern	15	15
	444	461

[1] Figures as at December 1989.
[2] Figures as at September 1990.

No regional estimates are available for 1992, or for the number of staff who will be engaged on short service contracts.

Construction Programme Divisions

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what difference in function the new construction programme divisions created in 1990 will have from the former road construction unit headquarters offices abolished by his Department in 1981.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 18 October 1990]: In the construction programme divisions private sector teams will be working alongside civil servants on project management and other specialist functions. In addition the organisational framework is different.

ENVIRONMENT

Public Bodies (Funding)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many non-Government public bodies funded by his Department have an interest in environment matters; how many of these have been in existence since October 1988 and how many existed before that date.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Three of the executive non-departmental public bodies (the Countryside Commission, the National Rivers Authority and the Nature Conservancy Council) and two of the advisory bodies (the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee and the Royal Commission on environmental pollution) currently sponsored by the Department have major environmental responsibilities. Of these only the National Rivers Authority, created in September 1989, did not exist in October 1988. Many of the other non-departmental public bodies sponsored by the Department also make significant contributions to restoring, protecting or enhancing the urban or rural environment. All non-departmental public bodies are listed in the annual Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies".

Global Warming

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further studies he has carried out into the contribution of natural nitrous oxide to global warming.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Three research programmes to quantify emissions of nitrous oxide from both natural and managed land have recently been initiated by the Natural Environment Research Council. The Department of the Environment contributes 50 per cent. to the funding of one project which studies nitrous oxide fluxes from forest soils.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research he has instigated to establish the impact of the presence of sulphur dioxide in the atmosphere in respect of global warming.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Sulphur dioxide is not itself a greenhouse gas and so does not contribute to global warming. However, by contributing to sulphate aerosol formation and possibly increasing the reflectivity of clouds, sulphur dioxide may contribute a slight cooling effect. These issues will be studied as part of the Department's climate prediction programme at the Hadley centre.

Public Water Supplies

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the rainfall required during the coming months in each of the regions of the United Kingdom if adequate public water supplies are to be ensured in 1991 without prejudicing reservoir and river levels.

Mr. Trippier: The National Rivers Authority estimates for England and Wales that rainfall ranging from below average in Northumbria, to average in the north-west and the midlands to above average in the south and east, in some areas substantially so, would be required in the next six months to ensure adequate public water suplies in 1991 without prejudicing reservoir and river levels.

Pesticides

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress of the study by the Natural Environment Research Council into the possible implications for wildlife resulting from the combination of different pesticides.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The results of the NERC/ Reading university studies on captive partridges were published late last year. They have been drawn to the attention of the advisory committee on pesticides. New studies, building on this work and, in particular, to relate it to what may happen in the wild, are under way or will be started soon. These additional studies are being funded by both NERC and my Department.

Dog Registration

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's policy with regard to plans to set up a national dog registration scheme.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We are still considering the implications of the vote in another place which would require the Government to set up a dog registration scheme.

Household Dust

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish the study by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution into the levels of radioactivity in household dust; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The household particulate surveys commissioned by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and carried out by ICI have now been completed. A draft report has been received and is currently being reviewed. The report will be published in due course and copies will be placed in the Library.

Home Improvement Agencies

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has for the future funding of home improvement agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: Home improvement agencies have a valuable role to play in helping the elderly, the disabled and those people on low incomes living in poor condition houses to improve their living conditions. The existing experimental scheme which expires on 31 March 1991 is to be replaced by a permanent scheme open to agencies throughout the country. Fifty per cent. of the running costs of approved schemes will be met by Government grant.

Each local housing authority will be responsible for identifying the needs of its area and securing the establishment and operation of appropriate schemes. I believe that this fits in very well with the enabling role of such authorities, and provides a fine opportunity for partnership between central and local government and other bodies in the housing field. Payment of the Government's contribution will be subject to the fulfilment of certain conditions, and will be made to schemes in accordance with previously agreed budgets.

We also intend to provide support for a central co-ordinating body to undertake developmental work, monitor progress and provide help to the individual schemes including training and access to specialist advice. We will be holding discussions with appropriate organisations about the best way of establishing this body, and a further announcement will be made as soon as possible.

These arrangements will be closely monitored and will be subject to a full review in four years' time.

Green Belt

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent consideration he has given to the criterion which indicates a general presumption against development in the green belt; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 18 October 1990]: I am considering, in the light of recent court judgments, whether there is a need for some revision of the advice given in planning policy guidance note 2, but I can say now that there will be no fundamental change in the Government's policies for the protection of the green belts. It will remain necessary to demonstrate very special circumstances to justify inappropriate development within a green belt.

Civil Engineering (Safety)

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans for regulatory or legislative change in relation to technical decision-making involving public safety with regard to new civil engineering structures, new buildings and alterations to existing buildings which involve using computer-based models which are not open to scrutiny by the public in general and the scientific community in particular for commercial or other reasons.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 18 October 1990]: No. The building regulations lay down requirements relating to the design and construction of buildings which have to be met to ensure public health and safety. Those who have responsibility for enforcing the regulations must satisfy themselves that the requirements have been met. If they are not satisfied, they can seek further information from the designer and they can have the design cross-checked on an alternative computer package.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Juveniles

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list for each local social services authority for each of the years 1975, 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989 the number of placements made in prison department establishments of juveniles by virtue of the issue of a certificate of unruliness;

(2) if he will list for each local social services authority in Wales for each of the years 1975, 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989 the number of placements made in prison department establishments of juveniles by virtue of the issue of a certificate of unruliness.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is not recorded centrally. The only information available relates to juveniles initially received on remand into prison service establishments. An unruliness certificate is required for such juveniles received as untried and for some of those received as convicted unsentenced; it is not required for those committed in custody to the Crown court for sentence under section 37 of the Magistrates Courts Act. The statistics are published annually in "Prison statistics England and Wales" (table 2.7 of the volume for 1989, Cm. 1221), a copy of which is in the Library. Information by area is not available.

Rape

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted rapists rape again stated as a percentage of the total held in prison at any one time; and what measures other than imprisonment are used in rehabilitation.

Mr. Waddington: The information is not available in the form requested. Recent studies suggest that less than 5 per cent. of men imprisoned for sexual offences are convicted again of a sexual offence within two years of their release. It would be exceptional for an offender convicted of rape not to receive a custodial sentence or disposal under mental health legislation.

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of reported cases of rape for the years from 1984 to 1990 and the number of cases in which an arrest and conviction followed.

Mr. Waddington: The numbers of offences of rape recorded by the police from 1984 to 1988 are published in table 2·9 of "Criminal statistics, England and Wales, 1988", Cm 847; for 1989 the information is published in table 6 of Home Office statistical bulletin 10/90; in the first six months of 1990, the police recorded 1,558 rapes. The number of persons found guilty of rape is published annually, and most recently in table S4.1(A) of "Criminal statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary tables, 1988 Vol. 4". Corresponding information for 1989 and 1990 is not yet available. A detailed analysis of offences of rape was published in Home Office statistical bulletin 4/89, "Statistics of offences of rape 1977-87".

Electoral Registration

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent by his Department on campaigns to secure electoral registration (a) at home and (b) abroad in the past 12 months.

Mrs. Rumbold: Home Office expenditure on electoral registration advertising campaigns in the past 12 months has been as follows:

	£ (including VAT)
England and Wales	460,683
Overseas	480,189

Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people living abroad applied to be included on the 1991 register of electors which has a qualifying date of 10 October 1990 in each parliamentary constituency in England and Wales.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the number of overseas electors registering since the passage of the Representation of the People Act 1989.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Members to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye (Mr. Kennedy) on 14 June at column 319. Information on the number of applications is not held centrally.

Representation of the People Act 1990

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make an order under section 2 of the Representation of the People Act 1990 to give effect to the provisions of that Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: We propose to make a commencement order early in the next Session of Parliament in order to bring the Representation of the People Act 1990 into force. In order for the Act to take effect, it will also be necessary to make some minor amendments to the Representation of the People Regulations 1986 and the European Parliamentary Elections Regulations 1986 and to make an Order in Council in respect of local elections in Northern Ireland. That will be done as soon as is practicable.

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mr. Waddington: In 1989-90, £28,630 was spent by my Department on official hospitality.

Sports Grounds

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to extend the safety at sports grounds legislation to spectator sports grounds other than football grounds.

Mr. Waddington: The Safety of Sports Grounds Act 1975 (as amended by the Fire Safety and Safety of Places of Sport Act 1987) provides for designation of sports grounds which have accommodation for more than 10,000 spectators as requiring a safety certificate issued by the local authority. Designation currently extends to all football, rugby union, rugby league and cricket grounds identified as having accommodation for over 10,000 spectators. There are no plans to extend the designation process to other classes of grounds.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Economy (Statistics)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he has taken to improve the reliability of Government statistics on the economy of Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope: The Government recognise the need to ensure that economic indicators are as reliable as possible. To this end, a comprehensive review of Government economic statistics was carried out in 1989. Detailed consideration has been given to the recommendations of the review and an action plan aimed at improving the statistics is currently being drawn up.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Ibbs Report

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make a statement on progress on the Ibbs report.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today to the similar question which he has tabled to the House of Commons Commission.

Mr. Allen: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, when he expects the Commission to consider the Ibbs report.

Mr. Beith: The review of management and decision-making responsibilities in the House, which is being undertaken at the request of the House of Commons Commission by a team led by Sir Robin Ibbs KBE, is near completion, and Sir Robin is expected to present his main conclusions to the Commission at the end of this month.

It will thereafter be for the Commission to decide what action should be taken, and to report to the House.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Sudan

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has concerning food availability in the Sudan; how much food aid and emergency relief has been supplied by the United Kingdom and by the European Community this year; and whether DG VI of the European Community has purchased food from Sudan this year.

Mrs. Chalker: According to the world food programme (WFP), poor rainfall during the current agricultural season has resulted in nearly total crop failure in northern Kordofan and northern Darfur, while prospects are uncertain and dependent on October rainfall in large areas of eastern Sudan. This is causing increasing distress and migration due to lack of water/grazing and food scarcity. Livestock prices are reported to be falling while grain prices have increased to unprecedented levels. We have also had reports of serious crop failure in large areas of southern Sudan, also drought related.

Pending a full harvest assessment by FAO to take place in November the GOS appealed to the WFP on 16 October for 75,000 tonnes of grain for immediate delivery to meet the most urgent needs of some of the 2·4 million most severely affected.

So far in 1990 the United Kingdom has pledged £3·29 million to the UN Operation Lifeline in Sudan. Additionally we have given £950,000 for refugees and nearly £100,000 for displaced persons through SCF and Oxfam. The European Community has committed 3 mecu (£2·2 million) of emergency aid in 1990 to alleviate the effects of drought in Sudan.

Over the period January to July this year DG VI purchased the following food items from Sudan:

Item	Value (ECU)
Oilseed	300,000
Sugar	600,000
Fruit	21,000
Spices	21,000

Poland

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will list the projects approved under the agricultural aid programme for Poland.

Mrs. Chalker: A £15 million agricultural development grant has been approved, which will provide loans to private sector business in the Voivodships of Elblag and Bialystok for the purchase of British equipment in the areas of food production, processing and distribution in Poland. Signature of the exchange of notes with the Government of Poland to initiate the grant is awaited. We have also funded an agricultural sector mission to Poland and are financing a visit by senior Polish agriculture experts to follow up the recommendations of the sector mission. In addition, we have spent £50,000 on the training of Polish co-operatives managers; and have recently approved £42,000 for the training of veterinary surgeons and £55,000 for training in the testing of cultivers and seed varieties.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what standard of environmental safeguards he applies to disbursements made under the agriculture aid programme for Poland.

Mrs. Chalker: All projects funded by the Overseas Development Administration must meet the guidelines set out in the Overseas Development Administration manual of environmental appraisal. Where there are environmental implications for British assistance to agriculture in Poland, they will be carefully monitored.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will list the projects approved since 8 March from the know-how fund for Poland.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Lady to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 17 October.

Cambodia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will give details of the places visited and people met during the recent visit by an Overseas Development Administration official to Cambodia;

(2) if he will place a copy of the report on the recent visit by an Overseas Development Administration official to Cambodia in the Library.

Mrs. Chalker: An Overseas Development Administration official visited Cambodia between 31 August and 6 September. We have no plans to place a copy of his report, which is an internal working document, in the Library. During the visit he met a number of representatives of British non-Government organisations (NGOs) and other agencies and organisations in order to gain a better understanding of present conditions in Cambodia and to monitor the humanitarian aid activities which we are supporting. On 15 October at column 633 I announced details of British humanitarian aid for Cambodia.

Mozambique

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will authorise an extra £2·5 million for the United Nations emergency appeal for Mozambique; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We pledged 10,000 tonnes of food aid, plus £3·5 million of other relief assistance, in response to the emergency appeal in April of this year. A further £3 million has since been pledged through the UNHCR for Mozambican refugees in neighbouring countries. We are in touch with the Mozambican authorities and interested non-governmental organisations and will continue to watch developments closely.

SCOTLAND

East Coast Salmon Fisheries

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will make it his policy to publish the report on east coast salmon fisheries in advance of any Government decision on its conclusions.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The outcome of the review of salmon net fisheries from the Ugie to the Humber will be presented to Parliament in the report required by section 39 of the Salmon Act 1986. The report by Fisheries Ministers will be presented as soon as possible and I cannot anticipate its contents.

NHS Services (Tenders)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) whether, in evaluating tenders for services in the health service in Scotland value added tax is taken into account to conform to Treasury guidelines referred to in paragraph 3(b) of appendix 1 attached to the Scottish Home and Health Department circular dated 16 October 1989;

(2) if he will identify contracts awarded prior to the circular of 16 October 1989 where value added tax and premature retirement costs were not taken account of in the evaluation process.

Mr. Rifkind: Value added tax has been taken into account by health boards in the evaluation process for contracts awarded after 1 December 1989. All evaluations have taken account of premature retirement costs. I would direct the hon. Member to the answer which my hon. Friend the Minister for health gave on 23 November 1989 to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Stewart) where he confirmed that VAT would continue to be recoverable for contracts awarded up to 1 December 1989.

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mr. Rifkind: My Department spent £60,173 on official hospitality in 1989-90.

British Rail

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last discussed with Sir Bob Reid the improvement of British Rail services between Glasgow and London; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend and I meet the chairman and other board members and senior management of British Rail and ScotRail from time to time. Discussions at such meetings normally cover a wide range of topics concerning rail services in Scotland and between Scotland and the rest of the United Kingdom.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people living abroad applied to be included on the 1991 register of electors which has a qualifying date of 10 October 1990 in each parliamentary constituency in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the number of applicants from overseas to be included in the 1991 register of electors is not held centrally. The number of overseas electors included in the 1991 register will become known after the register is finalised in February next year and I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the information in the Library as soon as it becomes available.

Scrapie

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Truro (Mr. Taylor), Official Report, 24 July, column 221, what aspects of the scrapie programme initiated under the direction of W. B. Martin were subsequently accepted for publication.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The research in question was mainly concerned with the way in which various strains of scrapie agent interact with the host animal. Some work on natural transmissions of infection and the pathology of scrapie in sheep was also done. About 20 scientific publications resulted, the majority in Nature and the Journal of Comparative Pathology.

Child Care Law Review

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to publish the report of the child care law review.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have today published the report of the child care law review and have placed copies in the Library. The report represents a thorough examination of the law which affects arrangements for protecting children at risk and also for caring for children and families in need. I have invited a wide range of organisations to let me have their comments on the recommendations by 14 December.

Low Pay

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will publish in the Official Report statistics for low pay in the Scottish Borders, using samples taken in the Borders;

(2) if he will publish separate low pay statistics for the Scottish Borders, Dumfries and Galloway and the Highlands and Islands regions.

Mr. Rifkind: As there is no accepted definition of low pay no such figures are available.

Road System Teams

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the units or project teams responsible for the road system in Scotland, their addresses, directors and deputy directors, and the last prior professional appointment of those directors.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 18 October 1990]: I have nothing to add to my answer to the hon. Member on 26 July.

WALES

Secure Accommodation

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the legal status and type of immediately preceding placement for each admission to secure accommodation for each of the years 1975, 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989 according to the age and sex of young persons so accommodated (a) in respect of each such admission to a unit in Wales and (b) in respect of placements outside Wales from each Welsh local authority area.

Mr. Grist: The information is not collected centrally.

Sewage Outfalls

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what regular tests are undertaken on the sewage outfall into the Menai straits from Pen Rhos Garnedd; on how many occasions those tests were undertaken in each of the past three years; and what results were obtained on each occasion.

Mr. Grist: The National Rivers Authority is responsible for monitoring the discharge. Prior to 1 September 1989, monitoring was undertaken by the Welsh water authority. The results are kept on a public register maintained by the NRA.

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mr. David Hunt: The amount spent on official hospitality in 1989-90 was £38,397·87.

Land Sales

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he received a letter from the right hon. Member for Swansea, West requesting a meeting to discuss the future of the Llywn Mawr site in Swansea; how many telephone calls his office has received requesting the setting of a date for such a meeting; and when he anticipates that a reply will be sent.

Mr. David Hunt: I shall be writing to the right hon. Gentleman.

HEALTH

Hospital Security

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has given to health authorities on security at hospitals.

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions have taken place with the hospital authorities about the security arrangements at national health service hospitals; whether any working party exists to study these problems; and whether any circulars have been issued laying down standards of security within the hospital service.

Mr. Dorrell: Security arrangements at health service premises are the responsibility of local managers. To assist them in the difficult task of providing proper security arrangements the National Association of Health Authorities published a security manual for the national health service in December 1984, which the Department commended to health authorities as an invaluable source of advice.

The manual includes practical guidance on the development of a comprehensive security policy, appointment of security staff, the security of patients, staff and property, the prevention of trespass and intruder detection.

Electromagnetic Radiation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for HSealth if he will obtain a copy of the report published by the United States Environmental Protection Agency regarding public health and exposure to electromagnetic radiation for his departmental library.

Mr. Dorrell: Yes, though I understand that the report in question will not be published until the end of this month.

Health Authorities

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice is given for local health authorities to advise clients about the possibility of earlier operations and treatment for hip replacements or other ailments in other local health authorities.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Health authorities are encouraged to make available to local general practitioners, and to those in neighbouring areas, information about waiting times in their hospitals. The appropriate nature and spread of such information depends upon the specialty and upon the circumstances of the area in question and is left to the judgment of the authorities concerned, in consultation with GPs. Such information is widely found to be helpful by GPs and patients alike.

Health Service, Hampstead

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average general practitioner list size in Hampstead health authority in 1984 and in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: At 1 October 1984, the average list size of general practitioners in Camden and Islington family health services authority's area was 2,053. At 1 October 1989 (the latest year for which figures are available) the figure was 1,865. Figures are not available for the Hampstead area alone.

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nurses and midwives, (b) hospital doctors, (c) general practitioners, (d) general practitioners' support staff and (e) dentists were employed by Hampstead health authority in 1984 and in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dorrell: The information which is available is shown in the table.

Hampstead health authority

	September 1984	September 1989
Nurses and midwifery staff[1]	2,191·6	[3]2,188·9
Hospital/community medical staff[1]	277·5	270·8
Hospital/community dental staff[1]	5·4	6·2

Camden and Islington family health services authority

	October 1984	October 1989
General medical practitioners[2]	194	209
General medical practitioners' support staff[1]	159·8	231·1
General dental practitioners[2]	209	195

[1] Whole-time equivalent.
[2] Numbers.
[3] Provisional.
Note: Figures for numbers of general medical and dental practitioners are not available for the Hampstead health authority area alone. Family doctors and dentists are not employed but hold contracts with the relevant family health services authority.

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) in-patients, (b) out-patients and (c) day cases were treated by Hampstead health authority in 1984 and the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is as follows:

	1984	1989-90
Finished in-patient episodes	31,100	31,200
Day case admissions	2,500	2,500
New out-patients	41,900	44,600
Total out-patient attendances	205,300	201,400

Secure Accommodation

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the legal status and type of immediately preceding placement for each admission to secure accommodation for each of the years 1975, 1980, 1985, 1987, 1988 and 1989 according to the age and sex of young persons so accommodated.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mr. Dorrell: Approximately £147,000.

Outdoor Catering

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce codes of practice governing outdoor catering activities based upon the guidance notes prepared by the Institution of Environmental Health Officers, the National Outdoor Events Association and the Mobile and Outdoor Catering Association.

Mr. Dorrell: The Government wish to encourage self-regulation in the catering industry. I am therefore pleased that the National Outdoor Events Association and the Mobile and Outdoor Catering Association are promoting the use of the Institution of Environmental Health Officers' guidelines by their members.

Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a further statement about the future of the Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research.

Mr. Dorrell: I have nothing to add to the reply that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 23 July at column 79.

School Milk

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all those local education authorities (a) that have been given permission to provide free milk for under-fives under the Welfare Foods Regulations 1988 and (b) whose applications are under consideration.

Mr. Dorrell: To date, the following 44 local education authorities have been approved to participate in the scheme to receive reimbursement of costs for the supply of milk to children under five in nursery schools and classes:

Avon county council
Bedfordshire county council
London borough of Bexley
London borough of Brent
Metropolitan borough of Calderdale
Cleveland county council
Cornwall county council
Cumbria county council
Derbyshire county council
Doncaster metropolitan council
Dudley metropolitan borough council
Durham county council
Gateshead metropolitan borough council
London borough of Greenwich
London borough of Hackney
London borough of Hammersmith and Fulham
London borough of Hounslow
Humberside county council
London borough of Islington
Kirklees metropolitan council
London borough of Lambeth
Leicestershire county council
London borough of Lewisham
Liverpool city council
City of London education authority
Manchester city council
London borough of Merton
City of Newcastle upon Tyne
North Tyneside council
North Yorkshire county council
Oldham metropolitan borough council
Rotherham metropolitan borough council
St. Helen's metropolitan borough council
Sandwell metropolitan borough council
Metropolitan district of Sefton
Sheffield city council
Solihull metropolitan borough council
London borough of Southwark
Staffordshire county council
London borough of Sutton
Wakefield metropolitan district council
Wandsworth borough council
Westminster city council
Metropolitan borough of Wirral

In addition, the following 10 local education authorities have been issued with the appropriate forms for registration under the regulations, and their responses are awaited:

Birmingham city council
Cambridgeshire county council
Devon county council
East Sussex county council
Hereford and Worcester county council
Hertfordshire county council
Kent county council
Oxfordshire county council
Metropolitan borough of Stockport
Wolverhampton metropolitan borough council

Old People's Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department has given to the London borough of Bromley regarding the privatisation of the management of four aged persons homes.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No specific advice on the homes in question has been sought by or given to the London borough of Bromley.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Budget Consideration

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has any proposals for enhancing and extending the consideration of the Budget by the House.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has no present plans to alter the Budget procedures.

Charities

Mr. Michael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his best estimate of the additional money that would have to be found by charitable organisations in England and Wales in the event of harmonisation of value added tax leading to the removal of zero rating at present in force, in order for such organisations to avoid a reduction in their work or grant-giving.

Mr. Ryder: The Government estimate that United Kingdom charitable organisations would pay £300 million to 400 million per year in additional VAT if the current zero rates were removed and replaced by significantly higher rates of VAT in the single market. But the Government will oppose any tax approximation proposals which further restricts our ability to use zero rates.

Mr. Harris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on behalf of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution for the continuation of value added zero tax rating on lifeboats; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 18 October 1990]: My right hon. Friend has received more than 100 representations on behalf of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution. The Government are very conscious of the dedication and heroic service of this organisation and see no reasons why the existing zero rates for this and other charitable bodies —and all other United Kingdom zero rates—should not remain after 1992. EC decisions in tax matters require the unanimous agreement of all member states and there is no question of any unwelcome proposals on VAT approximation being forced upon us.

Bank Directors

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether a Treasury Minister, or person appointed by the Government, or any Treasury official had any contact with any member of the board of either Barclays bank, Barclays de Zoete Wedd, Salomon Brothers specifically, or any other bank, in the 36 hours prior to the announcement of ERM entry on 5 October; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Treasury Ministers, persons appointed by the Government, and Treasury officials have frequent contacts with board members of British and overseas banks. We do not generally publish details of such meetings. I have no evidence that any such contacts led to premature disclosure of the Government's intention that sterling should join the exchange rate mechanism. If the hon. Member has any such evidence, he should present it forthwith to the appropriate authorities.

Social Car Schemes

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many volunteers driving over 4,000 miles per year for social car schemes are covered by the fixed profit car scheme in respect of mileage rates.

Mr. Maude: The present fixed profit car scheme arrangements for taxing any profit element in mileage allowances apply only to allowances received by employees and officeholders who use their own cars in the course of their work.

EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the closure of the YT scheme by the Nottingham information technology centre.

Mr. Jackson: The decision to close the YT scheme at Nottingham ITEC was taken by the organisations which run the ITEC, after discussions with local staff of my Department. All trainees affected by the closure have been found suitable training places with other local youth training providers.

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mr. Jackson: The total expenditure by the Department of Employment group on official hospitality in 1989-90 was £97,000.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he intends making changes in the way he answers parliamentary questions on labour market statistics.

Mr. Howard: From the start of next Session, any parliamentary question asking for more than 10 figures, and for which all of the required statistical data are on the NOMIS database, will be answered by referring the questioner to NOMIS—which can be accessed on-line by House of Commons Library staff. It seems sensible for the established principle of referring to published sources to be extended to cover the computer databases on which some of the more detailed labour market statistics are held. It is good resource management to refer to information which is publicly available when the effort has already been made to provide an easily accessible, up-to-date and accurate computer database. I know that NOMIS fully meets these criteria, not least by the use that Members of Parliament have made of it since access from the Library was introduced in July 1984.

Pensions

Mr. Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the increase in money terms and in real terms in the state retirement pension since 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The state retirement pension rose in money terms from £23·30 in November 1979 to £46·90 in April 1990. The average real value of the basic state pension was over 5 per cent. higher during the 12 months to April 1990 than it was in the 12 months to November 1979.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what monthly retail prices index figure will be used to calculate the increase in retirement pensions next April; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The figure for September 1990 will be used.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those countries where retired British citizens receive annual increases in retirement pensions and indicate those where arrangements for increase have been made since 1988 and those where discussions about such increases are currently taking place.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Under the European Community regulations, annual pension increases are paid to British pensioners in all the member states.

Outside the European Community, reciprocal arrangements enable increases in pensions to be paid to our pensioners in the following countries:

Austria
Bermuda
Cyprus
Finland
Guernsey
Iceland
Isle of Man
Israel
Jamaica
Jersey
Malta
Mauritius
Philippines
Sweden
Switzerland
Turkey
United States of America
Yugoslavia.

Increases are also payable to pensioners living in Sark. This is by virtue of a separate provision in the Social Security Benefits (Persons Abroad) Regulations 1975.

Since 1988 the payment of pension increases overseas has been extended through a revised convention with Sweden, effective from 1 May 1988, and a new convention with the Philippines, effective from 1 December 1989.

A revised convention with Norway was signed in Oslo on 19 June 1990 and this is now awaiting ratification. Negotiations are taking place on a new convention with Barbados. Both of these will eventually allow indexation of pensions.

Industrial Injuries

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he plans to take to implement the recommendation made by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council in its report, "Occupational Deafness", Cm. 817 to include work in ships' engine rooms in the list of prescribed occupations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: A further report has been commissioned from the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council on the administration and operation of provision for occupational deafness. This will be published very shortly. The council has asked the Department to evaluate the feasibility of the report's recommendations within six months. It will then be easier to determine whether there are orderly ways in which to extend provision for this disease to the industries and occupations proposed in Cm. 817.

Residential Care

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the likely additional costs to his departmental budget during the current financial year of local authorities passing the management or ownership of residential care homes into the hands of not-for-profit trusts, charitable organisations, housing associations or private companies.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information on the number of people living in transferred homes and claiming income support is not available centrally. Accordingly, it is not possible to make an estimate of any additional costs that may have arisen.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is taking in response to the conclusions of recent surveys into the funding of the costs of private residential care undertaken by the Association of Metropolitan Authorities, the care management advisory services and the National Federation of Housing Associations, copies of which have been sent to his Department.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State takes account of the numerous submissions that he receives from interested bodies and individuals in his annual review of the income support limits for people in independent homes. He will be making an announcement about his review shortly.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security why his Department intends not to make public the conclusions of the Price Waterhouse survey on the costs of residential care.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has given an undertaking to the Social Services Committee of the House that the conclusions of the survey would be published. He will make a statement shortly.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any proposals to alter the existing arrangements for the payment of means-tested benefits to residents of care homes which have been transferred out of the ownership of local authorities.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have made no such proposals.

Anchor Housing Association

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions his Department has had with the Anchor housing association regarding the association's decision to abandon most of its housing-with-care building programme.

Mr. Scott: None. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State has arranged to meet in November with representatives of the National Federation of Housing Associations, of which organisation Anchor housing association is a member.

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The total expenditure on official hospitality by the Department of Social Security in 1989-90 was £25,477.

War Widows

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will consider the payment of a war widows' pension to widows of ex-service men who die as a result of disease or injury contracted during the war.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: A war widows' pension is awarded where the husband's death is due to or substantially hastened by service in the armed forces, irrespective of whether service was during war or peacetime.

Community Care Grants

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of applications for community care grants were refused in 1988-89, 1989-90 and the first half of 1990-91 in the London borough of Newham.

Mr. Scott: The table shows the percentage of community care grant applications refused in the local offices at Canning Town, Plaistow and Woodgrange Park in the periods April 1988 to March 1989, April 1989 to March 1990 and April 1990 to September 1990.

Percentage of Community Care Grant applications refused

	1988-89	1989-90	1990
Canning Town	13	49	64
Plaistow	53	59	57
Woodgrange Park	42	52	56

Family Credit

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families in the London borough of Newham are currently in receipt of family credit; and what percentage that is of families estimated to be eligible.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest available information is that there are 1,025 families receiving family credit who were living in the London borough of Newham at the time their awards were made. Information about the total number of families eligible for family credit can be obtained only for Great Britain as a whole, and only retrospectively, from family expenditure survey data.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Huggy Bear

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Huggy Bear safety information project will be visiting the Isle of Wight.

Mr. Redwood: No. The venues for the Huggy Bear toy safety tour were chosen because the local authority had asked for the visit and local activities were planned to derive the most benefit out of the publicity generated by this campaign. There were no requests from the Isle of Wight, although leaflets and posters have been sent to Medina borough council and the trading standards department in Newport.

Scotch Whisky

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give details of the action he has taken concerning the Korean Government's recent announcement of proposed taxation changes which will place Scotch whisky at a disadvantage as against Korean whisky.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have made formal representations to the Korean Government that the liquor tax rate on Scotch whisky, even after the proposed reduction to 150 per cent. in 1991, remains far too high and continues to restrict access to the Korean market for Scotch whisky producers. We will continue to take every opportunity, both bilaterally and through the European Community, to persuade the Korean Government to take the necessary action to end this and other discriminatory measures which hold back the sales of Scotch whisky and other competitive United Kingdom products in Korea. We will continue to argue strongly that such measures are inconsistent with Korea's present status as an important exporting nation and major beneficiary of open world markets.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations have been made by the Government about other countries' taxation policies in relation to Scotch whisky.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Government keep in close touch with Scotch whisky producers, through the Scotch Whisky Association, regarding the taxation of Scotch whisky in export markets. Every suitable opportunity is taken to raise matters of concern in this area with the Governments concerned, both bilaterally and through the Community.

Bank Directors

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will list on what occasions Ministers in his Department met directors or non-executive directors of banks between Monday 1 October and 10 am on Thursday 4 October inclusive.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether a member of his Department or any official of his Department had any contact with any member of the board of either Barclays bank, Barclays de Zoete Wedd, Salomon Brothers specifically, or any other bank, in the 36 hours prior to the announcement of ERM entry on 5 October; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: DTI Ministers, persons appointed by the Government, and DTI officials have frequent contacts with board members of British and overseas banks. The Department does not generally publish details of such meetings. I have no evidence that any such contacts led to premature disclosure of the Government's intention that sterling should join the exchange rate mechanism. If the hon. Member has any such evidence, he should present it forthwith to the appropriate authorities.

Wild Birds

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to ban the import of wild birds into the United Kingdom for the purpose of being kept as domestic pets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 17 October 1990]: The import of wild birds is already strictly controlled by conservation legislation. The United Kingdom is party to the convention on international trade in endangered species (CITES) under which trade in certain species is closely monitored whilst commercial trade in the most endangered species is completely banned. The import of many non-CITES species into the United Kingdom is also controlled under the Endangered Species (Import and Export) Act 1976.

I understand that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is currently looking at ways of improving and extending the controls on the import of species which are unlikely to survive in captivity.

Redundant Military Equipment

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has received any inquiries from Germany or the Soviet Union for assistance, through his environmental management options scheme (DEMOS), for the conversion of redundant tanks and other military equipment to commercial reuse; and if he will make a statement on the availability of DEMOS support finance to assist eastern European states to modernise industrial facilities and to dispose of toxic materials.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 18 October 1990]: DEMOS is a national programme designed to encourage United Kingdom businesses to adopt environmental best practice and improved technology. Assistance for eastern Europe is provided in other ways; I refer to the answer given on 3 May by my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Forth).

Departmental Environmental Programme

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when his Department's environmental programme was established; how many civil servants are devoted to supporting the programme; what achievements have been made to date by the programme; how many individual or business callers have contacted his Department's free advice environmental helpline since its inception; what proportion of inquirers have not received the assistance requested; and if he will publish the freefone number of the environmental helpline in the Official Report.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 18 October 1990]: DTI's environmental programme was launched in May 1989. Forty-four officials are directly employed within the Department's environment unit to support the programme.

The environment unit is involved in a wide range of activities to communicate with business about the implications of a wide range of environmental issues such as recycling, waste minimisation, CFCs, environmental labelling and environmental regulation whether domestic or international.

In recognition of the importance of technological development to meet the environmental challenge two new schemes—ETIS (environmental technology innovation scheme) and DEMOS (DTI environmental management options scheme) have recently been launched (ETIS in conjunction with the Department of the Environment).

The EUROENVIRON programme, a pan-European support programme launched in January, has generated 37 United Kingdom applications for consideration.

Since its introduction in May 1989 the DTI environmental helpline had received 6,221 calls up to 12 October 1990. In all cases inquirers have been helped as far as possible. Where appropriate inquirers have been directed to alternative sources of help. The number for the environmental helpline is 0800 585794. The helpline can also provide a range of DTI brochures on environmental issues.

DEFENCE

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The amount spent on official hospitality by the Ministry of Defence in 1989-90 totalled some £3·729 million. This included expenditure by the Ministry of Defence itself, by formations and establishments of the armed forces at home and abroad, and by individual officers occupying command and international appointments for which entertainment allowances are payable.

Normalair Garrett

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications have taken place with the management of Normalair Garrett Ltd. regarding the closure of its plant in Milton Keynes.

Mr. Alan Clark: We have been in contact with the management of Normalair Garrett about the implications for the Ministry of Defence of their plans to restructure the company. The decision to close the Milton Keynes plant was a commercial matter for the company.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications have taken place regarding the "Options for Change" study with the management of Normalair Garrett Ltd.

Mr. Alan Clark: There has been no specific communication with Normalair Garrett about "Options for Change".

Procurement

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effect the recent freeze on procurement expenditure has had on orders for aircraft and hydraulic systems.

Mr. Alan Clark: Measures introduced by the Ministry of Defence on 11 May to impose a temporary restraint on new financial commitments have not led to any cancellations of contracts for aircraft hydraulic systems.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment was made by the "Options for Change" study of the need to ensure the maintenance of an industrial capacity for the manufacture of hydraulic systems for helicopters and aircraft.

Mr. Alan Clark: None. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence outlined to the House on 25 July broad proposals for change in the size and shape of our defence effort. Further detailed work will include consultation with the defence industry over the implications of the proposals for the future equipment programme.

Service Men (Gulf)

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider making special payments for those currently serving in the Gulf, along the lines of the special gratuities paid to British service men serving under the United Nations auspices in Korea.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Martin) on Thursday 18 October 1990.

Chatham Dockyard

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations have taken place with local authorities regarding nuclear waste at Chatham dockyard.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle [holding answer 17 October 1990]: Gillingham borough council has been kept informed of MOD's plans regarding radioactive waste at the former Chatham dockyard.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether nuclear waste was ever (a) stored or (b) handled at Chatham dockyard when it was run by the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle [holding answer 17 October 1990]: Yes, radioactive waste was stored and handled at the former Chatham dockyard.

Radiation Exposure

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what information he has on studies of the risks to his Department's personnel of exposure to nuclear radiation that have been carried out in the last 10 years;

(2) what studies are currently being undertaken by his Department to reassess the risks to his Department's personnel of exposure to nuclear radiation;

(3) what current studies to reassess the risks to his Department's personnel of exposure to nuclear radiation have been commissioned or are being funded by his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle [holding answer 17 October 1990]: No studies are currently being undertaken, commissioned or funded by MOD. Any study confined to MOD would most probably lack sufficient numbers to provide the necessary statistical power. MOD is committed to contributing to national studies by providing dosimetry information to larger databases such as the national register of radiation workers and to Professor Kinlen's study into incidence of childhood leukaemia in children of exposed workers in Scotland.

Nuclear-powered Submarines

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce his decision on the disposal method for nuclear-powered submarines.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle [holding answer 17 October 1990]: The matter is under active consideration and an announcement will be made as soon as a conclusion is reached.

ENERGY

Oil and Petrol

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what was the level of petrol consumption in August and September 1990 and August and September 1989;

(2) what was the level of oil stocks and petroleum products, respectively, in each month in 1989 and 1990.

Mr. Wakeham: The level of deliveries of petrol for consumption in August and September 1989 and 1990 and the level of oil stocks and petroleum products respectively in each month in 1989 and 1990 are set out in the tables.

This information is routinely published in "Energy Trends", copies of which are placed in the Library of the House.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) on what date the budget for advertising the flotation of the electricity distribution companies was agreed;

(2) what is the budget for advertising the flotation of the electricity distribution companies; and what proportion is to be spent on (a) television, (b) radio, (c) newspaper and (d) other advertising.

Mr. Wakeham: Total costs will depend on the media rates achieved and advertising volumes. The full costs of the privatisation, including advertising costs, will be made available to Parliament in the normal way.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the dates, venues and estimated cost of the electricity privatisation roadshow.

Mr. Wakeham: The dates and venues of the proposed United Kingdom roadshows for the regional electricity companies share offers are:

	Venue
5 November 1990	Plymouth, London
6 November 1990	Bristol, Ipswich, Swansea
7 November 1990	Bournemouth, Edinburgh
8 November 1990	Cardiff, Nottingham, Peterborough
9 November 1990	Leicester, Sheffield, Southhampton
12 November 1990	Brighton, Glasgow, Stoke on Trent
13 November 1990	Ashford, Birmingham, Preston
14 November 1990	Aberystwyth, Belfast, Middlesbrough
15 November 1990	Manchester, Liverpool
16 November 1990	Newcastle
19 November 1990	Leeds

Provisional plans for overseas roadshows include seven in Europe, eight in north America and two in Japan; final decisions on the dates and location of overseas roadshows will be taken shortly.

It is too early to make a reliable forecast of the cost of the roadshow programme for the 12 regional electricity companies share offers until these and other decisions have been taken. The full costs of privatisation, including the roadshow programme, will be made available to Parliament in the normal way.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his current estimate of the total brokers' fees for the flotation of the electricity distribution companies.

Mr. Wakeham: The Department's contract with brokers is commercially sensitive and it is the Government's established practise not to reveal such information. The full costs of the privatisation will be made available to Parliament in the normal way.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what companies have been or are advising him on electricity privatisation in addition to those listed in his answer to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras on 5 February, Official Report, columns 454-58.

Mr. Wakeham: Since I last replied on 2 July 1990 at columns 429-30, the following additional companies have been appointed to advise the Department on electricity privatisation:

Henry Butcher—Property valuers
Lloyd Northover—Design consultants
J. Henry Schroder Wagg—Possible trade sale of PowerGen
J. Chiene—Pricing adviser
J. Henry Schroder Wagg—Lead underwriter

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mr. Wakeham: The Department spent £46,000 on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on the number of nuclear accidents reported in the last 12 months to the World Association of Nuclear Operators; and how many originated from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Baldry: The Government do not have this information. It is a matter for the World Association of Nuclear Operators, which has an office in London.

Piper Alpha

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has received the report into Piper Alpha chaired by Lord Cullen; and when he expects this to be published.

Mr. Wakeham: The report is expected shortly. I shall inform the hon. Member when it has been received.

Electricity Companies (Debt)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will list for each electricity company the debt agreed with his Department, the date on which it was agreed and the repayment date;

(2) what is the total debt he has agreed with the electricity companies.

Mr. Wakeham: I have agreed debt totalling £2,815 million for the 12 regional electricity companies and the National Grid Company. The details will be included in the forthcoming prospectus when shares in the 12 regional electricity companies are offered for sale. I have agreed debt of £450 million and £270 million for National Power and PowerGen respectively.

Tidal Power

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the invention by Richard Lucy designed to harness tidal power; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: An outline suggestion for extracting energy from the movement of tides has been received from Mr. Richard Lucy. It is now the subject of an assessment by an independent engineering consultancy on behalf of my Department. The results of the assessment will be communicated to Mr. Lucy in due course.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Non-proliferation Treaty

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the comments of the United Kingdom delegation at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference concerning (a) the export of civil nuclear technology and (b) peacetime nuclear explosions.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our comments at the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference on the export of civil nuclear technology were contained in the speech which I gave to the conference on 22 August. I made it clear that we are vigilant in implementing internationally accepted nuclear export controls and do not co-operate with non-nuclear weapon states in ways which might assist the development of nuclear weapons.

On peaceful nuclear explosions, the conference achieved consensus, supported by the United Kingdom, as follows:

"1. The Conference confirms that, if the potential for the safe and peaceful application of nuclear explosions were demonstrated and were made available to non nuclear-weapon States Party to the Treaty in accordance with article V, the IAEA would be the appropriate international body through which such applications could be made available.

2. The Conference notes that the potential for the peaceful applications of nuclear explosions has not been sufficiently demonstrated and that no requests for services related to the peaceful applications of nuclear explosions have been received by the IAEA since the Treaty entered into force. The Conference further notes that no nuclear-weapon State has an active programme for the peaceful application of nuclear explosions."

Iraq

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the sources of funds and the amounts available to those countries whose economies are most likely to suffer as a result of the mandatory sanctions against Iraq.

Mr. Waldegrave: Financial support will be available from the IMF and World bank for countries seeking to adjust their economies to the effects of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and the consequent application of UN sanctions against Iraq. For Egypt, Jordan and Turkey, the countries most directly affected, special efforts are being made within the framework of the recently established Gulf crisis financial co-ordination group. Contributions so far announced include 1·5 billion ecu ($2 billion) agreed by the EC and its member states, $2 billion from Japan, and substantial sums from Saudi Arabia, the UAE and Kuwait.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the impact of the United Nations sanctions upon the economy of Iraq.

Mr. Waldegrave: Available information indicates some deterioration in Iraq's industrial capacity. This is believed to be caused by increasing shortages of foreign-sourced parts, industrial raw materials, manpower and know-how. The shortage of spare parts seems likely to lead in the longer term to problems in the oil industry and refining sector. There are also strong indications that the financial freeze on Iraqi assets overseas is proving generally effective.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his current estimate of the number of (a) British hostages and (b) British nationals in (i) Iraq and (ii) Kuwait.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our estimate of the number of British nationals held by the Iraqis at special sites is:

Iraq 304
Kuwait 72

Our estimate of the total number of British nationals (including those held at special sites) is:

Iraq 800
Kuwait 650

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries whose economies are assessed to be most likely to suffer as a result of the mandatory sanctions against Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The economies of Egypt, Jordan and Turkey have been most directly affected by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and the consequent application of United Nations sanctions against Iraq. The best way to help these and other countries damaged by the Gulf crisis is to bring an end to the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait and restore stability to the region.

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent by his Department on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The estimated expenditure on official hospitality by both wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the financial year 1989-90 is £6·4 million.

This figure includes the grant in aid to the Government hospitality fund which meets the costs of ministerial entertainment and guest of Government visits for all Government Departments.

Spain (Transport Dispute)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance he is giving to British lorry drivers; what representations he has made to the appropriate authorities; and what advice he is offering to British firms proposing to send goods by road to or through Spain.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Consular officers have visited problem areas to check welfare and give advice and financial assistance where needed. We have asked the Spanish central and regional authorities to ensure the safety of British lorry crews and their vehicles.

Our advice is that road transport to and through Spain should be avoided until the dispute is resolved. Vehicles in transit should wait well short of the border.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the effects of the Spanish transport operators' industrial action on British trade with Spain.

Mr. Garel-Jones: It is too early to be able to quantify the effects. Our immediate concern is to ensure that British drivers caught up in the dispute are given all available consular help and Spanish police protection. We very much hope that the industrial dispute will soon be resolved and that all the British lorries involved will be free to go.

Kuwait

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 15 October to the right hon. Member for Swansea, West, what proposals he has for the disposal of the remaining £4,136 received by his Department from the telephone system set up for families to make inquiries about relatives trapped in Iraq and Kuwait.

Mr. Waldegrave: The remaining £4,136 will be put towards further rent payments for the Gulf support group if needed, or towards another good cause connected with the Gulf crisis.

Pakistan

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether British representatives will be observing elections in Pakistan due on 24 October; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Official British coverage of the elections will be provided by our diplomatic staff in Pakistan.

Visas

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the demand, at the latest available date, for visas to visit the United Kingdom from eastern Europe; and what was the demand on the same date a year earlier.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The information requested is as follows:

Visa applications received for eight months January to August

Country	1990	1989
Bulgaria	5,020	3,887
Czechoslovakia[1]	17,996	11,458
Hungary[1]	17,606	15,109
Poland	48,553	47,387
Romania[2]	6,450	1,899
Soviet Union	31,020	18,013

[1] Figures are for period January to July. Visas were abolished for these countries on 1 October 1990.

[2] Figures for 1990 are an estimate. Final figures for August not available but variation will be less than 2 per cent.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EC Food

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest estimate of the surpluses of various food products and produce in the EEC in the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: A note setting out the volume of EC intervention stocks of agricultural commodities is deposited in the Library of the House and is updated monthly.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make it his policy to ensure visits by Ministry officials to slaughterhouses are henceforth carried out unannounced;

(2) what percentage of visits to slaughterhouses in 1989 by Ministry officials were (a) arranged in advance with the management of the slaughterhouses and (b) carried out without prior warning; what was the total number of visits to slaughterhouses in 1989 by Ministry officials; and if he will give a breakdown by (i) county and (ii) type of slaughterhouses.

Mr. Curry: Local authorities (district councils) are responsible for the enforcement of hygiene and welfare legislation in all slaughterhouses. Visits by Ministry veterinary officers are for the purpose of giving advice to the local authorities on standards, and are made in the company of local authority personnel. It is usual for visits to be arranged with the business concerned as their purpose is best served if representatives of plant management are present. Unannounced visits may be made in response to reports of problems. In 1988-89 the manpower involved was 45 man years.

Information in the form requested by the hon. Member is not available.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of knackermen and slaughterhouses, to discuss working conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I and my officials have regular meetings with representatives of knackermen and slaughterhouses to discuss a wide range of issues. However, working conditions in knackers yards and slaughterhouses are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

Ducks

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consideration he has given to the value of the introduction of ducks to areas presently occupied solely by cows and pigs as a means of insect control; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I have given no consideration to this proposal and therefore have no statement to make.

Agricultural Biocides

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total expenditure on agricultural biocides in (i) 1970, (ii) 1980 and (iii) 1989 at 1989 prices; what was the total acreage subject to biocide treatment in (i) 1970, (ii) 1980 and (iii) 1989; what was the total weight of concentrate biocides used in the United Kingdom in (i) 1970, (ii) 1980 and (iii) 1989.

Mr. Curry: The information that the hon. Member requests is as follows:

Estimated pesticide usage in England and Wales 1970-89
(Total expenditure figures relate to United Kingdom)

	Total expenditure at 1989 prices £ million	Total area of crops (hectares)	Total pesticide treated area[3] (hectares)	Total active ingredients applied[4] (tonnes)
1970	[1]142	[2]5,631,000	12,783,000	22,062
1980	244	10,511,000	26,012,000	35,533
1989	[5]440	10,543,000	26,791,000	29,374

[1] Earliest available data on comparable price basis is for 1973.
[2] Excluding permanent grass.
[3] Treated area is the gross area treated with a pesticide, including all repeated applications.
[4] Tonnage of active ingredients applied not tonnage of pesticide products.
[5] Provisional.

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much was spent by his Ministry on official hospitality in 1989-90.

Mr. Curry: The provisional figure for expenditure in 1989-90 is £62,265.

Poultry

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy in respect of the fitting of red-coloured contact lenses to poultry to prevent feather-pecking.

Mr. Curry: The Farm Animal Welfare Council has been asked to investigate this practice and report on any welfare implications.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he takes to ensure turkey slaughtering is carried out without causing suffering to the bird; and if he has any plans to amend legislation on poultry slaughter to increase the effectiveness of animal welfare measures.

Mr. Curry: The welfare of turkeys at slaughter is protected by the Slaughter of Poultry Act 1967 and the Slaughter of Poultry (Humane Conditions) Regulations 1984, as amended, made under it. Local authorities at district council level are responsible for enforcement, and Ministry veterinary officers also visit slaughterhouses to check that welfare requirements are being met. The Ministry funds research into various aspects of the welfare of poultry at slaughter. As results become available they are and will be used, as appropriate, to update regulations or codes of practice.

We plan to add to the legislation shortly by making new regulations on the licensing of poultry slaughtermen and the supervision of welfare in poultry slaughterhouses, issuing directions to local authorities and making a code of practice on poultry slaughter. These measures will implement Farm Animal Welfare Council recommendations.

Mince Products

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will establish a common standard of description to be applied to mince products.

Mr. Curry: I have no immediate plans to introduce controls on mince. The European Commission is likely to make proposals for the quantitative declaration of characterising ingredients of foodstuffs (for example, lean meat in mince) and the possible extension to domestic production of the existing directive on minced meat.

Pesticides

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to increase public access to information on pesticides; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The United Kingdom leads the world in the amount of information released on pesticides, including detailed scientific evaluations, the data underlying regulatory decisions and results of environmental monitoring and usage. Results of analysis of pesticide residues are now being published annually in full; the first such report of the working party on pesticide residues was published on 27 September.

Notwithstanding the amount of information already available, we have asked officials to review the current arrangements and consultation with interested parties will take place shortly.

Genetically Engineered Animals

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research (a) his Department has instigated and (b) his Department is aware of into the production of genetically engineered pigs, containing extra hormone genes; what is his policy in repect of genetically engineered animals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The Department is not funding any work on the production of genetically engineered pigs. However, we are aware that basic research in this area is being conducted in a number of laboratories around the world and the results are being closely monitored. The Department is responsible for ensuring that the same high standards of welfare apply to all farm animals, regardless of their origin.

Salmon

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is delaying the publication of the report of the review of salmon fishing on the east coast of Scotland and the north-east coast of England.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to publish the review of drift net fishing under section 39 of the Salmon Act 1986.

Mr. Curry: I refer my right hon. and learned Friend to my reply to the question of 16 October. There is no specific time limit for the presentation of the results of the review to Parliament. However, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I hope to be ready to do this soon.

Water (Agricultural Use)

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with the National Rivers Authority about the need to review the system of water abstraction licences for agricultural purposes.

Mr. Curry: Our officials have had several meetings with the National Rivers Authority, and consultations with the NFU and CLA, to discuss the problems of this year's drought and the consequent ban on spray irrigation in certain areas. The aim is to improve farmers' awareness of the importance of conserving supplies and to provide advice on ways of achieving this.

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage farmers to increase impounded water supplies for irrigation purposes.

Mr. Curry: Investment in impounded water supplies is a decision for the farmers concerned. Only they can make the commercial judgment as to whether the benefits from increased yield and security of production during periods of dry weather justify the investment costs.

Small Farms

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals his Department has to assist small farms.

Mr. Gummer: The Government do not in general favour policies intended to discriminate in favour of small farms. This would run counter to the Government's aim of making agriculture more market orientated and penalise parts of the Community such as the United Kingdom which have competitive farm structures.

Condemned Meat

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has received any representations about the sale of condemned meat in butchers' shops and supermarkets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave on 18 October to the hon. Member for Barnsley, East (Mr. Patchett).

Set-aside

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received on the operation in the United Kingdom of the European Community set-aside scheme.

Mr. Curry: Following a number of representations on the operation of the set-aside scheme to date, my right hon. Friends and I reviewed the scheme and introduced a number of changes of benefit to the environment including a requirement to cut the plant cover twice a year and a limited form of grazed fallow.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the National Farmers Union to discuss bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave on 18 October to the hon. Member for Vale of Glamorgan (Mr. Smith).

Farm Incomes

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest information on the trend in farm incomes.

Mr. Gummer: The latest information on aggregate farm incomes relates to last year and was published in "Agriculture in the United Kingdom 1989". Forecasts of incomes in 1990 will be published in the next edition of this report early in the new year.

Organic Food

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the deliberations of the board of the United Kingdom register of organic food standards.

Mr. Gummer: No. It is for the board of UKROFS to decide whether to make statements on its deliberations. I understand that it already does so.

Wild Birds

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations have been made by his Department to airlines regarding the transportation of wild birds into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 17 October 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food wrote personally to airlines on 26 January 1990 to remind them of their duty of care under the Transit of Animals (General) Order 1973, laying particular emphasis on the treatment of wild-caught birds. My hon. Friend urged the need for airlines to adhere, through all the stages of the journey, to standards laid down in the IATA regulations for the transport of live animals by air. My own Department represents the convention on international trade in endangered species of wild fauna and flora at meetings of the International Air Transport Association's live animals board with a view to ensuring that the provisions of the convention relating to the transport and welfare of live animals are taken into account in the preparation and implementation of the IATA live animals regulations.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 177

SESSION 1989–90

23rd July—19th October, 1990

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
